Fourth of July celebration here to last a week

by LYNN ASINOF

The annual week-long Fourth of July celebration in Wheeling will begin Sunday, July 1 with the Wheeling Jaycees parade and a drum and bugle corps competition.

Other activities planned for the week include a six-day carnival sponsored by the Jaycees starting July 3 at the Wickes Furniture Co. parking lot on Dundee Road. The Jaycees also will sponsor a rock concert at Wheeling High School and stage a fireworks display.

Jaycees Pres. Marty Marecek said he expected 1,500 people to participate in the parade, which will begin on McHenry Road at 1:30 p.m. He said eight drum and bugle corps and the Wheeling High School Marching Band will be among the marchers.

OTHER UNITS scheduled to march in the parade include a 50-man state color guard unit and 28-man drill team from the Great Lakes Naval Training Base. The Glenview Naval Air Station also will send a group to participate in the parade.

Marecek said there still is room for other groups who wish to march in the parade. He said persons with floats or antique cars should contact the Jaycees if they wish to participate.

The parade route this year will begin at McHenry Road by Lynn Plaza shopping center. Marchers will proceed east on Dundee Road past the reviewing stand in front of the village hall. The parade will turn south on Wille Street and end at the Walt Whitman School where buses will return the marchers to the shopping center.

The eight drum and bugle corps participating in the parade will compete later in the day at the Wheeling High School stadium. The competition, sponsored by the First Illinois Drum and Bugle Corps, will begin at 7 p.m.

AMONG THE units competing in this year's show are the Blue Stars of LaCrosse, Wis.; the Cavaliers of Chicago; the Bleu Raiders of New Orleans, La.; the Phantom Regiment of Rockford; the Guardsmen of Mount Prospect, and the Vanguard of Miami, Fla.

The Vanguard of Santa Clara, Calif., last year's winners, will also return to defend their championship. Rounding out the evening's entertainment will be an exhibition by the Cavalier Cadets, a beginning training corps whose members range in age from 8 to 13.

Tickets for the competition are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12. Residents can obtain their tickets in advance by calling 537-8678 or at the box office at 5 p.m. the day of the performance.

All proceeds from the show go to support the First Illinois Drum and Bugle Corps. This year funds will be used to finance the corps' color guard's trip to New Orleans for the VFW National Convention competition.

THE Jaycees carnival, featuring rides, games and other amusements, will begin July 3 and run through July 8. The carnival activities will begin at 6 p.m. each evening and end at midnight.

For the first time, the Jaycees have obtained a liquor license to sell beer at the carnival. There also will be a pizza booth for hungry residents.

Marecek said the Jaycees are planning to highlight the carnival activities with special events. He said baseball players from the Chicago professional teams will visit the carnival one evening on a date not yet announced.

On July 3, the Jaycees will also be sponsoring a concert by the rock group "Styx" at Wheeling High School. Tickets are available through Ticketron, and all proceeds will be used to sponsor Jaycees activities.

A fireworks display scheduled for July 4 will be staged from Heritage Park on Wolf Road. Marecek said the display, one of the largest in the area, will begin as soon as it is dark.

FOR THOSE MIDWESTERNERS who have experienced the long and cold winter and the unpredictable "monsoon season," summer becomes the golden time for fun and relaxation. Many of the suburban working people spent their weekend passively lying in lounge chairs in hopes for some sun and long desired moments of peace.

Park upgrading work may begin soon

Wheeling park officials are hoping work will start this summer on improvements at Heritage Park costing an estimated $70,000 to $80,000.

The planned construction will include the addition of shower rooms and lockers, a handball court and remodeling of the park board meeting room.

Park Supt. Dave Phillips said Friday work on the improvements, authorized by park district residents in last December's referendum, will begin as soon as contracts are awarded for the various phases of the project.

The work will be supervised by the firm of McFadden and Everly Ltd. Their fee, Phillips said, will be determined on a percentage of the total cost of the project.

Phillips does not know how long it will take to complete the work at Heritage Park, but added he hopes the outside work will be finished before bad weather begins next fall.

Stereo burglars hit same apartment

For the second time in a month, burglars took more than $700 of stereo equipment from the apartment of Daniel Teague and Burkhard Stein, 284 E. Center St., Wheeling.

Teague reported the burglary after returning from work to find the kitchen door kicked in. Police said missing items included five pairs of headphones valued at $300, $300 in cash, a television valued at $154, a turntable and tuner valued at $325 and assorted bedding, clothes and other stereo equipment.

On May 29, burglars broke into the apartment and took $770 of stereo equipment and $175 in cash, after cooking dinner and eating it in the apartment, police said.

Zoning sought for Wheeling plant

Decision tonight on packaging firm?

A zoning variation allowing Sunnyside Products Inc., a firm that packages flammable liquids, to move to Wheeling will come before the village board for final consideration tonight.

When first proposed, residents voiced strong objections to the plant's relocation in Wheeling, saying it would be a safety hazard to the community. Opposition to the move, however, faded as a result of a meeting between residents and company officials, who explained the plant's operations and safety precautions.

The variation would allow Sunnyside to store highly flammable solvents and oils in underground tanks and to process these liquids from above-ground tanks.

IF THE VARIATION is granted by the village board, Sunnyside plans to build a new plant in the Wheeling Industrial Park, just southwest of the Meadowbrook West area. The firm is now located on the North side of Chicago.

The board will also consider an ordinance that would allow privately-owned recreational facilities to be built under the present industrial zoning. The ordinance, proposed by Director of Building Bill Bieber, is designed to attract developers of such facilities to Wheeling.

Board members also are scheduled to review zoning board recommendations on a request to allow three motor freight terminals south of Hintz Road and east of the Soo Line R.R. tracks.

The freight terminals are part of an industrial area that will be developed at a later date. The zoning request includes 89 acres fronting on Hintz Road.

The board will also consider a zoning ordinance for property next to the proposed eight-story office building planned by the Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank. The adjacent property will be used for additional parking and water retention for the building.

PRIOR TO THE board meeting, the trustees have scheduled a meeting between local builder Richard Califa and residents who are objecting to the driveway at his office building, 1111 W. Dundee Rd.

Lightning kills boy, 14, at park

An Arlington Heights youth was killed Saturday by lightning as he stood beneath a tree to watch his older brother play baseball in Pioneer Park, near Park Street and Kennicott Avenue, Arlington Heights.

Daniel Druding, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent J. Druding Jr., 2343 S. Cedar Glen Ln., was struck in the back of the head by lightning, according to Arlington Heights Fire Department spokesmen. The boy was reported dead by fire and Arlington Heights police departments when they arrived at the scene at about noon.

The boy was reported to have gone to the park to play baseball with his team, but the threatening weather prevented the team from playing. Daniel then decided to watch his brother play and stood beneath a tree when heavy rains poured.

Daniel was graduated Friday from Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect. He was to attend St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights in the fall. Family members were preparing for his graduation surprise party Saturday morning after he left to play ball. Guests had begun to gather when police informed the family of the boy's death.

A coroner's inquest will be held at 10:30 a.m. today at Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, Arlington Heights.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Fire Department was alerted to several instances of power failures scattered throughout the village, a spokesman said. Power was restored "in a matter of minutes." Approximately 1½ inches of rain fell between 11:20 a.m. and 3:40 p.m. Saturday, according to the fire department's rain gauge.

About three or four houses in Palatine were struck by lightning in Saturday's storms, according to Palatine police department. Damages in one of the houses resulted in a hole in the roof. Lightning also struck a tree and set it on fire. The Hoffman Estates Fire Department was called to quench the fire.

In Schaumburg, two houses were struck by lightning, knocking off some of the siding on one house, and scattering the shingles of the other.

Some power and telephone lines were severed, but were restored the same day.

The Elk Grove Village Police Department reported a number of false alarms were set off when high winds and fallen branches broke through windows in several buildings. The village fire department reported that lightning struck a transformer at 850 Arthur.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

At quiet retreats more than 1,000 miles apart, Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nixon conferred yesterday with top aides on the eve of summit talks covering the breadth of Soviet-American relations from trade to disarmament. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, remained at Camp David. Nixon returned to Washington after spending the weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla.

White House Counsel John W. Dean has told Senate investigators he "assumed" President Nixon was aware of the Watergate cover-up within weeks of the bugging because he reported on it regularly to Nixon's two closest advisers, it was learned yesterday. But, sources close to the Senate probe, said Dean told investigators that he himself did not discuss aspects of the cover-up personally with the President until last March.

President Nixon, after months of virtual seclusion, is planning more public appearances to shore up confidence in his Watergate-shattered administration, White House aides indicated.

Led by sympathetic congressmen, about 8,000 persons rallied at the U.S. Capitol to protest Soviet treatment of Jews, limiting their demonstration to coincide with final preparations for the Nixon-Brezhnev summit talks opening today.

The cities of the nation have become an "orphan" under the administration of President Nixon, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, host mayor for the 41st annual U.S. Conference of Mayors, said. He was one of six mayors to appear on "Meet the Press."

The Skylab astronauts received Father's Day greetings from President Nixon and he told them they proved "man still matters" in space. The Skylab crew is to return to earth Friday in their Apollo command ship after staying in orbit a record-shattering 28 days.

The world

Fighting between advancing Communists and government defenders south of Phnom Penh went into its second week with attacks at two towns only 13 miles from the Cambodian capital along Highway 4, a strategic supply route. The U.S. Command in Honolulu confirmed that American warplanes again flew support for the beleaguered government troops, as they have for 104 consecutive days.

A new Protestant terrorist organization, the Ulster Freedom Fighters, said it killed a Roman Catholic seaman, the third murder claimed by the group in two days as Northern Ireland's violence continues. The death toll now stands at 827 in almost four years of fighting.

A strong earthquake in the Pacific sent residents of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, scurrying from low-lying inland areas to escape a feared tidal wave that never came.

by KAREN BLECH

Sen. Sam Ervin smiled like he does on TV. He quoted the Bible, tossed out lines from popular hymns and joked.

But he never moved his big, bushy eyebrows. Not once. It was a clear indication the former judge was in Chicago for a light-hearted afternoon with his cohorts. A pleasant break for the chairman of the committee investigating the scandalous Watergate affair.

The 76-year-old North Carolina Democrat came to the Hyatt Regency O'Hare Friday to address the convention of the Illinois State Bar Association. The 500 lawyers and their wives wanted to hear about Watergate, but they were disappointed. Ervin alluded to the affair only once as he read from his 11-page prepared manuscript on executive privilege — the right of the President to maintain the sanctity of his papers and conversations with aides.

"I am familiar with the various statements by the President regarding executive privilege in connection with the Watergate investigation, some of which I have seen fit to characterize as executive poppycock," Ervin read.

Later, at a news conference, reporters wanted to know more about the Watergate. They too were disappointed. A true Southern gentleman, the senator just smiled like he was dishing out hominy grits at a Women's Auxiliary brunch.

YOU CAN TELL when something sparks Sam Ervin's interest. Those eyebrows move up and down, rhythmically, as he scans a revealing memo passed to him during the hearings by a staff aide. They almost flutter as he bears down on a Watergate witness, mixing curveball questions with corncob humor.

But Friday, they stood still. If witnesses before his committee answered questions with such resolute evasion, they'd soon be sorry. But the newsmen had no choice. Sam Ervin has a narrow path to walk. His committee generates dramatic headlines every time it meets. He's one country lawyer who doesn't stray into the woods when he doesn't want to.

"Senator, what evidence would you need to subpoena the President to testify at your hearings?"

"I see no means thus far to call the President. I prefer not to take that drastic step."

"I don't know, I can't tell you. It would be something drastic."

"Senator, do you have any regrets about chairing the Watergate investigating committee?"

"I have regrets about anything that imposes a lot of work on me."

AND IT WENT ON. Ervin would say little about the possibility of the President testifying before the committee. He sparred with reporters, avoiding questions about subpoenaing or impeaching the President. Instead of answers, he gave back smiles, jokes and Bible phrases.

Ervin stressed that he did not want to make any judgments on the Watergate break-in and cover up until all the evidence is in. "I hope that we will be able to make a finding that the President was in no way involved in the affair," he said, still smiling. "So far we have had no evidence that the President was involved."

There were a few things the senator would say. He said John Dean, former counsel to President Nixon, was scheduled to testify before the committee tomorrow. He said the committee also expects to hear from former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, although he didn't know when. "Sometime in the near future," he said.

Asked about his personal feelings on the Watergate, Ervin said he had a "great deal of compassion" for those testifying. He said he felt it was "a great tragedy to see young men succumb to the temptation to do the things they testified they did."

DURING THE PRESS conference, Ervin got a few laughs. He got even more with the opening of his speech at the convention. The expert on constitutional law spoke a little of the U.S. Supreme Court decision to prohibit prayer in the schools.

"After the decision was handed down by the Supreme Court, a teacher saw three boys back in the corner of the classroom. She asked them what they were doing. They answered 'shooting craps.' Then she breathed a sigh of relief. 'That's all right. I thought you were praying.'"

But the laughter stopped as he began reading his speech on executive privilege, saying that the withholding of information from the Congress has increased during the 4½ years of Richard Nixon's term. Now Nixon has extended a privilege intended only to the President to other positions in the executive branch. Ervin cited historic cases to back up his belief that executive privilege is a right belonging only to the president, a right to be exercised only when necessary.

"CONGRESS CAN legislate widely only if it has the information. There can be no question on the right of Congress to have the information necessary to enable Congress to legislate wisely," he said.

The audience fidgeted as he went on with a speech that sounded like a legal brief. Men rubbed their eyes, women checked their watches. A lot of people yawned.

But when the senator ended his 25-minute monologue, the audience gave him a standing ovation. Not because he was a great speaker. Because he was Sen. Sam Ervin.

Silas Jayne asks out of jail on bond

Silas Jayne and Joseph LaPlaca will ask the Illinois Appellate Court to let them out of jail on bond this week, Assistant State's Atty. Nicholas Motherway said Friday.

Jayne and LaPlaca were both convicted in April of conspiracy in the murder of Inverness horseman George Jayne.

Friday, Cook County Criminal Courts Judge Richard Fitzgerald denied a request by Chicago Atty. George Howard that the two be released from the Cook County Jail on bond.

During the murder trial Howard represented Julius Barnes who was found guilty of murdering George Jayne.

Howard now represents both Silas Jayne and LaPlaca who during the trial were represented by Boston attorneys F. Lee Bailey and Gerald Alch.

Jayne reportedly paid Bailey a $250,000 fee for defending him in the trial.

Bills for incorporation will go to Walker soon

The fate of two bills permitting the incorporation of Prospect Heights as a municipality will soon rest with Gov. Daniel Walker.

House Bill 438, now in its third reading in the Senate, is expected to pass next week, according to its sponsor, State Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge.

A similar bill, Senate Bill 195, sponsored by State Sen. Bradley Glass, R-Northfield, was unanimously approved Tuesday by the House Committee on Cities and Villages and was to be placed on the House consent calendar today.

This means the bill can be approved by the House without a debate and sent to the governor unless a House member objects on the floor. The bill is still subject to amendments.

JUCKETT SAID both bills are at about the same stage of approval and will probably be sent to the governor together. He said he expects the governor to approve Glass' bill.

"I assume the (Illinois) Municipal League will request that the governor sign the Senate Bill," he said. "Mine gives municipalities no say at all in incorporation plans."

Both bills, introduced into the Illinois General Assembly in March, would permit unincorporated areas of 7,500 or more residents to incorporate without the approval of nearby municipalities.

CURRENT LAW states that an area of fewer than 7,500 residents must seek approval from municipalities within 1½ miles for incorporation. Another section says that neighboring municipalities within one mile must consent to incorporation, regardless of the population of the area.

Glass' bill differs from Juckett's in that it permits a neighboring municipality to object in court if the proposed incorporation adversely affects the governmental services provided by the existing municipality. The court could rule that the boundaries of the proposed new municipality be adjusted to overcome the objections.

Juckett said he didn't think passage of the Glass bill would affect Prospect Heights' chances for incorporation.

"As far as incorporation of Prospect Heights is concerned, I don't think any municipality can prove a disruption of services as the lines and boundaries are now drawn," he said.

Glass' bill would become effective immediately when signed by the governor. Juckett's bill would not go into effect until October.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, the House sponsor of Glass' bill, said Arlington Heights has requested the right to object to incorporation of Prospect Heights if incorporation adversely affects the performance of Arlington Heights municipal services.

A SPECTACULAR FIRE at the Coach House Stables and McGuinn Farms in Northbrook Friday morning caused havoc for local police departments, who spent the day rounding up horses turned loose during the blaze. Wheeling firemen assisted 11 other area departments in fighting the fire, which caused an estimated $500,000 damage. One person was killed by the fire, and one injured by horses stampeding by the blaze. One horse also was killed in the fire, and two more were killed in an auto accident as they fled from the flames.

Northbrook stable employee believed to be victim

Fire-charred body still unidentified

The identity of a badly burned body found in the debris from a stable fire in Northbrook Friday still has not been determined, Cook County Coroner's office officials said yesterday.

Cook County Sheriff's Police, however, said the victim may be Ron Henderson, 21, an employee at the Coach House Stables and McGuinn Farms on Sanders and Palatine Roads. Police said Henderson lived at the stables and was last seen Thursday night.

Ma. J. Richard Lowthorp said police have obtained Henderson's dental and X-ray records to aid in the identification process. He said Henderson was last seen when friends dropped him off at the stables following a softball game.

A SCHAUMBURG man also was injured by horses fleeing the blaze. Wheeling police said the car driven by Michael O'Halloran, 1326 E. Algonquin Road, struck and killed two horses who darted out of the woods at Willow Road and Milwaukee Avenue.

O'Halloran was taken to Holy Family Hospital, in Des Plaines where he was treated for glass cuts and released. Police said the car was totally destroyed.

Wheeling Police Lt. Ronald Nelson said his department was kept busy Friday rounding up horses turned loose during the early morning blaze. He said his department began their roundup at 4:15 a.m., when the first request for help came over the police radio.

ABOUT 90 horses were turned loose to flee to safety during the blaze, which began shortly before 4 a.m. Cook County Sheriff's Police said loose horses were reported as far west as River Road and as far north as Dundee Road.

Nelson said all Wheeling police squads assisted in rounding up the stray horses. "We rounded up several of them in the forest preserve," he said. "And we had (horses) trailers coming in from other stables."

According to Nelson, Wheeling police made no effort to catch the horses. "We merely located them and kept them in sight until the vans came," he said.

Nelson said motorists in the area were warned to drive carefully and keep a close watch for the horses. He said the animals were spooky from the fire, and two or three had darted out of the woods without warning.

SEVERAL COOK County Sheriff's Police squad cars were damaged at the scene of the fire when horses released from the burning building stampeded the cars.

Wheeling firemen assisted 11 other departments in fighting the blaze, which caused an estimated $500,000 damage to the one story building.

Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen said the fire fighting operations were hampered by lack of water. "We had no water out there," he said. "We had to shuttle it in from a mile and a half. They had some water out there, but nothing compared to the size of the fire. They didn't have a beggerman's chance."

Firemen remained at the scene of the fire until late Friday afternoon, putting out hot spots and cooling the remains. No cause for the fire has yet been determined. Fire officials however, believe it may have been started by improper use of smoking materials.

Cook County Sheriff's Police said most of the stray horses had been rounded up by late Friday afternoon.

Township revenue-sharing uses decided

The Wheeling Township Board has decided to give its $96,000 revenue sharing funds to groups dealing with mental health. Two youth services, senior citizens and the environment, according to Ethel Kolerus, supervisor.

Board members tomorrow night will review the earmarking of potential projects in these three areas with the category of mental health receiving 62 per cent of the funds, senior citizens, 17 per cent and environment, 21 per cent.

After the review, the board will file a Planned Use report with the government on Wednesday. The report will indicate to government officials in what directions Wheeling Township is spending revenue sharing.

A quarter of this year's allocation, or $24,000 was received in early April by the township. Another $24,000 share will be given after the township has filed the report.

"We'll move ahead to start programs now," said Mrs. Kolerus.

COMMITTEES MADE up of Wheeling Township residents will be formed to investigate the various groups who are qualified to receive revenue sharing.

"They will suggest to the board what agencies we should consider," said Mrs. Kolerus. She said that agencies that will receive money will be determined by Aug. 15 or sooner. "By September, we must file another report, to show the actual spending of the funds," she said.

Mrs. Kolerus added that the board is going about choosing the programs "carefully" since the government could impose a 110 per cent penalty for improper use of or reporting of funds. Programs will be chosen under guidelines imposed by the government and will receive money for five years, the length of the federal revenue sharing program.

The board also plans to submit a supplementary report of last year's $96,000 revenue sharing to be used this year, although reports are not mandatory.

The federal revenue sharing program, proposed by President Nixon in early 1971, provides a small percentage of federal income tax receipts to state and local governments. It is a shift from the practice of rigidly allocated federal grants to states and municipalities for welfare, housing, hospitals and other programs. Localized governing bodies theoretically better understand its own needs.

Harper plans replacement for destroyed field house

The Harper College board of trustees has agreed to move as quickly as possible to replace the physical education facilities destroyed in a fire last week.

The board Thursday agreed to begin planning for an interim 6,000-square-foot building that would be used beginning this fall. The interim facility would "hold only 50 per cent of existing classes," according to College Pres. Robert Lahti, but he said it could be used to salvage many services disrupted by the fire.

The board also agreed to seek emergency legislation to provide about $1.6 million for construction of a new field house which could be completed in about two years.

Lahti said he had conferred with state Rep. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and other local legislators about the emergency appropriation. Lahti was also scheduled to meet Friday with the Illinois Junior College Board to discuss the emergency legislation.

A WEEK AGO Saturday night, a fire of undetermined origin gutted a horse barn which had served the college for five years for physical education classes and for storage. No one was injured in the blaze.

The interim facility, supported by Lahti and other college officials, would supply some classroom space, office facilities, and storage space for maintenance equipment.

John Gelch the college's athletic director, said the new facility would supply locker space to permit outdoor sports for nine weeks during the fall and nine weeks during the spring. For indoor sports, he said, "We'll have to do a lot of innovating. I'd guess you'd say." He said that nearby high schools hardly have enough gym space for their own use.

The facility will be paid for by insurance money paid to the college as a result of the fire. College officials said that insurance adjusters are already beginning totaling the loss caused by the fire.

The new permanent field house to be called Building M, would cost about $2.2 million, according to college officials.

Lahti emphasized that the idea of speeding up the construction timetable would be for a facility which has already been planned but not yet funded.

WHEN ASKED when the facility would be completed, Lahti said, "The earliest would be two years if somebody said, 'yes' two weeks from now."

Unless the emergency funding legislation can be passed by the legislature, the facility could be financed completely by local tax funds. (Normally, construction of a college building is paid for by a mixture of state and local funds.)

If the emergency legislation is passed, the college would have to spend $550,000 in local tax money.

Building M could be built when state funds become available through normal procedures. But college officials don't expect that procedure would insure completion within two years.

Emmerich Park becomes 'Whiskey Jack's' on weekends

The Buffalo Grove Emmerich Park building becomes "Whiskey Jack's Walnut Canyon Coffee House" from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. each Friday and Sunday.

The informal teen coffee house, which will be open all summer, is being operated by the Buffalo Grove Community Center teen advisory group.

The teen group of about 25 is working with a committee appointed by Village Pres. Gary Armstrong several months ago to discuss plans for a proposed community center.

Admission to the coffee house is free. Coffee, pop and donuts are sold and supervision is provided by the staff of Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau.

TOM CARLISLE, Omni-House worker, said Friday the coffee house was set up about six weeks ago to give Buffalo Grove teens a place to meet and plan activities. Up until last week, the group met at the Willow Stream Pool bathhouse.

"In Buffalo Grove, there just aren't too many organized activities for kids, especially teenagers," Carlisle said. "Kids have a whole lot of energy and we're just trying to find ways for them to channel it."

Carlisle said several fund-raising activities are planned by the groups to obtain money for service projects, trips and other activities.

Some of the money will also be used, Carlisle said, to bring folk singers and rock bands to entertain at the coffee house.

The Buffalo Grove village board is scheduled tonight to consider a request from the teen group for permission to raise money by painting house numbers on the curbs of local residences. They are asking to be allowed to paint the numbers in return for donations.

Continuance granted in murder case

A preliminary hearing into the case against Israel Pequeno, the 10-year-old Palatine youth charged with the March 26 murder of his girlfriend, has been continued to July 27.

The continuance was issued Friday by Criminal Court Judge Benjamin Mackoff after Pequeno was arraigned. A lengthy series of pretrial hearings could be held before a trial date is set by the judge, according to a spokesman for the court. The spokesman said because of the pretrial hearings, the case could take up to a year to be decided.

Pequeno, 503 Westwood, Palatine, is being held in the murder of Sharon Soyka, 17, of 3717 Oriole Ln., Rolling Meadows. Rolling Meadows police found Miss Soyka shot to death in the kitchen of her home on March 26. Pequeno and Miss Soyka were both students at Rolling Meadows High School and had been dating, police said.

Pequeno has been held without bond in Cook County Jail since his arrest.

Pequeno has already been ordered to serve one to three years in the state penitentiary for delivery of marijuana in connection with a narcotics arrest at his home Feb. 8. Pequeno will not begin serving that term until the murder charge is decided.

The case against Pequeno is being prosecuted by Donald Novelli of the Cook County state's attorney's office. Pequeno is being represented by attorney Patrick A. Smith.

'Bicycle Spokesman' magazine rides 2-wheel boom

by DIANE STEFANOS

When "Bicycle Spokesman" magazine was still in the planning stages, its shorts-and-sandal-fitted publisher rode his bike each day to a small and informal office in Palatine.

A year later, Bill Janney, dressed in a business suit, drives a car to his new modern office, still maintaining the enthusiasm and love of bicycling that has made his magazine successful.

The magazine's increasing popularity in the past year is comparable to that of the nationwide bicycle craze upon which it focuses.

Janney and editor Joe Bowen are avid bicyclists who have participated in bicycling events and activities throughout the country. Well-acquainted with the bike boom in America in the last 10 years, they are attempting to meet the needs and inquiries of new and experienced bikers through "Bicycle Spokesman."

With only eight issues since the first in May 1972, subscriptions to "Bicycle Spokesman" have gone from 390 to 2,300 subscribers which are increasing at a rate of 600 new subscribers monthly, said Janney.

"It's not difficult interesting people in a bicycle magazine, not when it's a booming trend," he said.

EXPERTS TELL us that the number of bikes in this country will total 100 million by 1980, but we think there will be many by 1975.

Why the steady increase in bikers? The fuel crisis has forced more people to use bicycles for transportation and economy than ever before, said Janney. "When the distance is reasonable, more people are biking to places they have to go to."

A return to nature emphasis and an increasing personal concern for health and physical fitness have also prompted people of all ages and class to resort to bicycling, he said.

"A major reason for the trend is that bicycling is a chance for family togetherness. The businessman no longer finds himself playing golf. Bicycling makes him feel good, it's fun and it's cohesive family entertainment. People just really want to slow down," he said.

"IT'S BEING LOOKED upon more and more as a pleasurable and beneficial activity in this country. Not only young people, but people of all ages are bicycling for all sorts of reasons, said the publisher who lives at 315 S. Bothwell St. in Palatine.

"We get an unbelievable amount of mail from readers who have just bought bikes and are rediscovering them as adults or from long-time bikers. Even new bicycle riders write to us. Their responses have indicated that we are answering a lot of people's frustrations, that we are meeting a definite need for those who bike," said Janney.

With the bicycling trend having increased since 1961 in great proportions, more people need to be alerted to the various aspects and education of biking.

Janney began publishing "Bicycle Spokesman" realizing the growing need to inform families and new bikers of how and where to purchase bikes, where to ride them, bicycle safety and education and bicycling events and activities.

WITH AN INCREASING number of bikes on city and suburban highways and streets throughout the country, bicyclists as well as motorists are going to have to understand and respect each other's presence on the roads, he said.

"We emphasize bicycle safety and legislation quite a bit, hoping to restore biking as a fun rather than a fearful activity because of lack of information for bikers," said Janney.

Janney wants "Bicycle Spokesman" to not only be the "Time-Newsweek of the bicycle industry, but a number one clean-cut family magazine as well.

"IT'S SOMETHING that kids and their parents could look at as well as the experienced bicyclist," he said.

According to Janney that's how a magazine publishing out of Palatine and catering specifically to the bicyclist has succeeded nationally.

The first five issues of the magazine were the efforts of Janney and two devoted acquaintances. Now the magazine's executive staff of eight produces one third of the copy for each issue, the rest being contributed by free lance writers throughout the country.

The magazine is completely constructed in the Hub Publishing Co. offices, 119 E. Palatine Rd. in Palatine. The magazine is printed in and distributed from Lincoln, Neb.

"It's a major undertaking but it's one that was needed," said Janney who had left a job in publishing as Midwest manager for "Skin Diver Magazine" to begin publishing "Bicycle Spokesman."

We're now the leading bicycle magazine in the country, on the newsstands and in subscriptions, fulfilling an information need for bicyclists, said Janney.

Tax reforms offered by Chicago panel

by JEANNETTE DE WYZE
Spiraling property taxes have drawn the wrath of homeowners and, increasingly, the attention of reformers. Some of their ideas, which range from imposing a one per cent limit on property taxes to levying a local income tax on top of the state income tax, were offered last week at a day-long tax forum presented by the Greater Chicago Committee, at the Sheraton-Blackstone Hotel in Chicago.

Philip E. Watson, assessor of Los Angeles County in California, urged both a statutory limitation on property taxes and a reassessment of the way property taxes are now used.

WATSON, WHO IS credited with the massive reorganization and modernization of assessment procedures in Los Angeles County, advocated limiting property taxes to one per cent of market value. He said he rejects the argument that governments must always need more money than a fixed tax could yield.

A limit on property taxes would peg the taxes to the level of wealth of the community, he said.

He also suggested that states "earmark" tax sources.

"Why not limit the use of sales tax revenue to the support of schools since that is the purpose for which the sales tax was designed?" he said.

Watson suggested that income tax revenue should pay for other general community services, since the income tax is a broadly based general tax.

"The taxpayers are growing restless," he concluded. "We can no longer assume that there is a never ending supply of tax money for this year and the next year and the year after."

ROBERT N. SCHOEPLIN, a University of Illinois economics professor, told the forum that he felt the only feasible and adequate alternative to the real estate property tax would be a local personal income tax "piggybacked" to the present state personal income tax.

Schoeplin's proposal would require enabling legislation by the Illinois General Assembly. He recommended statewide uniform city-county personal income tax that would divide and coordinate tax receipts between residence and place of work (where applicable) on a 50-50 basis.

A wrapup of June 4-8 congressional votes by U.S. Representatives Philip Crane, R-12th, and Samuel Young, R-10th, will appear in tomorrow's Herald.

He estimated that a one per cent tax of this nature would yield an additional $130 million a year to the City of Chicago, using current figures.

Schoeplin rejected the ideas of reducing the quality and delivery of local government service, having the state and federal governments assume greater fiscal responsibility for some government services (such as schools) or using revenue sharing as alternate means for reducing the property tax.

He said the three approaches have "one or more pragmatic restrictions that would preclude local government reliance on such finances for any long-term property tax relief."

"All taxes are painful, but close examination shows that there are no present 'painless expedients' to the property tax," he said.

THOMAS M. TULLY, former chief deputy assessor of Cook County, also spoke before the forum. He proposed a five-point plan that he said can begin to relieve homeowners of high property taxes without shifting any further burden to industrial and commercial properties.

Tully's plan included:

- Having the state assume the primary burden of financing education. The state now pays only 35 per cent of the total cost of education in Cook County while local taxes account for about half the cost of education, Tully said.

- Enacting new legislation which would allow the county to hold slum landlords personally liable for unpaid property taxes.

- Resisting proposals to change federal income tax laws that allow a taxpayer to deduct losses from a real estate venture arising from accelerated depreciation against income from other investments or from the individual's earned income. Tully warned that changes in the present law would have a devastating effect on real estate development and investment, which in turn could mean higher property taxes for homeowners.

- Reconsidering the leasehold tax defeated by the legislature last week. The defeated bill would have allowed the taxing of property listed as exempt but leased to non-exempt users of the property.

- Continuing improvement of assessment procedures in the county.

The Greater Chicago Committee was formed two years ago to gather information about the extent of the property tax problem and to identify available alternative revenue sources.

Religion Today

by Rev. Lester Kinsolving

While four-star Gen. Ralph E. Haines was commanding the four continental armies of the United States two years ago, he was suddenly seized by the Spirit (in Buffalo, N.Y.) — so that he began speaking in tongues (glossolalia).

Interspersed among the general's holy (if incomprehensible) babblings were a number of notable statements, such as his viewing his command as "a rather large parish." Moreover, he announced that "My commander in chief is Jesus," and "I would rather be a private in the army of Jesus Christ than a general in the U.S. Army."

Commented a droll editorial in the Washington Star-News: "Careful consideration should be given to granting this wish."

Such has been the case. Private Haines is now a regular on the Tongues circuit — although he is invariably identified in this round of meetings, dinners and services by his higher rank. He often appears with his fellow Episcopalian, Rev. Dennis Bennett of Seattle.

THE TWO MEN were star performers at a recent Dallas meeting of some 300 Episcopal clergy (including the new Bishop of Colorado) who also regards such ecstatic outbursts and holy hysteria as evidence of a Great Spiritual Revival.

At Notre Dame each summer the campus is crowded with thousands of generally sincere, eager and pious Catholic adherents of this gibberish gimmick.

Glossolalia will vehemently defend this weird and so easily counterfeited spouting of pseudo-sanctified nonsense by noting that it is sanctioned by the New Testament (to some extent.)

Precisely what extent may be determined by St. Paul's first letter to the Corinthians (Chapter 14, Verse 10):

"Yet in the church, I would rather speak five words with my understanding, that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue."

WHEN CONFRONTED with this significant 2,000-to-1 deflation, the babblers will generally shift to Jesus. And while there is not one word of Holy Scripture which reports that Jesus himself ever babbled, they will eagerly cite a New Testament passage whose authenticity has been frequently questioned by scholars, but in which the following statement is attributed to Jesus:

"And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them."

There is, fortunately, no reported poisonous snake-handling or poison-drinking movement within the Catholic or Episcopal churches — or the high echelons of the United States Army.

But in the Holiness Church of God in Jesus Name, located in Carson Springs, two snake-handling fanatics recently informed the congregation:

"We're doing just as the Lord bid us to do."

They then proceeded to drink strychnine. They subsequently twitched in convulsions all night and were dead by morning — no doubt having remained as firm in their unusual Biblical faith as are Father Bennett and Haines in theirs.

Harper to launch special program for deaf students

by WANDALYN RICE

Harper College will have a special program for about 20 deaf and hard-of-hearing students next year and college officials hope the program will expand to 100 students by 1976.

The Harper board last week approved a $20,000 appropriation to hire a teacher, sign language interpreters and note-takers to assist the deaf students in regular Harper classes.

This year several deaf students have been attending class at Harper, but have been hiring their own interpreters and note-takers.

Horsely High School has been designated an area center for deaf high school education and expects to have about 40 students next year, according to college officials.

Harper Vice Pres. Guerin Fischer said the program has been developed by Harper officials in cooperation with officials in the deaf program at Horsely, parents of deaf children and persons who work with the problems of the deaf statewide.

GEORGE PROPP, deaf education specialist from Northwestern University, and Samuel Block, project director for assessing the needs of the deaf for the adult education study being conducted by the state, commended the board Thursday after it approved the program.

Propp and Block, both of whom are deaf, told the board using words and sign language they were pleased that the college would provide services for deaf students. Block said, "This kind of program at Harper is just what the deaf population of Illinois is aiming for. We are delighted to see Harper jump the gun."

Propp added that he hopes the college officials will be concerned with social opportunities for the deaf students as well as for their classroom experience. "If you have not participated in a bull session you have not been in college," he said, adding, "Every boy or whether he's deaf or not should have some choice in what to do. The benefits of a community college should be open to all students."

HARPER BOARD members reacted enthusiastically to the proposed program. Board member William Kelly said he hoped the school could serve more than 20 students if the first year and could expand the program as quickly as possible. Kelly said the $20,000 budget is altogether too modest.

College Pres. Robert Lahti said the college officials want to study the program as it starts and said, "The minute we can expand this program and ensure quality, we will."

In other action, the board agreed to set up a faculty-administration committee beginning in September to study the college's policy of awarding tenure to faculty members. The report would be given to the board by December.

According to Lahti, the committee will be asked to study the possibility of increasing the amount of time a teacher must serve before being granted tenure. The committee also will study what percentage of the Harper faculty should be on tenure at any time, Lahti said.

Games students play

by REGINA OEHLER

Steve walks into his first-grade classroom, grabs a toy from one of his classmates and hands it to another child. Looking innocent, he stands back and watches the two start fighting.

"Teacher, teacher," he yells, pointing to the students. "They're fighting."

While the teacher rushes over to settle the conflict, Steve starts another fight between two more youngsters. The class is in an uproar.

Like other youngsters his age, Steve is playing a game. Children generally prefer games like tag, jump rope and Simon Says, but sometimes they resort to more potentially destructive psychological games such as Steve's "uproar."

These games are generally unconscious, said Robert Willford. "They're not known to the game player."

WILLFORD, A clinical psychologist and director of the Forest Hospital Postgraduate Center, recently held a two-day workshop called "The Games Students Play and What to Do About Them." Attending were Northwest suburban teachers, counselors, social workers, school psychologists and a dean of students.

"Game players are like people who play slot machines," he continued. Students play many, many games in an attempt to get someone to take part in just one game. It's similar to a person who puts nickels and more nickels into a slot machine, hoping that one of the nickels will pay off.

One fairly effective way for teachers to stop game playing is to recognize the game and not be "hooked" into going along with the child, according to Willford. "It takes two people to play a game," he said.

It also helps to tell the game player he is playing a game, Willford added later. In Steve's case, the teacher was forced to place Steve in a separate room, keeping him away from the rest of the class. "That may seem very hardcore, but that's the only thing you can do," Willford said.

THE SOLUTION to game playing is not always as drastic. Transactional Analysis, a newly popular psychological group approach, can provide understanding of why people play games and how games can be discouraged, he said.

TA divides people into four "life positions," Willford explained. The life positions are: I'm OK — you're OK, I'm not OK — you're OK, I'm not OK — you're not OK, and I'm OK — you're not OK.

The goal is to reach the I'm OK, you're OK state of mind, where you like yourself and I don't feel any need to play games. People "have more legitimate ways to satisfy their needs," said Willford.

Children generally start out with an "I'm not OK, you're OK" view of life, said Willford. Through strokes — or praise — a child should develop into an "I'm OK, you're OK" life position. Sometimes people never leave the "I'm not OK, you're OK" life position.

These students (sometimes adults, also) are the easiest to help, according to Willford. The teacher should stroke the child, let him know he's important, worth something, until he reaches an I'm OK position.

CHILDREN IN the other two categories are harder to deal with. Someone in the "I'm not OK, you're not OK" position is difficult to help. The teacher has to gain the child's trust and become an "OK" person before helping the student become "OK."

The last case, which Steve fits into is the hardest to deal with, said Willford. The child considers himself "OK" and everybody else is "not OK." This is the category that many business executives fit into, Willford said.

"We do a great deal in reinforcing that kind of behavior in our society," said Willford. The businessman, who can hire and fire employs without a qualm, generally fits into "I'm OK, you're not OK."

Children, too, are encouraged into the "not OK" positions because of society's values, he added.

To help them gain self-respect and realize that they are "OK" people, a child should be praised for simply existing, the theory goes.

WILLFORD LISTED 16 of the most common games students play. The best way to decide what category a child fits into is to discover who is being destroyed. If it's the child, then the child sees himself as not OK. If it's other people, the child sees others as being not OK.

Blemish: The child looks for — and finds — mistakes.

Wooden leg: This child points to a deficiency and says "what do you expect of me?" The underprivileged, for example, may point to their social history and say "what do you expect?"

Poor me: This is the person who's impotent; robbed of his own strength, power and ability to make decisions. Everything happens to him; he does nothing to make things happen.

Disciple: The student can't learn from anyone but one person. Many schools fall into this trap, according to Willford, by keeping students with the same teacher for a few years.

Do me something: This game is played by the child whose parents spend most of their time amusing him. The child, when he gets to school, sits back and waits for the teacher to do something for him.

Stupid: "A stupid player can really convince you that he is," said Willford. If you try and convince him that he isn't stupid, you're being hooked into the game. "Always look for how they feel about making mistakes," Willford added.

Schlemiel: Beware! This child can make a shambles of the classroom. He will pass three desks on his way to the pencil sharpener, and knock off a notebook, a few pencils and a couple of other things. The best way to handle this game, said Willford, is to keep the child in a place where he can do only a minimum of damage and not react strongly to the damage he manages to do.

Rape: Usually played by girls. In this game the girl may encourage a boy to meet her in a corner of the room or behind lockers, then will run and tell the teacher if the boy tries to kiss her.

Sweetheart: This game, popular with adults as well as children, features the endearing friend who tells you all your faults. "I'm telling you this for your own good," he may say. The player bears some similarity to a tattletale.

Kick me: This child sets himself up to be kicked. The ultimate kick me is the man who goes out with a woman who has a homicidally jealous husband.

Stockings: Girls play this game when they fix their stockings in front of boys, having, of course, to raise their skirts. In many cases this is normal, said Willford. Girls are not sure about their own sexuality. If it happens often, then something's wrong.

Clown: This game is a way of avoiding. To break it up, the teacher has to find out what the child is avoiding.

Want out: The child will set himself up to get kicked out of school, but hangs around the playground, anyway. Generally, he's afraid that he can't handle school, according to Willford.

Why does it always happen to me?: This game is another form of "poor me." Willford suggested that the teacher help the child discover he has some control over what happens to him. "If you help yourself, I'll help you."

Chip on the shoulder: It's similar to clown or stupid. The child attempts to force the teacher to knock the chip off. The trick in breaking up this game, according to Willford, is not to knock the chip off.

Make me: This student responds to commands by saying "make me do it." The only effective way to deal with this game is not to get backed into a corner, and to feed the child's ego by making things into a challenge.

Let's find something: This is played by children who have a lot of time on their hands. The only way to break up this game is to structure the student's time more tightly and relieve their boredom.

Teachers play games, too...

"The community has a tendency to reinforce two kinds of teachers," said Robert Willford. But neither type, the "disciplinarian" nor the "nurturing mama," is best for the child.

Willford, a clinical psychologist and director of the Forest Hospital Postgraduate Center, recently hosted a two-day workshop on "The Games Students Play and What to Do About Them."

Teachers, as the other players in the game and contributors to a child's mental health, were typed into categories.

THE BEST TEACHER, according to Willford, is one who operates continuously out of the "adult" (reason or logic) side of his personality and doesn't let his own emotions or prejudices enter into teaching situation.

"In order to circumvent the games, it's necessary to be an 'adult' teacher most of the time," Willford said. But many teachers play their own games in the classroom and Willford had categories for each.

The "disciplinarian" or the "tyrant" is the teacher who sends problem kids to the principal. "It isn't very therapeutic, but it does relieve the immediate problem," Willford said.

The nurturing mama is the teacher who insists that students do everything together. "There's no individuality," said Willford. The child that doesn't really want to join and play the same games that the other children are playing, is practically forced into participating. No one does anything on his own.

The "lulid" teacher is one who plays his own game, doing little to break up the games children are playing. He is generally scared and will say things such as "Don't be so noisy; we don't want to get a reputation as a noisy class."

THE "SCRAPPING" teacher will argue with his students, and sometimes have help from the other students. "There's no way the scrapping teacher can win," said Willford. Both the students who help the teacher and the student who is arguing consider the teacher "not OK." The first because the teacher needed help; the second because the teacher was arguing.

The "gotcha" teacher is one who carries a grudge and will someday, somehow, find a way to repay it. Generally they are scared, inadequate people who resent being put on a spot, said Willford.

Often, they will call on students who have been looking out the window and not listening.

The justification is that this procedure keeps the students alert.

Price freeze a good start

It's vital — for each of us are affected by runaway inflation — that President Richard Nixon has renewed the White House's battle to rein in the American economy.

We're encouraged with the President's decision, announced last Wednesday night in a nationally televised speech, to impose a 60-day freeze on most prices in this country.

As announced, the plan will control all retail prices, including groceries, but it will not extend to rents, interest rates or raw agriculcan economic crisis and develop more effective controls — tighter standards and more mandatory compliance than under the Phase III guidelines.

Phase III, with an emphasis on voluntary compliance, failed spectacularly, and that's a signal that controls are needed today and may eventually become a regular part of the American economic scene — even though no one likes them.

There must be controls, however, which apply to all Americans, whether they be presidents of giant corporations or employees in small stores. One of the grinding faults of Phase II was that it opened a mass of loopholes, permitting many persons to avoid cooperation with controls. This time, that must be avoided.

Perhaps, when August 13 comes we shall find ourselves facing a more-or-less permanent food price ceiling, or the imposition of mandatory controls on wages to keep inflation within bounds.

Now, since inflation has not been contained by voluntary means, it is clear that something stronger's needed to both protect the individual American and the American dollar which has suffered a merciless beating in world markets, and whose stability is related to inflation here at home.

We aren't urging a lock-step economy in which all spending and earning is controlled by a button on a bureaucrat's desk. Rather, we encourage sensible but firm controls in which the runaway steed can be contained so we'll all get a smoother ride, rather than being almost bucked off the back of our American economy.

Such a move is overdue, for prices in May rose a startling 2.1 per cent, and as projected, they could climb as much as 25 per cent this year. Farm prices for grains and meat have led the climb. Since January, the Wholesale Price Index has skyrocketed 22.8 per cent — a sure sign that some form of stricter controls were needed.

Most important in the Wednesday announcement, however, was that President Nixon has vowed that the 60-day freeze will be a springboard from which the White House staff can study the Ameri-

Clock for spending

For the first time in history, the rate the government spends money is being clocked, literally, by a "Federal Spending Clock" located in the national headquarters of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Every 1.2 seconds a dial indicates the expenditure of another $10,000, the average annual income of an American family. Every 12.6 seconds a light flashes, indicating the spending of another $100,000. And every two minutes and six seconds, a "beep" is heard, signaling that the federal government has just dropped another million smackers.

The "beep," incidentally, goes off about 700 times a day. By the end of the current fiscal year, the rapidly changing digital figures on top of the clock will have registered a total of some $250 billion.

Meanwhile, over at the Census Bureau, there's another clock that records the arrival every few seconds of one more citizen who will spend most of his lifetime making the other clock run.

Suburbs need a summer festival

Louisville has its Derby and Indianapolis has its "500." Milwaukee and Springfield have state fairs as summer traditions, and almost every midwestern city of any respectability has a summer festival of one sort or another.

A summer festival can be just about anything which brings members of the community and tourists together for a weekend or more. The festival can center around a sports event, or it can be nothing more than a glorified extended picnic.

The purpose of such a summer festival is to have a good time, eat a lot of food, drink large quantities of beer and to socialize. That's generally how this kind of thing works out.

Alas, the Northwest suburbs have no such annual rite, or nothing with the vigor and scope of, say, a county fair. Sure, there are the carnivals and the block parties locally, but they lack the massive crowd appeal found elsewhere.

If you're yearning for group activities here during the smoldering dog days of July and August, invite the neighbors over, organize a block party or do something — ANYTHING — to get your peer group involved.

But if all that fails, find a six-pack, drag your lawn chair out into the shade and turn on the ball game on your TV. Chances are that's more restful than organized recreation, anyway.

One problem's been that large events don't flourish here because the facilities (fairgrounds and large stadiums) don't exist. And there are too many other lures on weekends (large shopping ventures, which assume a strong social role in the suburbs) to discourage such events.

Now, however, our unsocialized suburbs may be under challenge, thanks to the recent announcements that several mammoth sports stadiums and convention centers are proposed for the Northwest suburbs.

What an ideal location for a Northwest suburban summer festival! What a great way to bring together the huddled masses, from Hanover Park to Mount Prospect, at one time for a summerfest of games, food, drink and good fellowship! Don't be skeptical about this plan, for it, at last, is a proposal for action!

And there is always the financial angle. There'd be enough food and drink sold, whatever the event is, to line the

Fence post letters to the editor

Policeman's wife questions letter

I would like to direct this letter to Rita S. Gara.

I was attracted to your letter in the Herald today mainly because of the headline "Policeman praised." Being a policeman's wife, I know it is more often the opposite — policeman criticized, or policeman is wrong, so I am naturally drawn to anything that I think is going to place the policeman in a better light.

Unfortunately, I was very much mistaken as to the content of your letter and it appears the typesetter was being ironic in his choice of headline.

Like the majority of citizens today you took the patrolman's action as a personal insult or assault instead of being the genuine act of concern and kindness it actually was. I cannot speak for the patrolman involved, but through my own personal contact with many police officers (my uncle, two brother-in-laws, and many friends are also policemen) I feel I have a good conception of the patrolman's intentions.

I, too, have a 3½ year old son, and he is very mischievous. I feel he is old enough to be outside playing without my constant presence or control, but he has gotten into "innocent" wrongdoing or mischief because of this freedom. Only last week we found him throwing dirt clods at some new quadrangles built behind our house. He and his friends thought this was great fun until we explained to them how it was wrong to damage other people's property, how they could hurt someone, and how they in turn would feel if it was done to them.

You might feel that this is somewhat old-fashioned or "corny" reasoning, but it was something my three-year-old could understand.

Your three-year-old probably did not have any more malicious intent in throwing a newspaper at the squad car than did my three-year-old in throwing dirt at the houses, but nevertheless both were doing something wrong and needed to be made aware of that fact. I found out my son was doing something wrong because his five-year-old sister told me. If a policeman had been the one to tell me I probably would have been more upset because I would have been embarrassed. With all my proximity to police and police actions, I still stand a little in awe of them because I was brought up to respect the law and its enforcers. Being a policeman's wife does not release me from any laws, nor do I expect special privileges because of my position.

As for the policeman's self-control; I must not have as much "iron-willed self control" as that officer because on the various occasions that my car has been the target of snowballs or other "innocent" missiles, I have stopped my car, rolled down my window, and "yelled" at the kids who have not turned and run, realizing the wrongness of their actions. No matter how fast or slow you are traveling in an automobile, it is somewhat of a surprise, to say the least, to hear or see something hitting it. Yes, it is more a frightful experience than damaging, but who can say what will cause a driver to lose control of his vehicle? I am sure any police officer would be happy to show you pictures or tell you of accidents that have been the direct result of something being thrown at a passing vehicle.

I feel the officer was displaying a great amount of self-control in not only refraining from yelling, but in asking you to reprimand your son. Too many children are already afraid of policemen, or even their squad cars, because well-meaning parents have admonished them to behave or "that policeman will come and get you and lock you up!"

Right now programs are in operation to try and improve the relationship between high school students and police officers. Progressive communities have found that this type of program is a necessity not only in their high schools, but also junior high schools and grammar schools because of the real misunderstanding of the policeman's role in society.

My husband has dealt with many people who refuse to believe their children could do anything wrong or against the law. But somehow these children have been arrested having committed very serious offenses often involving or injuring innocent people like yourself. Somehow I feel if these parents had just been aware of their children and had the courage to discipline them when it was needed, when it would have been much easier to instill a sense of right and wrong in them, then the job of policeman would be a much easier and rewarding one.

Maybe I misinterpreted your letter, reading sarcasm where only genuine gratitude was meant. If so, I sincerely apologize because then you are one of the very few who take the time to be grateful.

If I did read you correctly I am sorry to say your attitude is not uncommon. I am sick and tired of hearing my husband and his associates referred to as "power happy pigs"; and these are supposedly well educated people doing the name calling. Any number of respected educators support the idea that the greatest amount of knowledge is obtained when very young, even of pre-school age. If a three-year-old has no respect for a police officer, how then can we expect our teenagers or adults to respect him?

No, society doesn't want your child to be calling the police department to report transgressions, but what a better country this would be if there was more respect and common courtesy for the institutions we as citizens have voted in and supposedly support.

Yes, God bless the Elk Grove Police Department and all other police departments whose members are ready to put their lives on the line every day.

pockets of several promoters. All that is needed, it seems, is some such reason for a summer event.

But what drives us away from this kind of group activity is that there's simply little of identity between suburbs here that would encourage this type of event — commercial greed notwithstanding.

Sociologists tell us we're a much more fragmented and mobile society than we've ever been. The automobile, the airplane and fast travel generally make us unwilling to stay in one place at one time.

So, the block party's no longer the suburban symbol. Rather, it is the moving van parked down the street. If we're looking for good times this summer, it won't be down the street or in another suburb. It'll be up in Wisconsin, or in Bermuda or in Michigan — never, never right here in River City.

But if the stadium's to become a reality, it would be an interesting idea. All we need, it seems, is some kind of event — or some kind of tradition — to build it around. If we find that, perhaps it just might work.

Watch on Washington

Starting Wednesday, Clark Mollenhoff's weekly "Watch on Washington" column will appear on the Herald's editorial page.

It's the kind of column that has won the disfavor of the Nixon, Johnson, Kennedy and Eisenhower administrations — for Mollenhoff, a Pulitzer Prize winner, is a crusading investigative reporter.

Over a period of 23 years in Washington as a writer for the Des Moines Register, Mollenhoff's played a major role in starting investigations of various governmental agencies and operations.

He won the Pulitzer Prize in 1958 for launching the investigations of Teamster bosses Beck and Hoffa — and has won three Sigma Delta Chi awards, one of which followed his exposure of tax scandals in the Truman administration.

At the beginning of the Nixon term, Mollenhoff went to work for the President as a trouble shooter. Now, he's back as a columnist, with government his beat and Watergate his special field of interest. His column is distributed by the Register and Tribune Syndicate, Inc.

Mollenhoff's a fighter. He recently stood up in a White House Press conference and demanded a public apology from Ron Ziegler, the Presidential press secretary.

"Do you feel free to stand up there and lie and put out misinformation and then come around later and say it's all 'inoperative'? That's what you're doing. You're not entitled to any credibility at all," shouted Mollenhoff.

Every Wednesday, Mollenhoff will be taking a close look at official Washington — with special attention to the John Deans, the H.R. Haldemans, the Richard Nixons and the George McGovern. You'll read it here on the Herald's editorial page.

DETROIT — Nearly 600 California motorists are spending part of each driving day looking for a service station selling unleaded gasoline for their pollution-controlled automobiles.

The General Motors and Ford cars are part of a test fleet which must have the unleaded gasoline or face destruction of catalytic converters — the costly muffler-like devices Detroit hopes will meet the federal government's demand to clean up the air.

California became the nation's testing ground by virtue of an April decision by William D. Ruckelshaus, the former administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. In granting the automakers a one-year delay in meeting emission standards for 1975, he set up interim standards — one set for California and the other for the 49 remaining states.

Detroit's only answer to reducing emissions of hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide by 90 per cent from pre-1963 vehicles is the catalytic converters. Exhaust gases pass over the platinum or palladium catalyst and the unburnt hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide are changed to harmless carbon dioxide and water.

IT ALL SOUNDS simple. But Ford has a 450-car test fleet and GM is putting more than 250 cars on the road to find out if the smog-control devices work. One thing that will ruin them is leaded gasoline.

It "poisons" the catalyst, making it useless in controlling emissions. A "poisoned" catalyst won't hurt the operation of the car. In fact, the driver probably wouldn't know the difference. But unseen pollutants — supposed to be eliminated by the $300 device — will escape into the air.

Ford's 1973 Galaxie 500 sedans are being driven by the federal General Services Administration, the state of California and McDonnell Douglas Corp. All have standard 400 cubic-inch V-8 engines and automatic transmissions.

The only outward appearance that they are different is the label on the gas-tank filler door warning against the use of leaded fuel. "low fuel" warning light on the instrument panel also warns the driver when he's down to seven gallons of gasoline in the tank, allowing him ample time to find a station offering non-leaded gasoline.

ALL 1975-MODEL CARS sold in California and some models in other parts of the country will have catalytic converters. By 1976, the entire U.S. production of new cars may be catalytic converter-equipped.

Stores to lettuce buyers —we're stuck in middle

by BERNARD BRENNER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supermarkets around the nation are being advised to tell their customers that a current lettuce boycott is based on a dispute between two unions, not a battle between workers and employers.

That view of the lettuce struggle is outlined in a memo currently being circulated by the National Association of Good Chains, a trade organization which represents many of the nation's major food retailers.

The memo says shoppers in many parts of the country are being asked to force local supermarkets "to take sides in a dispute between two unions representing lettuce harvesters in California and Arizona."

"This we cannot — and should not — do," the NAFC memo said.

SPOKESMEN for Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers have contended that the dispute involves a grower-backed effort to break their union by signing with the teamsters. But the NAFC said that unlike the grape boycott of a few years ago when the dispute was between worker and grower, "the current lettuce dispute is between two competing unions."

"Contrary to what the public has been led to believe, the question is not one of buying union or non-union lettuce. Virtually all lettuce on supermarket shelves is picked by union members," the NAFC said.

"Most of the lettuce sold in supermarkets today — 85 to 90 per cent — is harvested by members of the Teamsters Union. An estimated 5 per cent is harvested by members of the United Farm Workers Union, the prime organizer of current protests," the supermarket memo added.

NAFC OFFICIALS said that while most boycott actions are attempts to force markets to sell only UFW-harvested lettuce, Teamsters in many parts of the country are refusing to handle UFW lettuce in what the NAFC termed "a boycott against a boycott."

The NAFC noted that many employees of supermarkets are represented by the Teamsters, and any boycott against Teamster-harvested lettuce is "quite obviously a impossible position from our point of view."

The supermarket group said farm labor problems should be settled by passing new legislation to bring farm disputes — for the first time — inside the framework of federal labor law.

Panel kills night meat sale bill

An Illinois House committee chucked a bill last week that would have permitted the sale of fresh meat after 6 p.m.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Terrell Clarke, R-Western Springs, was earlier approved by the state Senate. The vote against the bill in House Human Resources Committee was 9 to 7.

The proposal was opposed by an attorney for the Meatcutters and Butchers Workmen Union, representing five Chicago area locals. It would have required merchants to sell all food items regardless of the time of day.

THE BUTCHERS contend that the matter should be settled through collective bargaining. The union also posed the spectre of rotten meat, poor selection and financial hardships on small, independent retailers that could result from the sale of meat in the evening hours. Meat sales after 6 p.m. are now prohibited by union rules in the Chicago area.

The union position was criticized by Rep. Susan Catania, R., Chicago and Rep. Bruce Douglas, D-Chicago, who cited the inconvenience to consumers caused by the restricted hours for fresh meat sales.

Hugh Muncy, president of the Illinois Retail Merchants Association, said yesterday that night meat sales would have benefited the consumer, but there is little hope for revival of the Clarke bill.

Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted for the bill. "I'm for collective bargaining," she added, but "there's nobody at the bargaining table to look out for the consumer."

"I can't see why this would increase costs, to permit the meat that's been packaged during the day to be sold any time during the day," she said. She noted that the Jewel Tea Co. opposed the measure in addition to labor spokesmen.

Managing your family's money

Don't buy a charter flight strictly on an ad claim

by MERLE E. DOWD

Q. "I've heard that peanut butter, beans and wheat do not provide complete protein when substituted for meat and fish. What is meant by a complete protein? How can I be sure I'm feeding my family balanced meals?"

A. Animal sources provide complete protein; that is, protein containing all of the eight essential amino acids that cannot be manufactured within the body.

Those amino acids must be supplied in food.

Beans are inexpensive sources of protein but are deficient in two of the essential amino acids. Corn and wheat are likewise deficient but in two different amino acids. Corn and wheat are strong in those amino acids where beans are weakest. Thus, eating beans with bread or cornmeal dishes balances each of the sources' deficiencies.

Many primitive diets have combined beans with corn successfully without knowing why. An alternative is to mix small quantities of animal or fish protein with cereal dishes. For example, a small amount of fish in a rice or noodle dish compensates for the protein deficiencies of the grains. Asians have existed for thousands of years on rice and fish. Protein from foods matched to assure balanced nutrition are called complementary proteins.

Q. "I've seen special flight tours identified as ITC. The prices appear to be higher than air fares but include hotels. Please advise me about what I can expect if I should buy an ITC."

A. ITC is the abbreviation for "Inclusive Tour Charter." An ITC, usually arranged by a travel agency, includes hotel, entertainment, sightseeing and chartered flight in one price. Similar all-inclusive tours are arranged by airlines to encourage tourist travel. But don't decide strictly from an advertisement. Ask for a brochure from those offering the charter; the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) requires the charterer to give each prospective customer a brochure to explain exactly what is covered. More important sometimes, the brochure also details what is not covered in the ITC price.

Travel group charters offering air transportation only must comply with different CAB rules. The two main requirements are that members of a group share equally in the cost of the charter; thus, no legal charter can quote a fixed fare ahead of time. The second requirement calls for a 25 per cent nonrefundable deposit to be paid at least three months before the scheduled flight.

If you have any questions about the legitimacy of charters or complaints, write to: Office of Consumer Affairs, Civil Aeronautics Board, Washington, D.C. 20420.

Q. "With prices rising every month, I don't see how we can possibly save a nickel. Besides, my husband says there's no point in saving — prices will simply climb higher next week anyway. Do others feel the same way? Or, are we just an exception?"

A. Surprisingly, many families are saving more cash now than ever. The long-term rate of savings has been 6 per cent of disposable (after-tax) income. During 1972 savings accounted for 6.8 per cent of disposable income. Indications point to a rate for 1973 of 7 per cent — possibly higher.

Two attitudes appear to prevail: Persons confident of their future may be buying more as a hedge against rising prices. This could be considered a form of hoarding. Persons with marginal employment tend to sock away increased earnings to build a security base. Instead of spending many of the billions of dollars from income tax refunds this spring, many families saved their "windfall."

How you manage your financial affairs, Mrs. B., reflects your attitude about the future. If you and others spend cash and credit in expectation of higher prices, your actions fuel the fires of inflation by pushing up demand — and prices rise. A high rate of saving slows prices and cools inflation.

TUXEDO DESIGNED by Liat Smestad consists of a wide-lapelled black and white coat, white flared pants and an orange polka dot ruffled shirt. Bikini worn by girl was also made by Liat.

A LIGHT SUMMER ensemble, Mrs. Smestad's two piece pants suit is designed in black and white cotton pique. The wide laped blazer jacket is styled with one button.

Liat Smestad's on her way

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Take note of the name Liat Anne Smestad. One day it might hug the necklines of an entire garment line. For women or men it doesn't matter. The student designer is preparing well for either one.

Though still in school at Chicago's Art Institute, Liat is already off to a very impressive start.

Named the most outstanding graduate designer last year in the fashion department of Harper College where she received an associate of arts degree, Liat has also won numerous fabric and pattern company awards and scholarships.

Yet the greatest commendation of all came this spring when she won a first prize in the Saga Mink Design Competition.

HER SKETCH called "double manche," or "double sleeves," took top honors in the category in which students were asked to create new designs to serve the same purpose as traditional stoles.

Liat's design was one of nine selected from more than 600 entries sent in from across the country. Flown to New York she spent a week visiting American furriers and talking with the pattern makers who will ultimately make up her design into the reality of a wrap... with her name on the label.

"I really want to be a good fashion designer for both men and women," said the petite homemaker from Hoffman Estates. Her entire face lights up when the New York trip is mentioned. It's given her added career incentive.

For the fashion show presented by the Art Institute this spring, Liat had among her creations a tuxedo and a very contemporary looking suit for men.

"NOW YOU ARE beginning to notice the man next to you, but before, unless he was very good looking, you never even knew he was there," said Liat in discussing how fashion has affected a man's image.

"All too often at a party the man looks as though he paid his last dime to clothe his wife for the occasion. There is no reason why he shouldn't also look good," she added.

Offering new enlarged opportunities for LIAT, WHO ENJOYS designing for men, created this suit to include a little of everything... "from Edwardian to Gatsby." She hopes to work for a large menswear manufacturer.

designers, Liat someday can see herself affiliated with a large manufacturer of menswear, though, she laughs, "There are not too many women in it yet. They still have prejudices, you know."

Preferring to work with natural fibers, the fledgling designer, who also looks like the perfect model, thinks "working with fur is fun."

"EVERYONE THINKS mink is so old looking. It doesn't have to be," she said. "I like mink because it is raised and bred, just like chickens. It's not an endangered species."

"I've been interested in fashion all my life," continued Liat, who learned to sew for herself as a child growing up in Saigon. "It was part of our French education."

Liat first came to the U.S. on a scholarship to study journalism at Mundelein College. She quit when she met and married her husband, James. The Smestads have two children, Liat, 12, and Jimmy, 7.

Returning to school on a part-time basis about four years ago, Liat made up her mind to finish up full-time after completing her two-year degree at Harper.

"MANY THINGS can inspire a design," smiled Liat who may, when she gets a good idea, stay up all night perfecting it.

"The blue sky, historical costume books, a building... even the people on the streets. One has to have many resources for ideas. You have to be aware all the time of things around you. I'm continually sketching and sometimes even though the design may look very good on paper, after I make it up in muslin, I will reject it."

For herself Liat prefers simple clothes but enjoys dressing up when the occasion calls for it.

"Clothes should add compliments to the wearer rather than the wearer complement the clothes," she continued. "One should never walk in and buy exactly what she sees on a model. It's better to add personal touches... to make it different... to make it you."

IT'S DIFFICULT to foresee what Liat will be doing a year from now with fine arts diploma in hand. Playfully she admits to asking her husband to transfer to New York where lie the greatest opportunities for budding designers. It's not that Chicago isn't fashion conscious, but the midwestern city does not host any big clothing manufacturers.

But in the meantime, Liat Anne Smestad has managed to build up her own clientele. She designs for people in the area and has among her orders several requests for men's suits.

LIAT ANNE SMESTAD of Hoffman Estates models her ruffled evening gown of silk organza. The dress is deceiving. For a different look, the bottom ruffles may be removed and worn over the shoulders as a matching cape.

If you are a club president or publicity chairman, you don't really need a printed, personal invitation to the Herald's September publicity workshops. You're all invited.

However, if you wish a letter with details of the workshop, and also so that our women's department can keep its records up to date, please fill in and mail the club coupon which appears on an inside page of this section.

Each delivery of mail brings us a few dozen more coupons, but there are still lots of clubs that have not responded.

If you are a member of any women's group (except PTA) whose news appears in the Suburban Living section of the Herald and you think your president might not have seen the coupon, please call it to her attention.

When past is future perfect

Now that school is ending, I find it is time to change seasonal gears again. No matter what the weather, the eternal presence of the children tells me that it is summer. Therefore, I must plan to do summer things.

My best friend and next door neighbor, Alice Flaxton, and I were recently discussing this need for warm weather plans.

It began when one day I called Alice over the fence, and we began to chat. I was only trying to make conversation when Alice practically jumped down my throat. My exact words that drew her reaction were, "Alice, what are you going to do this summer?"

I meekly protested Alice's violent response to a harmless question.

When she calmed down, Alice explained, "When I hear that question I feel guilty if I don't have some great plans to build a boat in the basement, do a mosaic mural on the kitchen wall or take the kids rubber rafting down the Colorado River."

"I THINK I see what you mean," I said. "Everyone I know is doing something terrific this summer."

"What are you going to do?" Alice asked cautiously.

"I don't know. The only things I think I should be doing are those I vowed to do when the kids went back to school last fall."

"You never got to those projects?" Alice asked, hardly hiding her amazement.

"Not a one," I replied sadly. "And when someone asks my plans for this season, I'm afraid to tell them about re-finish the dining room furniture, painting the bedrooms and making curtains for the bathroom."

"But why not use them again? Those are great projects!" Alice suddenly brightened.

"But I never seem to get them done," I protested.

"Listen," Alice said to me in her all-knowing tone, "it just occurred to me that people don't judge you on WHAT you do, but on what you PLAN to do."

"I'M NOT SURE THAT Alice is 100 per cent correct on this one but I'll give it a try for the summer. If it works, I'll use the same plan again when people ask what I am going to do when the kids are back in school this September. Then maybe, if no one has remembered that I planned these things before, I'll plan them again for when the children all get into high school. Then we'll try for when they leave home, get married and for the time when my husband retires."

Sometimes it pays to plan for making plans.

Four conventions this summer for Mrs. Titcomb

Mrs. W. E. Titcomb of Palatine is convention-hopping this summer.

The very active oldster is representing local units of both the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War and the Women's Relief Corps at state and national meetings this month and later in August.

Last week she was in Moline, Ill., for the 79th annual department convention of the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War. She represented Chicago Tent 12 as the department patriotic instructor. Marie was appointed historian and thus will be a delegate to the national convention at Des Moines, Iowa, in August.

This week she travels to Kankakee as a delegate of Sutherland Women's Relief Corp. 69 of Palatine. The department convention takes place there Thursday through Saturday.

Again in August Marie will be taking off for the national Relief Corps gathering in San Francisco.

Fashion by Genie

Fashion designers are calling the new fall clothing lines the "luxury look" and although they refer to the rich, handsome apparel that is replacing the robbed-the-atlantic-ensembles, one could take them literally.

After all, prices are pretty "luxurious" these days too.

It's easy to recognize sizable increases in just the past couple of seasons. A good pair of double knit baggies are hard to come by for less than $20 and shoes . . . It is not unusual to pay $24 for high platform shoes. And how many of us average American women can afford many pairs of anything at that price?

But though dollars sneak up seasonally, it's difficult to tell just how inflation has hit the apparel industry overall. Would you believe that women's ready-to-wear prices have just about doubled since 1960? It certainly does take the fun out of shopping.

TO SHOW WHAT's happened throughout the years designer manufacturer Vera Maxwell included an updated version of a deep gray flannel skirt topped with handwoven tweed jacket in her new collection that she first introduced in 1936.

Then it cost $32 wholesale. Today the tag reads $169. That's only the beginning. Everyone knows what happens to wholesale prices before they actually reach the customer. They at least double. But it's the same mill, same designer . . . even same building. The only way I could ever afford Vera is to live in 1936 with my 1973 salary.

Feathers anyone? Though it's not necessary to rob your pillows, the word is out. It's time for another go-around with the ticklers.

Exactly what round is this? Who can tell. Feathers have been a fashion perennial since at least 1500 B.C. so fashion historians tell us. Egyptian noblemen took treasured feathered headbands to the tomb with them. Marie Antoinette lavished her royal trains with them.

Feathers are readily available in this century. They sell by the yard.

BOB BOWLING, a piece goods buyer for J. C. Penney, says his chain finds feathers a fashion sensation which is making a huge impact in the home sewing field.

Take your pick . . . ostrich or marabou. Either one will brighten up a hem, neckline or cuffs.

Feathers are durable and easy to wear. They retain their bounce, don't crush and when worn as wraps combine lightweight comfort with the warmth of fur.

Bowling added that the availability of sewing patterns incorporating feather motifs is helping to launch the new fad and also the never ending desire of American women to "be pretty and sexy." But aren't a lot of people allergic to feathers? It might just backfire.

3-day workshop set for woman's club leaders

A workshop for "risk takers" among Federated Women's Club leaders will be held June 27-29 at Allerton House, University of Illinois conference center near Monticello.

The second annual "Leadership Dialogue — Let's Communicate" is not for "passive learners" declares Mrs. V. V. Holmberg, president, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs.

"This is a major opportunity to sharpen leadership skills and learn how to develop leaders at a local level."

TOPICS INCLUDE cooperative problem solving, group decision making, reflective communication, listening skills, group development, verbal presentations, use of visuals, delegation of authority and responsibility, group motivation and self-evaluation.

Applications are being accepted in the order received. The $50 registration fee, payable to the University of Illinois, is all-inclusive. It covers dinner on June 27; all meals June 28; breakfast and lunch June 29; housing for two nights; and educational materials and instructional fees.

Additional information can be obtained from Prof. Edward Kalb, 116 Illini Hall, Champaign, 61820.

The Home Line by Dorothy Ritz

One of the great American passions has to do with growing things, indoor and out. Mention of an unusual plant triggers instant interest. Even so, I confess to surprise over the hundreds of questions that have poured in about balsam apple. Ergo, this slice of background:

There are several balsams. The apple has a generic name — Momordica Balsamina. It is an East Indian plant belonging to the gourd family. Classified as an annual, it is considered a perennial in the tropics, and this is where most of the seeds now come from. It does best in the South because it thrives in warm, well-cultivated soil. It is planted when the soil is about 65 degrees to 70 degrees. In a warm climate, the vine grows as much as 20 feet long, with wide, pointed leaves (two to four inches wide). The flowers are yellow and the two-inch, slightly warty fruit is orange when ripe. The seeds are flat, either gray or brown, slightly scalloped on the edges. Curiously, all the garden books checked make no mention of the balsam apple being used for poultices and liniments, although the unabridged dictionary does.

Tip to knit-wearers: If a snag in a knit garment got away from you before you could pull it through with one of those knit fixers, all is not lost. Sew up the hole so it won't run and cut out a few felt appliques, putting one on that area and on a few other places so it looks coordinated.

Dear Dorothy: To give cucumber slices a delicious taste and crisp them, too, I soak them overnight in salt water. —Mimi Abert

Checking on this, one of my contacts says she does this, too; that otherwise they disagree with her husband and he has to avoid them.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights Ill. 60006).

Party-goers to aid college in Indiana

Three area couples will be attending the kickoff party to raise funds for Saint Mary of the Woods (Ind.) College. The party is Saturday in the Wilmette home of the Frank Rothings.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Angelos of Palatine and the Arthur O'Grady and F. Gregory Kauls, all of Arlington Heights, are among those invited.

The fund-raiser itself is a concert, set for September, by one of the world's greatest living interpreters of Liszt, pianist Jorge Bolet. It will take place at the Auditorium Theater in Chicago. The goal is $135,000 to mark the college's 133rd anniversary this year.

Bride wears mom's gown

Barbara Joanne Sadowski wore her mother's ivory satin and lace gown of 25 years ago for her marriage May 26 to Richard Janowitz. Barbara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sadowski, 1703 Brown St., Arlington Heights, also wore her mother's long veil for the double ring service held at 3 p.m. in St. Edna's Catholic Church, Arlington Heights.

Attending Barbara as maid of honor was her sister, Joyce Lane, Buffalo Grove. Her bridesmaids were Joy Rodgers, Prospect Heights; Sue Brennan, Rolling Meadows; and her new sister-in-law, Vicky Equizable, Hialeah, Fla. All wore yellow chiffon Empire gowns and carried yellow and white French carnations with baby's breath. The bride's flowers were French carnations with stephanotis.

RICHARD, SON OF Mr. and Mrs. A. Janowitz, 1911 E. Euclid, Mount Prospect, chose his brother-in-law Al Equizable, Hialeah, as best man. Ushers were Norbert Nissen, Frank Lund, a cousin from Rolling Meadows, and Gary Buttram, Wheeling.

The Camelot Restaurant was the scene of the reception for 150 guests.

The couple honeymooned in Florida for two weeks and are now residing in an apartment at 1413 D. South, Wolf Road, Wheeling.

Barbara, a June 11 graduate of John Hersey High School, is employed by the Kitchens of Sara-Lee in Deerfield. Richard attended Wheeling High School and is with Wille Building Materials, Fox River Grove.

All of the couple's attendants are area residents. Mrs. Nancy Mostello of Rolling Meadows, Joanne's sister, was matron of honor and Jim McKimmy of Palatine, best man.

Also coming down the aisle were Joanne's sister Wendy and her two cousins, Cindy Toft of Chicago and Beverly Mosby, Barrington, as bridesmaids. Beth Mosby and Nancy Olsen, the couple's young sisters, were junior bridesmaids.

THREE OF THE groom's brothers, Ken, Bruce and Ron Olsen, were among the ushers. Also seating the guests were two of their cousins, George and Larry Olsen, Rolling Meadows, the bride's brother Dan, and her brother-in-law, Anthony Mostello.

Chip Thor, 5, of Arlington Heights, was ring bearer.

The bride and groom are living in an Arlington Heights apartment since returning from a week's honeymoon in Jamaica.

Nurses create new award

A new scholarship award for $800 was made at last week's annual luncheon of Arlington Heights Nurses Club. It honors Mrs. Charles Bloeker, a member since the club organized in November 1938, who has just retired to Florida.

Called the Marion Bloeker award, it went for the first time to Lesley Holmes, a '73 graduate of Arlington High School who will enter the University of Evansville's nursing program in fall. The school is located in Evansville, Ind.

The club's Martha Jackson award for $500 went to Patricia Schlosser who is graduating this month from Hersey High School. She will attend Marycrest College in Davenport, Iowa, to study nursing.

Another scholarship went to Mrs. Lois Kuehn, mother of three, who is attending Harper College's nursing program. The award is for $200.

The two 1972 scholarship winners received additional funds. Laurie-Jo Cox was given $200 and Margaret Sullivan $100, helping them to continue their education.

'Over the Hill'—ers show fine, graceful form.

Just sit around? Not these 'kids'

by MIKE ZAREMBA

They call themselves the "Over-the-Hill" club. Judging by what they've been doing for the last eight months, the last thing anyone could call this group is "over-the-hill."

They come strolling into the Northwest Suburban YMCA, once a week, to spend a few hours exercising and swimming.

This is an exclusive club and they know it. To belong to this club, each member must be a senior citizen — one of those 65 or older folks — the ones that supposedly just sit around all day and play checkers.

The "Over-the-Hill" gang doesn't believe that non-sense. And they'll be the first to tell anyone because they're proud.

CLAD IN THEIR shorts, T-shirts and white socks, they walk into the gym, all set to "do their thing."

Everyone starts to warm up — jogging, promenading around, moving, skating and loosening up all those beautiful bodies.

Then the class starts, as Dottie, the class instructor, calls everyone's attention.

"All right kids, let's quit the talking and get down to business."

A few laughs are heard. A few moans.

"Let's start with a few stretching exercises," she adds.

Now, what follows, is a remarkable sight, a little comical.

THERE ARE MORE than 20 of these "Over the Hill" characters gallivanting around the gym, joking around, laughing. But all of them are taking the exercises very seriously. There's a little stern determination floating around the room.

They're like a small defiant army, marching around, refusing to give in to a dirty word — old age.

They stretch muscles and move parts that were supposed to slow down awhile ago.

Any middle-aged family man, with a beer belly, who complains about putting out and having trouble tying his shoes, would bow his head in shame.

The youngest "kid" belonging to the "Over-the-Hill" club is only 69 years old. She gets teased a lot by the others.

The oldest "kid," Wilhemino Whetsone, is 84. They call her — "Miss Flexible."

ONE MAN lying down in the corner of the gym is having trouble doing his sit-ups. It seems, his advanced waistline is blocking traffic when he tries to sit up. He grunts and frowns, but he doesn't give up because he knows he's trying and that's all that counts.

When the class started, many of the folks had to start off with a few easy exercises. "A lot of them were afraid of hurting themselves. They thought if they'd bend over, they were going to break something. They've really come along. They know what they can do. My kids are really confident," Dottie said.

Mike Memit, 73, was the first member to join. He had trouble sitting on the floor and getting his legs to stretch out straight.

"When I first started I couldn't get these legs to touch. It took some work, but I can do it now," Mike said.

Now, he's even daring enough to scale a gymnast rope hanging from the gym ceiling.

About six weeks ago, the class asked Dottie if they could take some swimming lessons.

Dottie got the OK for the swimming and Carol Baranski, a YMCA staff worker and Ruth Spyrinson, a volunteer, have been lending a helping hand.

CARL SCHEIDE, 75, learned to swim for the first time in his life. Now he can joke around with all the women while goofing about in the water, like he does in the gym class.

The senior citizen physical fitness class was started in October because Dottie Koelling, women's and girl's program director for the YMCA, saw there was a need. Des Plaines and the other suburbs didn't have a program like this for the older folks.

"As you get older, the body gets stiffer as the muscles and bones tighten up. The stretching and reaching exercises get the body flexible again. The muscle tone comes back as the muscles get stronger," Dottie said.

"The exercise helps to get that blood circulating — to get it up to the brain. They become physically alert. I have heard nothing but: I feel better. I feel years younger. I can work around the house now and in the garden," Dottie added.

"Most important, they feel wanted. They want to help themselves. They don't want to give up or have people do things for them."

THE "OVER-THE-HILL" club held its graduation party last week. It was a scene of glowering eyes and smiling faces when Dottie passed out their achievement certificates. The club had grown from six to 29 members since October, they'd come a long way and they all said they were coming back next fall.

Since the class is free, everyone is going to talk it up over the summer.

All that stuff about people not caring about each other anymore doesn't apply to this unique little group. It doesn't apply to people like Dottie and the YMCA people who have helped make the "Over-the-Hill" club work.

Who says old people have to sit on rocking chairs and play checkers? Talk to the "Over-the-Hill" gang. They'll tell you different.

Stretching exercises are done before everyone goes to another gym to jog a half-mile.

The Atkins diet: 'unsafe, unscientific'

Dear Dr. Lamb — We would appreciate your evaluation of the enclosed advertisement of Dr. Atkins' diet. He contends that many fried foods, whipped cream and other things can be used in his plan, contrary to all advice all other doctors give to heart patients. Two in our family have had heart attacks. Our weights are in the safe range, but we would like to have a medical opinion of Dr. Atkins' ideas.

Dear Reader — The Council on Food and Nutrition of the American Medical Association has labeled Dr. Atkins' diet as unscientific and unsafe for the public.

While I was involved in a public TV interview, one of Dr. Atkins' associates said in my presence that Dr. Atkins and his group were not responsible for some of the statements in the advertisement which has appeared in so many national newspapers advertising his book.

The basic diet principle is not new, it's a variation of the constantly recycling low carbohydrate diets. I believe the Atkins version is a bit more dangerous to people's health because of the complete lack of carbohydrates recommended during the first week of the diet. This can cause loss of excess amounts of salt and fluid leading to faintness and fatigue. Chemical imbalance, which can occur with such a severe restriction of carbohydrates, can be particularly bad for some individuals.

I have read Dr. Atkins' book in its entirety and find a number of factual errors. For example, the implication that primitive man did not eat carbohydrates but was a hunter is not based strictly on historical facts. Primitive man actually used honey, when he could find it, as well as numerous sources of vegetables and cereals. The fat mobilizing hormone which is referred to in his book and in his advertisement has not even been identified in man. This point was made by the AMA Food and Nutrition Council.

UNLESS I'M convinced I'm going to get into trouble with it, I usually take a good look at these kinds of recommendations and even try them on myself, which I did with the Atkins diet. Within three days I was ill. I had a gross loss of energy, felt faint and weak, and had a severe headache. During the two-and-a-half-day period that I followed the diet I ate eggs and meat as he recommended, but no carbohydrates.

Because of the chemical imbalance I developed ketonuria, which he expects to develop, which is similar to what a diabetic develops in the process of going into diabetic coma. As soon as I stopped the diet, because of how bad I felt from it, and started using carbohydrates again, I quickly regained my energy and recovered from the ketosis.

It would take a small book for me to detail all of the things which I think are wrong with this kind of diet, including the point that you raised in your letter that the prolonged use of foods high in fat and cholesterol can be dangerous for the heart and circulatory system.

The diet is deficient in calcium, which, on a long-term basis, could lead to degeneration of the spine and other medical problems. In summary, let me say that I agree with the recommendations made by the AMA council, and believe that the diet is potentially hazardous for general use by the public, and I do not recommend it.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Jim: "West was pretty sure of two things. The first thing was that his opponents were probably going to make a slam and win a big rubber. The second was that his partner almost surely held an ace."

Oswald: "He could also be sure that an attacking lead in either diamonds or clubs was called for. What sort of player was East?"

Jim: "A very conservative one."

Oswald: "In that case a diamond lead was called for. East might well hold the ace of diamonds and not have doubled North's five-diamond bid."

Jim: "West did come to that conclusion and did lead the four of diamonds."

Oswald: "It looks as if West's lead worked out well, but for the wrong reason. South must have refused the diamond finesse; knocked out East's ace of spades and tried unsuccessfully to get two club discards on dummy's spades."

Jim: "Exactly so! Against a club opening South would have been forced to win the trick; take the diamond finesse; discard the 10 of spades on the diamond ace; lead the king of spades from dummy for a ruffing finesse; get back to dummy with the nine of trumps and get one club discard on the spades."

Oswald: "A tough play, but the only one. Against a quiet trump lead South would just draw trumps; knock out the ace of spades and claim."

Herald names Knotek Athlete-of-the-Year

by PAUL LOGAN

"I think he's a tremendous kid... an all-around athlete... a gentleman... and a fine neighbor."

When you talk to coaches who have worked with an outstanding young man, you expect such statements. This is especially true with someone so talented as to earn the third annual Herald Athlete of the Year award.

The men most connected with this year's worthy recipient — Andy Knotek, like Arv Herstedt, Ron Finrock and Al Berman — would quickly issue sterling statements about him after his brilliant career at Palatine High School.

But those opening words of praise came from a coach who doesn't work at Palatine, who doesn't even teach in the district — Joe Gliwa.

Hersey's head football coach has guided the first two AOY's — first Mike Pettenuzzo at St. Vitor before moving to Hersey and schooling Brad Smith. Still, he knows Andy well enough to speak of him.

"He lives about four or five houses down from me," said Gliwa, who shares the pride of Kitson Drive for Andy.

"I see him several times a week... I'd have been very happy to have driven him to school myself."

The last sentence didn't mean to Palatine but Hersey High School. For Gliwa knew only too well how talented Andy was in football. Knotek personally beat Hersey 14-6 in the final game of the regular season by scoring two touchdowns and forcing the league to use statistics to determine which team would play Elk Grove in the Super Bowl. Hersey lost the latter game, but if Gliwa would have had Andy, things might have been different.

It's safe to say that any coach in the Mid-Suburban League that had to coach against Andy would have said the same praiseworthy things. You see, this 5-foot-10, 165-pounder lettered three years in three sports. Nine varsity letters!

Varsity coaches in football, basketball and baseball have had to defend this tough little nut for a very long time. You seldom see sophomores contributing that much anymore to a varsity cause, let alone three different sports.

Few ever surpass that total. You've got to have plenty of coordination, ability and determination to start out that young. Back in the late 1940s an Arlington High School star named Bill Robinson set the area record with 13 varsity letters, but that was a time when you could double up in two sports (baseball and track) in one season.

Andy admitted that he would have loved to have tried the long jump if it would have been possible. Having gone over 20 feet once, you've got to think he might have nearly matched that seemingly impossible letter mark of 13.

In the closest voting by the Herald sports writers in three years, Andy edged out Maine West's Chris Bouchee. The latter was also outstanding in three sports. Top athletes from 15 schools covered by the Paddock Publications newspaper chain were considered.

This 18-year-old gets it honest when it comes to excelling. His father — Jack — was an eight-letter winner in high school. He and his wife both keep in good shape through various sports activities. Their example helped forge their son into what he is today.

His most recent Pirate coach — Al Berman — kind of summed up what Palatine thinks of Andy when he said:

"I think a boy like Andy Knotek comes around once in a lifetime. If I had a son, I'd like to have him be just like Andy."

Berman, who just finished his first year as head coach in baseball, was obviously sorry to see him go. Knotek was the team's most valuable player, the second time in one year he was so honored. He also won the award in football.

His records and statistics fills an 8 x 11 1/2 sheet of paper single spaced. A sprinkling of them in each sport is as follows:

Football — he led his team in three categories — rushing, scoring and punting. He averaged 5.3 yards per carry over those three falls of play and was called "among the very best kids I've worked with in 12 years of coaching" by head man Arv Herstedt.

Basketball — despite his size, he proved just as tall as the rest of the guards in the league with super hustle. "He was one of the better defensive players around," according to head coach Ron Finrock.

Baseball — he led his teammates in six offensive categories and was considered the best catcher in the MISL by many. He captained the team and was most proud of his .332 batting average, one of the best in the league.

The Herald's trophy will join an already growing display of awards he's earned. This year alone he's been honored by the Lions Club Award (for the most valuable athlete at Palatine), the American Legion School Award (voted to the most outstanding senior young man and woman, not necessarily an athlete — who are examples of good citizenship), the Bill Dietrich Memorial Award (for the batting champion) and the Fred Herbert Memorial Award (for the MVP in baseball).

"I've really enjoyed it," says Andy of his prep career. "I think the coaches at Palatine make it more fun."

For a person who has given so many thrills to Pirate fans, two questions had to be asked — what was his biggest thrill and biggest disappointment?

"I think my sophomore year at Arlington," said Andy of his top thrill, although his rookie year in football wasn't a big winning one. "Arlington was ranked fifth. We were beating them until the last two minutes of the game and we had a pretty poor team that year. I got a couple of really important tackles and that was enjoyable."

(Arlington went on to win the Super Bowl, finished unbeaten and ranked No. 2.)

"The beginning of this baseball year when I couldn't hit at all," was the big disappointment, but it didn't last long. "It was frustrating. I struck out seven times in a row — my first seven times at bat."

(Then he went on to club 19 hits, including three homers and three doubles as well as showing good speed for a catcher with seven stolen bases. So much for a disappointment!)

Only one thing has possibly marred his fine career — the way he was recruited by big colleges. Most didn't think he was big enough.

"I think they did discriminate against me because of that," admits Andy. "It seems like they always want a bigger guy — like 6-5, 210."

Andy Knotek is considering Millikin University to continue his education and his athletic career. Future awards will

Rare group Vaulters 'all have a screw loose'

by MURRAY OLDERMAN

BERKELEY, Calif. — The pole vault is an engineered sports test that compromises the personalities of people such as Dave Roberts.

Now Dave is a clean-cut college senior out of Rice University who was raised in the nice little conservative town of Conroe, Tex., hard by Cut and Shoot. His daddy raises quarter horses in the thickest country north of Houston.

There people live sedately and believe in the virtues of hard work and religion. Pole vaulters, however, are off on their own esoteric kick.

Dave Roberts of Conroe happens to be one of the best vaulters in the world, a man who confidently believes he may be the one ultimately to crack the 19-foot barrier.

Why does one devote young adulthood to scampering down a runway, fiberglass stick in hands, planting the pole and then as it bends from the centrifugal force, literally rocketing over a cross bar at perilous heights.

"Pole vaulters," confessed Dave during his exercises for the fifth annual Kennedy Games at the University of California, "all have a screw loose. They dive off mountain cliffs."

It is true that when the pole vaulting contingent which would represent the United States in the Olympic Games trained on the Maine coast last summer, the vaulters did "Perils of Pauline" routines — flips and full gainers while soaring off precipices into the ocean.

"I like to dive off cliffs myself," says Roberts, a mild-mannered young man of 22. "It's safer sometimes than vaulting."

Twice after ascents with a pole, he has completely missed the pit, which is filled with foam chips to cushion an 18-foot fall in which a guy might land plumb on his back. Once he bruised a heel. The other time he landed on his right shoulder and didn't feel a thing — a soreness set in three days later.

Since Dave also intends to be a doctor some day, in orthopedics, if he can get accepted to a medical school, the motivation for pole vaulting is all the more puzzling.

"It's kind of an elation," he explains, "to find the pole recoil in your hands and find yourself shooting through the air."

Dave first sensed the joy when he was in the sixth grade and out in the backyard he and some other kids were high jumping over a makeshift bar. He saw an old pine log, picked it up as an aid to jumping and was converted permanently to pole vaulting. By the time he was graduated from high school, he had cleared 15-feet-8 and had gained a track scholarship from Rice, where "jocks are at the bottom of the pole."

In his part of Texas, the normal kid with athletic talent gravitates to football. Not Dave, who is built like a wide receiver at 6-2 and 175. "I never liked the sport," he says. "I'm too independent-minded to take orders as part of a team."

He has twice been the NCAA pole vault champion, won the 1972 AAU title and was the first collegian to clear 18 feet, last summer in Seattle.

"I have a feeling," he says candidly, "that I can jump a lot higher than anybody's ever jumped." That's because he maintains he understands the physics of the event better than his contemporaries such as Bob Seagren (the world record holder at 18-feet-5 1/4") and Steve Smith, who rely on their natural abilities to whip over a cross bar.

"It's easy to use a pole as a rubber band," he adds. "Nobody is using the fiberglass pole to the utmost advantage."

The world class vaulting fraternity is exclusive. Besides Seagren, who is now a pro, there are Roberts, Kjell Isaksson of Sweden, Jan Johnson and Wolfgang Nordwig of East Germany, the Olympic champ. Also Smith, an effusive, extroverted type who is Roberts' nemesis and currently the hottest vaulter in the world.

"To me," says Roberts, "vaulting's an art, to get the maximum out of what you have. Smith's approach is the exact opposite of mine."

Smith is a hot dog who relates to the crowd and the excitement and leaves the deeper meaning to Roberts. He also has generally beaten Roberts, whose one big crushing failure was not making the Olympic team.

"Still," Dave rationalizes, "I'm satisfied with what I've done. Until the Olympics, vaulting was the only thing in my life. Now I realize there are other things."

It is why, despite the rise of professional track, he will not jump for money. "I don't want to have to jump," he says. "It's simply a hobby to me."

Like, for instance, diving off cliffs. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Area wrestlers visit New York for tour, matches

Wrestlers Craig Mann and Rick Morris of Elk Grove plus Kent Lewis of Wheeling are part of a group sponsored by the Illinois Wrestling Federation currently touring and wrestling in New York.

The group arrived in New York on Sunday for a series of five meets in six days. The Illinois party will return home this Sunday after the cultural exchange concludes with a banquet on Long Island.

While in New York, the Illinois wrestlers will stay in the homes of prep wrestlers from that state.

Other events planned for this summer include a July visit to Illinois by a group of All-Star wrestlers from Oregon.

Also in July, the Junior National Championships will be held at the University of Iowa in Iowa City.

Dave Roberts gets set to take off in pole vault.

Bellwood legion socks Arlington

Bellwood struck for nine runs in the first two innings, then hung on to defeat Arlington Heights Post 208, 12-7, in legion baseball.

It was the second loss in as many starts for defending state champion Post 208, which was unable to play games on Friday against Genoa plus a Saturday doubleheader against Mundelein.

Mundelein had given Arlington its season opening loss last week. Makeup dates have not been determined for either the Friday or Saturday rainouts.

Ninth District play was to begin Sunday for Post 208 with a home doubleheader against Norwood Park. But Saturday's heavy rains also made that date doubtful.

Against Bellwood, losing pitcher Tom Good was shelled for nine on eight hits and four walks in just one and two-third innings.

A big play that went against Arlington occurred with two outs and the bases loaded during Bellwood's seven-run second. A misplayed fly ball allowed all three runners to take the plate, putting the game out of reach.

Arlington Heights' pitching was tougher afterwards behind Jim Hopkins, Mark Blasco and Mark Leonard. Hopkins threw two and one-third innings on a yield of no runs, one hit, five strikeouts and no walks. Blasco worked one inning, the fifth, when he gave up two runs on three hits. He recorded no walks or strikeouts.

The last two innings belonged to Leonard. He gave up one run on no hits in the sixth, then no runs and one hit in the seventh.

Arlington picked up a single run in the third when Mike McGrath came home on a Greg Hauptly infield grounder. Then, they struck for six runs in the fifth to draw within 11-7 after Bellwood had made it an 11-1 game in the visitors' at-bats.

Post 208's big inning started with Leonard's triple and a run-scoring sacrifice fly by Hauptly. Then, Mike Broderick doubled.

That two-bagger was followed by run-scoring singles from Dan Cummingham, Alie Weicher, George Vukovich and Bob Harth. When Rick Sidor reached on an error at second, the inning's fifth run scored. Sidor came home on Leonard's second hit of the inning, a single.

Games early this week for Coach Lloyd Meyer's outfit will include Arlington at Mundelein on Tuesday and Barrington visiting Arlington on Wednesday.

JACKIE OLIVER FOR UOP. Internationally prominent racing driver Jackie Oliver of England, shown above, plus George Follmer of Arcadia, Calif., will comprise Universal Oil Products' entry in this weekend's Swedish Grand Prix at the Scandinavian Raceway. This will be the first Grand Prix competition over on that track, one which Oliver has raced many times. Follmer, in his rookie year of Formula 1 racing, has recorded two placings in four races for the UOP team. He placed sixth in South Africa and third in Spain. In addition to using lead-free fuel, the UOP Shadows employ special form-fitting seats, flexible braided steel hoses and titanium support tubing. Both Shadows were built in the United Kingdom. Universal Oil Products maintains its world headquarters in Des Plaines.

Prospect's Kelley turns in top pitching effort

Action begins in high school summer league baseball

Prospect got the benefit of two outstanding pitching performances over the weekend, but could only come away with a split as the Illinois High School Summer League Baseball contests began in the Northwest Division.

The Knights tamed Elk Grove, 4-2, behind Kevin Kelley's nifty two-hitter while Mike Chamura yielded only six hits and one run, but Prospect lost a tense 1-0 decision to Maine South a day later.

Kelley, having posted an unblemished 3-0 mark for Prospect's varsity during the recently concluded high school season, picked up where he left off by hand-cuffing Elk Grove on a dozen strikeouts and just two walks.

Elk Grove reached the powerful right-hander for both its hits in the Green's two-run fourth frame. John Geiger started the inning with a single and promptly stole second. Mike Pahl drew a pass and both advanced into scoring position on a wild pitch.

John Romano lofted a fly to left, but a rifle throw beat Geiger at the plate. The collision, though, forced the Prospect catcher to drop the ball for the first run and Dave Ray's single moments later produced Elk Grove's second tally.

Prospect had stalked Kelley to a 1-0 advantage in the second on Mike Radoli's single, a wild pitch, a sacrifice by Laddie Janda and a ground out by Mike Moretti.

The Knights matched Elk Grove's pair in the fourth to take the lead for good on Paul Obochowski's leadoff homer over the rightfield fence. Kelley's double and a Tom Garms single.

Radoli drilled his second hit of the game in the sixth — a double to left — advancing on a wild pitch and scoring on Garms' second RBI single.

KNIGHTS BLANKED

John Klippstein Jr., son of former Cub hurler Johnny Klippstein, dazzled Prospect on just three hits and made teammate Norm Pagone's first-inning home run stand up as Maine South won 1-0.

Prospect threatened on numerous occasions, but failed to dent the score-board. In the second, Mark Latner's one-out triple was wasted and in the third, the Knights loaded the bases with two outs but couldn't produce.

Chmura absorbed the tough-luck setback despite walking only one and fanning three. Paul Obochowski, Latner and Mark Keane supplied the Knights' hits.

FALCONS WIN SLUGFEST

Pitching was Forest View's lifeblood during the spring season, but the Falcons of coach Tom Speidel changed the script by winning a slugfest, 9-8 over Crystal Lake, in the first Summer League game for both teams. Frank Darras, who has just completed his freshman season, pitched the distance and allowed nine hits.

After falling behind 2-0 in the first inning, the Falcons tied it in the second on a wild pitch and bases-loaded walk to Ken Butzen followed three other walks.

Forest View added two more in the third on a wild pitch and groundout by Bill Black after a single by Tom Culkar and two walks.

Crystal Lake erupted for four in the third for a 6-4 lead, but the Falcons came right back to tie it in the fourth when catcher's interference scored one run and Darras' sacrifice fly another after a walk and singles by Butzen and Campbell.

Forest View again fell behind by two but won it with a three-run fifth. In order Dave Fulton singled, Black reached on an error, Bill Simon singled, Butzen's groundout scored one run and Campbell's single brought in the tying and winning runs.

VIKINGS OPEN STRONG

Fremd opened the Summer High School League with a lot of new faces on the varsity level but the same habit from the spring — winning. The Vikings sailed 8-2 past Schaumburg, a last-minute addition to the league.

Three Vikings shared the pitching duties and all were effective — Mitch Guillett, Dave Nelson and Jim Reber. Schaumburg used Brian Youngberg and Keith Abraham.

Fremd broke the ice in the first inning when Bob Burke tried to knock in Jeff Hanisch, who had singled.

The Saxons equalled that run in the second on Doug Olson's triple and an error, but the Vikings forged ahead comfortably with a three-run second. Bill Buillard walked, Jeff Schroeder singled, Jeff Brisson smashed a ground-rule double, Hanisch walked and Burke singled.

Fremd added two-spots in the fifth and sixth. In the fifth both runs scored on the second error of the inning and in the sixth, in order, Brisson singled, stole second, Burke tripled and Mark Otteman got his second hit.

Schaumburg's final run in the fourth came on a single by Bob Poplar after two walks and an error.

WILDCATS RALLY FOR WIN

John Carlberg's two-out single in the bottom of the seventh drove in pinch-runner Scott Hildebrandt with the winning run as Wheeling edged Rolling Meadows, 5-4, in the season-opening High School Summer League contest for both schools.

Trailing 4-2 upon entering the last of the seventh, Wildcat George Kango singled, stole second and crossed on Al Newman's single. Two walks, a stolen base and Carlberg's bounce over the mound, just beyond the reach of Meadows' shortstop, proved decisive.

Wheeling drew first blood in the contest when Carl Pfister drew a leadoff pass in the first, advanced on a infield out and tallied on an error on a line drive to left by Newman.

Meadows captured a 2-1 margin in the third on an error, walks to Dan Jordan and Joe Riplinger, a throwing miscue and Bruce Hanson's first of two hits.

Wheeling countered with the tying marker in the bottom of the third on two walks, a double steal and Newman's sacrifice fly to center, but the Mustangs got the go-ahead marker in the fifth on a hit batsman and singles by Hanson and

Jeff Dargis and added their final counter in the seventh on Hanson's walk and a two-out single by Hall.

ELK GROVE COASTS

Elk Grove scored 10 times in the first four innings and coasted to a 10-4 victory over Crown in the Summer High School league last Thursday.

The Grenadiers tallied their winning run in the third when Paul Gulliksen doubled off the left-center field fence and John Strybel came through with an RBI single up the middle. Earlier in the inning, Randy Romano hit a towering home run over the fence in left field.

Elk Grove came up with an unearned run in the first when John Geiger reached on a two-base error in the outfield, then scored on a passed ball and a wild pitch.

With one out in the second, Steve Sheridan beat out an infield hit and Ritts singled. A ground out moved the runners into scoring position and Geiger singled to left, scoring Sheridan and Ritts.

In the fourth, Elk Grove used three Crown errors to score five runs, all after two were out. Glen Stromberg singled, Scott Scholten was safe on an error and Romano walked to load the bases. Then Gulliksen reached on an error by the shortstop, Stromberg scoring. Strybel took second on a two-base boot down the left-field line and two more runs scored. Finally Sheridan ripped a hit to right good for two more RBIs.

Crown scored all four of its runs off Grenadier starter Rick Eckhardt in the fifth with a bases-loaded triple and a single. Eckhardt gave up two of his three walks in this inning.

ARLINGTON FALLS

Joe Losos was the losing pitcher in relief last Thursday when Addison Trail defeated Arlington, 6-2, in high school summer baseball.

Arlington picked up single runs in the second and fifth innings. Starting pitcher Don Kamps recorded five strikeouts in three innings for Arlington.

Further details were unavailable, and they were also unavailable on Hersey's openers.

Capsizing: boating's major killer

Capsizing is boating's number one killer.

It accounted for 74 of the 1,437 boating fatalities reported in the U.S. last year. No other category came close to matching its grim toll.

Yet most capsizing deaths could be prevented, according to a spokesman for the nation's largest small boat insurer.

"Many weekend sailors don't appreciate how dangerous capsizing can be," Carl S. Cichon, director of Marine Services for State Farm Fire and Casualty Company, said. "They tend to think of it as just a dunking."

In a statement issued on the eve of National Safe Boating Week, Cichon said the fatality rate could be reduced considerably if boaters recognized the causes of capsizing and tried to avoid them.

He said statistics show the craft most likely to capsize is an open outboard motorboat less than 16 feet long.

"But that doesn't mean larger boats are invulnerable," Cichon added. "Under the proper circumstances, any vessel can turn turtle."

In most cases, he noted, the accident can be traced to operator negligence, such as overloading.

He pointed out that many small boat manufacturers display a plate on their craft indicating its recommended capacity — either the number of persons or the total weight of persons, motor, fuel and gear that can be accommodated safely.

Cichon said if a boat doesn't carry a manufacturer's plate, the owner can determine its capacity by using the following formula:

Measure the overall length and maximum width of the boat to a tenth of a foot (i.e., six inches equals five-tenths of a foot). Multiply these two figures. Divide the total by 15. Taken to the nearest whole number, the result gives the number of persons that can be put aboard under good weather conditions.

Knowing his boat's capacity, Cichon said, the owner should then make sure he has enough Coast Guard-approved personal flotation devices for every passenger. This is now mandatory under the Federal Safe Boating Act of 1971.

"Any time there's the slightest doubt as to the safety of a situation, the skipper should have everyone don his flotation device immediately," he advised.

"Children, of course, should wear flotation gear at all times on board," he added.

Cichon suggested telling someone where you plan to go and how long you plan to stay before setting out for a day on the water. Be sure the person has a good description of your boat. Should you fail to return because of a mishap, rescue parties will know the area to search.

"Don't forget to notify the person as soon as you get back, he continued. Otherwise you may inadvertently set off an unnecessary rescue operation.

Standing up or shifting positions is a major cause of capsizing and falls overboard in smaller boats, according to Cichon.

"The only advice anyone can offer is: don't do it," he said.

Getting caught in rough water is another factor contributing to capsizing fatalities, he said. If the boat is overloaded, the chance of tragedy striking is greatly increased.

That peril can be averted by avoiding potentially dangerous waters and by heading for shore at the first sign of a storm, he noted.

If a boat should capsize, the number one rule is to stay with it, Cichon said.

"Even if they are swamped, most boats will continue to float," he observed. "If you stay with the boat, you stand a far better chance of being located by a search plane or another boat."

Above all, he warned, one should resist the temptation to swim for shore. The distance often is deceptive. And even a good swimmer wearing a flotation device can be swept away by strong, unseen currents.

CDTA announces record 56 summer tournaments

A record 56 summer tournaments, more than $55,000 for junior development and an expanded junior inter-sectional play schedule were announced last week by the Chicago District Tennis Association (CDTA).

The CDTA board approved an $80,850 budget for 1973-74 concluding $48,000 for inner city "Youth Action" programs and "Excellence" and "Super Excellence" programs at various metropolitan indoor locations.

Also budgeted was substantial assistance to such inter-sectional competitions as the Junior Davis Cup for boys through age 21, Junior Wightman Cup for girls through 21 and National City boys' and girls' teams where the age limit is 18.

Grant Golden, CDTA president, said he was particularly gratified with the way the Youth Action programs are beginning to bear fruit.

Where has all the glamor gone?

The final fling for Bo Belinsky

(First of two related articles)
by MURRAY OLDERMAN

It wasn't that long ago. Bob Belinsky was the handsomest of pitchers, Jackie Jensen, one of the great natural athletes of America, performed mightily with a bat. For them, in their golden youth, there were only the good days. And then, abruptly they passed. The sports dream gave way to reality. They struggled in the oblivion of personal failure. Recently, they have received renewed attention — Bo for a new book, Jackie Jensen for a new book. Their stories bring us up to date.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — At a recent White House dinner, the perceptive Henry Kissinger spied the tightly packed Mamie Van Doren and managed to get himself seated next to the Hollywood blonde.

The first thing Mr. Kissinger, who just was back from Paris, said to Mamie was:

"How's Bo?"

Now there's a bit of historical commentary, from the man who negotiates world peace agreements. Bo Belinsky, who used to go with Mamie Van Doren in a torrid episode that won't make the baseball archives. Who last pitched in the major leagues for eight innings with the Cincinnati Reds in the season of 1970.

On a winter morning in late 1971, Maury Allen, a New York baseball writer, mused in his office, "I wonder what happened to Bo Belinsky?"

He called Trenton, N.J., and talked to Mrs. Belinsky, a good Jewish mother from the Bronx, and she didn't know where her boy Bo was. But she remembered a girl friend of Bo who might. The girlfriend pitched Allen a number in Malibu Beach, Calif.

Bo was there. He was living with a hooker.

And why, he wondered to Allen, would a young boy care about Robert (Bo) Belinsky, one-time toast of the California Angels, pitcher of a memorable no-hitter, driver of an El Dorado Cadillac?

Where has all the glamor gone?

Bo Belinsky, to whom every day was a long night, is now a 36-year-old man with a few fringes of gray, still a handsome, slim guy whose life is a hustle. He has moved on from Malibu. He hangs around Las Vegas these days shooting pool, playing cards, picking up a buck or a broad with equal diffidence, subsisting on coffee and cigarettes and vodka.

And wondering — even Bo has this introspective streak — why it all turned bad for him. Not with malice. Because Bo never really cared. Baseball, girls, pool — they were just part of the scene he was drifting through. There was also a marriage, to a Playboy bunny, and a child, to whom he is fiercely devoted. They're both gone, too.

It all comes out sad. Allen who dredged up Bo on a whim, has written the story in a book called simply "BO" — with an appended "Pitching and Wooing" (Dial Press). It confirms that, ultimately, Bo was an inconsequential figure who wandered into and out of baseball with the nonchalance of a guy hitching a highway ride. He is as dead, figuratively, as Walter Winchell, who adopted him in Los Angeles and lined up the broadsides and made him a titillating gossip item.

Suddenly, only a decade later, it seems archaic.

When Allen convinced the publishers that Bo's rise and decline was worth full treatment, the Howard Hughes hoax by Clifford Irving was big news in the book world. So they said to Allen, "Before we sign any contract, you have to produce Belinsky."

They wanted to make sure there was still a Bo.

Now he's on the appearance circuit to plug the book, for which he provided "uncensored cooperation" and this gives him a shot at being a personality again, with television appearances and staged press conferences in the big cities. It gives Mamie Van Doren, the old "dancer" for whom he retains genuine fondness, a chance to bask, too.

"What shall I wear for the press conference?" she asked.

"Wear the dress you wore the night you met Bo."

It was, as all her clothes are, one size too small.

Mamie in her hey-day used to pull up to the drab frame Trenton house of the Belinskys in a chauffeured limousine and come in for a cup of coffee with Bo's ma. But that's all past.

And so really is Bo, who after his flurry of attention will recede again to obscurity.

The prurience in us reacts again to the telling of Bo's escapades with women and song — he wasn't very deep into wine as a player — and emphasizes that Bo was a fun guy who happened to be gifted with a strong left arm, a handsome face and an insouciance that turned females on.

Baseball has had its gay desperadoes, particularly among pitchers, going back to Rubt Waddell, and including Boots Poffenberger and Bill Loos. Bo belongs in that class of screwball. But the truth is, he won only a total of 28 games in a spotted big league career. Not really the substance of achievement to fill a book.

But then, Henry Kissinger remembered him well.

Bob Kromm registers 33 in Old Orchard Scratch

After the seventh night of play in the Old Orchard Scratch League last Friday, team play is really tightening as competition becomes more keen and more properly balanced.

Four pairs of competing teams earned four and three points respectively with the greatest spread of points between C. P. Floors and Bob Burrows Chevrolet teams, a duel which ended 4½ to 2½ points.

The C. P. Floors group remained solidly in first place by 3½ points over second place Silo Restaurant. The Floors boys, lead by Bob Altergott's 33, won four of five matches from Bob Burrows Chevy, good for 4½ points. George Johnson's one-over-par 37 captured the only win for the Chevy team.

Miles and Miles Insurance moved up a notch in team standings as they took four points in a close battle with L-Nor Cleaners. Bob Lee of the Cleaners five turned in his best score of the year, a 38, but opponent Mike Melchiorre also scored his best, a 35, good for the win.

Bob and Rich Kromm helped the Sauganash Corp. team move up in the standings as they scored their best nines of the year, a 33 and 35 respectively, good for two wins and four points over Peters and Co. Realtors. John Keeley of the Peters five was really hot on the sticks as he turned in his best, a 35.

Robert L. Nelson Realty, led by Tom

Wallace's 36, took four points from Baird and Warner, thereby moving up one notch in the standings. Cliff Haemker turned in a tremendous 35 for the Bairds, 10 strokes below average score this year.

Bill Hugo's best-of-year 37 led the Silo Restaurant team to four points over Arlington Realty. Bill Kleiner turned in his year's best, a 39, to help the Realty cause.

Winners of the gold balls donated by Sauganash Corp. and Silo Restaurant for closest-to-the-pin on the par three holes were as follows: Jack Drazba on number 3, Bill Hugo on number 7, Jack Peters on number 11, and Tom Wallace on number 14. Unfortunately, none of these closest-to-the-pin shots resulted in a duce.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Babe Ruth, best known for his 714 home runs, also stole 123 bases during his major league career.

Hoffman Estates, Streamwood collect shutout wins in Irving Lake action

It was shutout time Friday evening in the Irving Lake Babe Ruth League.

Hoffman Estates and Streamwood wrapped up the victories to maintain their 1-2 status in the league for boys 16 to 18 years old.

Coach Lou Bocci's Bucks of Hoffman Estates fashioned a 5-0 victory over Bartlett in a game called after five and one-half innings.

Right-hander Frank Hannon fanned 10 and walked only two in a route-going performance that saw him work out of one bases-loaded jam with a double play pitch.

"Defensively, the kids turned in a couple fine plays," praised Hoffman Manager Lou Bocci. "Ironside (Jeff) got the double play started on a short to home to first base situation and Neil Thompson made a great diving catch in short center on a short pop.

"Considering the footing out there because of the rain earlier, it was an extremely well-played game. Hannon did just a great job."

Hoffman scored two in the first with Wayne Bihun and Bill Gawron delivering the key hits, and added singletons in the third, fourth, and fifth. Ironside and Thompson also contributed run-scoring blasts.

Hoffman will be idle now until facing Hanover Park next Wednesday.

Streamwood's powerful club capitalized on an error with two outs in the sixth inning to nail down a 3-0 victory over Schaumburg.

Harris had tripped with two outs but a ground ball was misplayed and an error, walk, and single later, Streamwood had its three runs.

"Our pitchers have been doing a fine job," said Schaumburg Manager Homer Homer, "but we've been guilty of some mechanical mistakes that have hurt."

Ray Kralceek pitched a strong three-hitter for the losers and now has given up only five hits in two games.

Dan Gallagher, John Miltvick, and Tony Aiello collected the three hits for Schaumburg but every rally fell short.

Berger was the winning pitcher for Streamwood, striking out six.

Schaumburg will battle Bartlett tonight at 6:15.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

Chick Evans says Midlothian greens could cause Western Open headaches

In the opinion of one of golf's all-time "greats" — Charles (Chick) Evans — the greens at Midlothian Country Club are going to create many problems for even the game's finest players when the 70th Western Open championship is contested, June 23-July 1, at the old, well-kept course on Chicago's far south side.

"Many greens at Midlothian are shaped like some of those I've played many times at St. Andrews, Carnoustie and Muirfield," said Evans, founder of the Evans Scholars Foundation for education of ex-caddies and a U.S. Open champion (1918) who won the Western in 1919.

"Many English fairways, running straight, end up at the left of the green, like several of Midlothian, in contrast to so many holes on American courses which have the fairways running straight into the greens. The English diagonally shaped greens, like several at Midlothian, have made it difficult for many fine American players and this could prove to be the case at the Western this year.

"Midlothian has the most intelligent bunkering and green service of any Chicago District course. With its long history (it was built in 1898), the course reflects the wishes of members who have played many times at courses around the world and when course changes were made they came from suggestions made by members. It is one of the prize courses on which to see interesting golf and in my opinion long has been an under-estimated course which has never received the top rating it deserves," said Evans.

Don Pauley, professional at Midlothian, is another who feels the greens are going to cause trouble in the Western.

"The green at the 10th hole actually has three levels," said Pauley, "and a green equally hard to read is that at the 11th, a 203-yard hole which has been called one of the toughest in the area. We have some new greens, but some of the older ones (the 9th and 18th are exactly where they were when the course was built 75 years ago) have different types of grasses which creep in over the years and the result has been to create an optical illusion which has resulted in three putts — and sometimes four."

Midlothian plays 36-35-71 over 6,654 yards. Not especially long, but in 1969, when Billy Casper won his third Western crown at Midlothian, he had a 276 total, eight under par. Only three others finished under the regulation 284 figure.

Logan Square's pitchers continued to excel as the Lions notched their third consecutive shutout victory, this time a 6-0 blanking of Barrington Thursday night at St. Viator.

Paul Kastner, who will be a junior next fall, went the distance for coach Larry Norellini's squad, which raised its pre-conference record to 8-3. Kastner scattered four hits, striking out six Barrington batters and walking just three.

Logan Square got on the board for the first inning, scoring what turned out to be the winning run. And they did it simply. Bob Foster singled but went all the way to third when a Barrington outfielder misplayed the ball. Foster scored on Ed Collins' sacrifice fly.

The Lions took advantage of another error to add a second-inning rally. Jim Bucaro reached on an infield boot and tallied when Tom Chapman belted a long triple down the third-base line. Mark Rickerson's sacrifice fly brought in Chapman.

Four singles and two walks produced three more in the fourth. Rickerson and Kastner got base hits and Foster drew a base on balls to fill the sacks. Then Collins contributed an RBI single, Jim Dumke walked to force a run in, and Stan Bobowski whacked a run-scoring base hit to end the Lions' scoring.

Bobowski collected two of the Lions' seven safeties. Logan Square spent the weekend on a trip which sent them to Peoria, Pekin and Champaign. The Lions open Ninth District play tonight at home against Wheeling.

RETAILER-OF-THE-YEAR in the Furniture Stores — Class 1 category, Neale R. Skorberg (left), president of Skorberg's Furniture, receives his award from Herbert A. Abramson, board member of the Brand Names Foundation. This was the 25th year the Foundation has sponsored the competition for the "Oscar" of retailing.

Management changes made by Walgreen Drug Stores

Walgreen Co. has announced three corporate level management changes. S. Thomas Clements becomes the nationwide drug store chain's Physical Distribution Operations Manager; Eileen Rosenbarger has been promoted to Manager of the Sales and Cash Control Office, 6314 W. North Ave., Chicago; and Harold S. Shapiro, R.Ph., has been promoted to the newly created position of Corporate Manager of T.E.A.M.,

Corrective shoes are his specialty

M. Morris, owner of Palatine Shoes, Palatine Plaza, recently celebrated his 35th year in selling and fitting orthopedic shoes for children. Morris is European born and learned his trade as all European tradesmen do — by serving a three year apprenticeship before being allowed to work out-right with the public.

Morris has been at the Palatine location for nine years and it is presently the largest outlet in Palatine handling infant orthopedic footwear.

Because Palatine Shoes carries all types of prescriptive shoes for youngsters, Morris is able to fill the doctor's prescription promptly and precisely. Palatine shoes carries a complete line of Childlife brand footwear.

Walgreens' innovative program devoted to improving customer service by improving overall store productivity.

Clements graduated from Creighton University with a B.S. degree in business administration in 1963 and joined the nation's largest drug store chain earlier this year.

Mrs. Rosenbarger joined Walgreens in 1963 as a Head Cashier. She was promoted to the firm's Accounting Department in 1969, and to Assistant Manager of the Sales and Cash Control Office in 1970.

Shapiro began his Walgreen career in 1956 as an Apprentice Pharmacist, and graduated from Drake University in 1957 with a B.S. degree in pharmacy. He was promoted to Assistant Store Manager in 1958, to Store Manager in 1961 and to Walgreens' T.E.A.M. staff in 1972.

Easy to learn music lessons now available

A new and easy way to learn to play the piano or organ is now available to the public. Learning is accomplished through the means of an electronic teaching group.

According to Gil Bowen, owner of Olsen's Musicland of Palatine, and who has 30 years of music teaching behind him, with this method, musical experience is not a prerequisite. All that is needed is a knowledge of the alphabet.

The student can learn a simple song in the first 30 minute lesson, Bowen said, and no one hears him but the teacher.

This teaching method allows the student to sit down and play or create music in complete privacy with his progress being recorded on a cassette tape. There is no keeping up with the class or comparison to anyone else.

Group teaching, through the use of earphones connected to the student's instrument and to the teacher's manual, is fast becoming the most successful way of teaching, Bowen said.

Many people over the years have felt compelled to stop lessons because progress was slow. This new, method, however, is different in that it demands no technical ability. Confidence is built through the students' accomplishments, increasing his desire to play, according to Bowen.

The approach in a nutshell — the student learns to create music first, not master the instrument.

Bright days ahead for sun products

Sun products, a long neglected category in department and specialty stores, will see a new aggressive marketing policy by better cosmetic franchise lines, according to manufacturers in New York. Better stores, manufacturers believe, have abdicated this important product area to drug stores that sell mass-merchandised proprietary sun preparations. Manufacturers realize, though, that consumers have been educated to the harmful effects of the sun and are now ready to buy complementary products capable of protecting them.

Fishman leaves Forest City to head Hamill, Keene and Fishman

It was announced recently that Bill Fishman resigned as Director of Sales Promotion for Forest City Enterprises, Inc., of Cleveland, Ohio. Fishman, who held the post at Forest City since 1960, will become president of Hamill, Keene & Fishman, Marketing Directors.

"As Marketing Directors we guide our clients in their formation of merchandising and sales promotion activities," said Fishman.

"The acceleration of Home Improvement Departments within mass merchandisers is evidence of an increasing desire by home-owners to accomplish improvements and modernization chores themselves as both money-making and self-satisfying activity.

Bill Fishman

Home Center retailers have convinced the layman that they have the ability to do-it-themselves with proper instructions and tools. However, suppliers are discovering that their obligation to help the dealer move their merchandise off the shelf does not stop with the issuance of coop advertising dollars.

"To survive," Fishman continued, "retailers must pass along to their customers those facilities that will encourage them to 'do-it-themselves'. This can be done through do-it-yourself clinics, in-store demonstrations,

Gas grills gain favor

Barbecue sales are expected to set new records for most retailers before the year is out. From charcoal grills of all configurations to electric to the increasingly popular portable gas grills the word is "go."

Tying in with the catchword, "convenience," most retailers intend to give an increasing amount of attention to accessories, a previously neglected segment of the total package.

Heralded as the "coming thing" over the past few years, portable gas grills have definitely become "the thing" this year. Many retailers report that gas grills are the fastest growing barbecue category.

point-of-purchase 'how-to' displays, sales training, and in-store audio visual activities."

To service their clients who supply retailers, Fishman's organization has set up a network of representatives in major markets. These representatives will train the retailer's staff and perform in-store product demonstrations. Seeking out appropriate publicity in both print and broadcast media, in behalf of the retailers, will also be part of the representatives function.

"In addition to expanding existing markets, we help our clients penetrate accounts previously closed to their sales force. Past experience has shown us that many manufacturers fail to realize that today, a buying decision is no longer a buyer's decision," said Fishman.

"In the typical mass merchandiser the buyer is 'helped' by the Merchdise Manager, the Comptroller, the Sales Promotion Manager, the computer, the Marketing Director, the District Supervisor, and the Store Department Manager. The incentives offered each of these groups to aid their function to move the merchandise in and out will open up more accounts than any other factor, including the design and quality of the product itself," Fishman added.

"Through our network of reps, we are also in a position to package complete promotions for our clients so that they can offer their retail accounts a 'road show' that will guarantee traffic during grand openings and other special events. It was the showmanship of the lumberyard of yesterday that made them the Home Centers of today . . . and we're in business to help our clients get their dealers into 'show business'," concluded Fishman.

joined the
Savings Plan, all I could save was string.

When it comes to saving money, most of us can use all the help we can get.

Joining the Payroll Savings Plan is one easy way to force yourself to save. When you sign up, an amount you specify is set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds. It's automatic. Everything is done for you.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds — for E Bonds, 3 1/2% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4 1/2% the first year). That extra 3 1/2%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970 . . . with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

Stick with a plan and before you know it you'll have a bankroll waiting. That's when you'll find you can do a lot more with money than you can with string.

See how easy it is to save money. Call 1-800-4-A-SAVE or write to: Payroll Savings Plan, P.O. Box 1000, Springfield, Mass. 01103.

Take stock in America.
Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

That no principal or interest falling due at any time when there are insufficient funds on hand to pay the same be paid promptly when due from current funds on hand in advancement of the collection of taxes, and when said taxes shall have been collected, reimbursement shall be made to the said funds in the amounts thus advanced.

That forthwith upon the passage of this ordinance a copy hereof, certified by the Secretary of the Board of Park Commissioners, which certificate shall recite that this ordinance has been passed by said Board of said Park District, and duly published according to law, shall be filed with the County Clerks of Lake and Cook Counties, Illinois, who shall in and for each of the years 1973 to 1999, inclusive, ascertain the rate per cent required to produce the aggregate tax herebefore provided to be levied upon the property in said Park District for each of said years, respectively, and extend the same for collection on the tax books in connection with other taxes levied in each of said years, respectively, and by said Park District for general park purposes of said Park District, and in each of said years such annual tax shall be levied and collected by said Park District in addition to and in excess of all other taxes now or hereafter authorized to be levied and collected by said Park District, and in like manner as taxes for general park purposes for each of said years are levied and collected, and when collected such taxes shall be used for the purpose of paying principal and interest upon the bonds herebefore described when same mature.

Section 5. That the principal proceeds of the sale of said bonds shall be devoted to and used with due diligence for the completion of the project for which said bonds are hereby authorized to be issued. The Board of Park Commissioners represents and certifies that:

(1) the said Park District expects, within six months after delivery of said bonds, to incur substantial binding obligations equal to at least 25% of the estimated total project cost to commence construction of the said project;

(2) the Board of Park Commissioners expects that over 50% of the expendable proceeds of said bonds, including investment proceeds, will be expended on or before July 1, 1974, for the purpose of paying the cost of said project, said date being within three years following the date of issue of said bonds;

(3) work on the said project is expected to proceed with due diligence to completion;

(4) said project has not been and is not expected to be sold or otherwise disposed of in whole or in part prior to the last maturity of said bonds;

(6) to the best of the knowledge and belief of the Board of Park Commissioners, there are no facts, estimates or circumstances that would materially change the conclusions and representations set out in this Section.

Said Board of Park Commissioners also certifies and further covenants with the purchasers and holders of said bonds from time to time outstanding that so long as any of said bonds remain outstanding, moneys on deposit in any fund or account in connection with said bonds, whether or not such moneys were derived from the proceeds of the sale of said bonds or from any other source, will not be used in a manner which will cause such bonds to be "arbitrage bonds" within the meaning of Section 103(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended, and any lawful regulations promulgated or proposed thereunder, including Sections 1301, 1302 and 1303 of the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1), as the same presently exist, or may from time to time hereafter be amended, supplemented or revised. The Board of Park Commissioners reserves the right, however, to make any investment of such moneys permitted by said law if, when and to the extent that said Section 103(d) or regulations promulgated thereunder shall be repealed or amended or shall be held void by final decision of a court of competent jurisdiction, but only if any investment made by virtue of such repeal, relaxation or decision would not, in the opinion of counsel of recognized competence in such matters, result in making the interest on said bonds subject to federal income taxation.

Section 6. That said bonds shall be executed as in this ordinance provided as soon after the passage hereof as may be, and shall be deposited with the Park District Treasurer, and after being countersigned by said Treasurer as provided by law, be by said Treasurer delivered to the purchaser thereof, namely, The First National Bank of Chicago, Chicago, Illinois, upon payment of the purchase price therefor, herebefore agreed upon, the same being not less than the par value of said bonds, plus accrued interest to date of delivery and a premium of $1.25, and the contract for the sale of said bonds heretofore entered into be and the same is hereby in all respects ratified and confirmed.

World neighbors:

Help people to help themselves

by DOUGLAS STANGLIN

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — The Masai chief seated on the floor of a northern Tanzanian mud hut in Africa told Dr. John Peters he was the first white man who had come to listen instead of to give orders.

"We've been ordered about and we don't accept that," the chief told Peters, head of World Neighbors, an Oklahoma City-based foreign aid operation that works with people at the grass roots level.

The chief told Peters villagers needed a dam to provide water for cattle and crops. He said he would provide the materials and labor if the fledgling World Neighbors, founded in 1951, would provide an engineer.

Today, the dying grasslands have been converted into 3,000 acres of wheat. The tribe owns a tractor, and cow dung huts have been replaced by walk-in houses.

"If I WENT BACK there now, I wouldn't crawl into a cow dung, igloo-like building, I'd go into an adobe house with windows and doors," Peters said in an interview here.

World Neighbors probably won't be going back to Tanzania. The non-government, non-religious group is spread thin financially. But it has been active on four continents, helping underdeveloped communities pull themselves out of poverty.

The organization grew out of a sermon given before an Oklahoma City church group in 1951 by Peters, who had just returned from Korea where he had been a chaplain during the war there.

He told the congregation of the poverty-stricken families he had seen in the Philippines enroute from the Orient. He told them that ignorance, malnutrition and hate figured strongly in the unrest in Asia. His listeners reacted in a remarkable way.

PETERS SOON began receiving checks to be used however he wished in setting up a foreign aid operation. Volunteers built the organization first, then went about the job of sending representatives to areas where help was needed most.

World Neighbors operates on a modest budget of $16 million from donors all over the country. About 74 per cent of all contributions goes into overseas work. Only 11 per cent is earmarked for fund raising. The organization works out of a modest one-story office in Oklahoma City on donated land.

Peters moved its headquarters from Washington to Oklahoma City to avoid being considered part of the U.S. government.

"It was pretty hard to convince people we weren't part of the CIA with that address," he said.

World Neighbors avoids being a give-away program, although it could greatly enlarge its budget if it just distributed goods and equipment. This reflects Peters' philosophy that "once you start on that line, it's hard to get people over into the self-help concept."

"WE'RE THERE TO help people to learn how to cultivate their land, enrich soil, limit their families, do something about their health situation to increase the possibility to help them to increase their own ability to help themselves," he said.

In Arroyos y Esteros, Paraguay, World Neighbors sent a representative to discuss with villagers ways to make their struggling community more productive.

Peters said the area representative had villagers select one man in which they had the most confidence, and World Neighbors offered to teach him cultivation, and farming techniques.

"We said if you'll get up early every Tuesday for a year and come down to the training center, we'll pay your bus fare and give you a noon meal."

Fort Union, once bustling outpost, at rest in West

FORT UNION, N.M. (UPI) — The snow-covered ruins of the Santa Fe Trail, carved out of the grassy plain by thousands of covered wagons, stretch north from Fort Union in quiet testimony to the men who opened the West.

Fort Union is now bathed in solitude, belying its position in the second half of the 19th century as the largest U.S. military outpost in the Southwest.

Much of the fort, which was actually three forts over the years 1851-1891, still remains in a small valley on the eastern face of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains of northeastern New Mexico. Remains of wagons, their spoked wheels frozen to the ground, lie in the snow.

The history of the fort is tied directly to the Santa Fe Trail, opened in 1821 by William Becknell as a trade route bringing goods from Missouri to the old Spanish capital of Santa Fe.

THE TRAIL SPLIT in west central Kansas, with one fork crossing the Cimarron Desert in a more direct route and the other going to Bent's Fort in Colorado before turning south.

The two routes rejoined at the junction of the Mora and Sapello Rivers, near the site of Fort Union.

Millions of dollars of goods were taken across the trail, bound for Santa Fe or back to Missouri or to the fort. In one year, 1850, 1,827 wagons loaded with 10,000 tons of goods crossed the trail.

Because of the trail and the fort's location, it became the principal supply depot for the Army.

Troops from the fort patrolled along the trail into Kansas and also were involved in the Indian wars. They also took part in the Civil War.

Each of the three forts played a different role in the U.S. conquest of the Southwest.

THE FIRST WAS built of logs in 1851, following the 1846 conquest of New Mexico by Gen. Stephen Watts Kearny. It served as the chief supply outpost as the Americans attempted to impose their government on the Mexicans and Indians.

It was from the first fort that troops fought the Jicarilla Apaches, Utes, Comanches and Kiowas.

In 1861, the fort's purpose changed with the outbreak of the Civil War. Confederate forces laid plans to conquer New Mexico, Colorado and California to gain access to mineral resources and the stores of Union arms and ammunition.

The second fort was built to withstand any Confederate attack being mounted along the Rio Grande by Brig. Gen. Henry H. Sibley. Sibley's troops captured Santa Fe in 1862 and only Fort Union stood in his way to Colorado.

The Confederate forces, in a battle some historians say was one of the most important of the Civil War, were defeated by troops from Fort Union and Colorado volunteers in the battle of Glorieta Pass.

Again the fort's role changed. Indians aided by the soldiers' preoccupation with the Civil War had begun harassing settlers.

The third, and largest, fort was built in response to the Indian attacks. It housed the post, quartermaster depot and ordinance depot.

THE FORT BECAME THE supply center for all forts in New Mexico and for campaigns against the Mesquero Apaches, Navajos, Kiowas, Comanches and Utes.

The fort hung on until 1891 it was closed by order of the War Department.

Last stand between Indians?

By TOM TIEDE

CROW RESERVATION, Mont. — The last time there was a war here it was Indians vs. whites, the battle of the Little Big Horn which the Indians won. The next time there is a war here, it may very well be Indians vs. Indians, a battle between moderates and militants which nobody will win.

The second battle is not actually forecast. Right now it is only speculation. Many nervous residents here believe this reservation may be the next target for an American Indian Movement demonstration, protest, disruption, takeover or, perhaps, war.

The speculation has some merit. AIM radicals, who last year seized the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Washington, and who recently lifted a 70 day siege of Wounded Knee, S.D., have repeatedly warned that such activities will continue. Says a spokesman: "The idea has been to focus attention on the problems of American Indians; now that we have the attention we can't just let it fade." Thus AIM will doubtless strike again.

AND THE CROW Reservation seems a likely possibility. Tucked away in southeastern Montana, only a few hundred miles from Wounded Knee, actually, the reservation is a national shame, a showcase of historical Indian plight. Impoverished, exploited, aimless, the Crow land and people are microcosms and all that has failed in Indian Management.

"Custer was sent out to murder Indians. The Indians did what anyone would do — defend themselves."

To begin with there is the twisting of history here. Little Big Horn, as every schoolchild knows, is the site of Col. George Custer's "last stand." It has been commemorated in media reports, film versions and textbooks as the courageous Thermopylae of a heroic band of U.S. cavalrymen.

In reality, say local historians, it was the Indians who were courageous and, don't forget, victorious. Says Crow tribal secretary Frederick Left Hand: "Custer was sent out to murder Indians on their traditional and legal homeland. The Indians did what anyone would do in such a case — defend themselves. But do we commemorate the Indian defense of home and property? No, we commemorate Custer's death while trying to invade and pillage and murder."

TRUE ENOUGH, The U. S. government has erected a "Custer National Monument" on federal land in the heart of this reservation. Graves mark the spots where Custer and his men were alleged to have fallen. There's nary a monument to Indian pluck, wit, perseverance or victory.

Indeed, the victory should be institutionalized. If only because it was the last Indian triumph of any sorts in this area. In the more than 100 years since Crows were deemed "eternal" rights to reservation territories, they have suffered a long and unbroken string of defeats.

For example. According to tribal spokesmen, the Crow were originally (in 1851) assigned 38 million acres of reservation land. "But by 1860," says secretary Left Hand, "it was down to eight million acres." Then came a gold rush in the Black Hills of nearby South Dakota, "and by 1890 we only had 2.8 million acres left." There was more chipping away after 1920 and so, today, all told, the Crow have lost nearly 38 million acres of home; currently the reservation consists of a thoroughly shriveled 2.25 million acres.

"But even the 2.25 is not all ours," says Left Hand. "We have treaty agreements which stipulate that none of this land is to be owned by outside interests — yet more than a million of our acres are owned by outside people. So if you really want to get down to hard reality, the Indians themselves only own about 1.25 million acres now."

AT THAT, INDIAN ownership is unprofitable. Though several nonreserva-

"AIM... They pressure people into obeying. I don't think they represent many real Indians."

tion corporations do a brisk business on Crow land, Crows themselves do poorly. Left Hand says the average income among the 4,200 reservation Indians is $2,100 — that's $8 a day.

Forty-two per cent of the working force is unemployed. Says one man, who hasn't worked in 18 months: "I'd like to work in town (Hardin), but they ain't too hot about Indians there. I had one guy tell me he wouldn't hire me because I didn't have enough work experience. I asked him how I could get the experience if nobody would give me a job, but he didn't answer. I had to laugh at that."

The laughter he is bitter. Frederick Left Hand says that he sometimes thinks "we should do the same thing to the whites as they've done to us — wipe them out." Yet for all the hostility, the poverty, and exploitation, there is virtually no interest here in becoming another Wounded Knee. Tribal members say they agree with the ideals of AIM activities, but disagree with their tactics.

"WE HAVE NO sympathy with violence," says Crow tribal chairman Dave Stewart. "I remember when AIM took over the BIA building in Washington. I heard there was a Crow youth among them, so I called him up to chew him out. But he said it was all a mistake for him. He said he joined the AIM march because he liked what they stood for and, besides, he thought it would be a good chance to see Washington. Then he just got swept up by the building seizure and couldn't get out. I think that says a lot for AIM. They pressure people into obeying. Personally, I don't think they represent many real Indians."

Not here anyway. Times are hard, history is indecent, government is ineffective, yet nobody thinks the solution to Crow problems is loaded in the muzzles of AIM rifles.

"The trouble with AIM's methods," says a Crow official, "is that they may succeed only in doing what Custer never could. One of these days those people are going to push the U.S. too far and that'll be it. Everybody will start shooting — and this time it could be the Indian's last stand."

Argentine land program helps country's Indians

by DIANA PAGE

RESISTENCIA, Argentina (UPI) — The Wounded Knee of Argentina is hidden in the cotton fields of Quilipi, where several hundred Indian men, women and children were massacred in 1924.

The Indians in the dusty village today have a new lease on life — and the lands they fought for — thanks to a government program of credit, cooperatives and cotton that has made the Chaco province the nation's Indian showcase.

Most Argentines know very little about the 150,000 pure blood Indians living in their country, according to the last census. The Indian accounts for less than one per cent of the population.

When the Spanish conquistadores pushed into Argentina in the 1500s, there were an estimated 300,000 to 500,000 Indians, divided into at least 20 distinct "nations." The more docile tribes became laborers under the protection of Spanish colonists, according to the "encomienda" system agreed on by the Spanish crown and the Roman Catholic Church.

BY THE 18TH Century, only two parts of the new nation of Argentina remained in the hands of Indians who refused to submit to the white man: the Araucanian tribes of the Pampas and Patagonia, in the south, and the Toba and Mocovi tribes of Chaco, in the north. To get these lands for the European immigrants who would raise cattle, sheep and grain, Argentina began major military offensives.

The Indians had their courage, their skill as horsemen and hunters; the soldiers had their Remington rifles — and won. In 1879, the troops swept south; in 1884 they fought into Chaco from five different directions.

In Chaco, a northern province some 800 miles from Buenos Aires, the government created an Indian reservation in 1911 and some 450 Indians settled in the village called Quilipi.

THE YEAR OF the massacre, 1924, was a lean one. The Indians began stealing cows or chickens and killing the farmers who tried to stop them. The police planned a "lesson" for the Indians, deputizing 130 men and obtaining a small airplane from the army.

On the morning of July 18, a police band was hiding in the woods around the Indian village when the Indians ran out into the clearing to stare at the first flying machine they had ever seen. Suddenly the Indians began to fall as withering gunfire drowned out the sound of the plane.

THE POLICE-DEPUTIZED vigilantes killed everyone they found and burned the village and the bodies to erase all evidence of the massacre.

One of the few Indians who escaped to tell the story was the cacique chief Dominga Mercedes, a half-white woman who had been elected the leader of the Mocovi tribe because her knowledge of Spanish, Guarani and Mocovi enabled her to defend the Indian in the white world she rejected.

Dominga, who died in 1955, would not recognize the Quilipi Indian community now. It's one of the 10 communities organized under the Chaco Indian administration, using state lands given to the communities.

"THIS LAND is ours. It's different from working for other people," Cirilo Maldonado said, looking over the cotton field where his wife and five children bent over in the sun.

Cirilo, 41, president of the cooperative formed by 50 Mocovi families in the Charata community, is the leader of a new generation. The old Mocovi cacique, Catan, who lives down the dirt road, sits in his porch rocking chair — his pony grazing in front, his bicycle propped up behind — remembering the days when former President Juan D. Peron gave him a tractor. The chief sold the tractor. The cooperative now has its own tractors. The chief feels his power eroding away. He dyes his hair black to hide his 70 years.

The leader of the Pampa del Indio community, Nieves Ramirez, 45, a descendant of a warring cacique, spoke emphatically: "We can't go hunting to feed our families because there are no more animals in the forest near here. We are obliged to ask for work."

"SCHOOLS? WHAT good are they when our children are hungry and must work in the fields? We need land," Nieves Ramirez said. "The Indian must understand that without our own land, we are slaves."

Not quite "slaves," but the sharecropping system which existed in Pampa del Indio before the government provided land for the Indian families meant they always owned as much as they harvested.

Nieves Ramirez said he'd had a hard time convincing his "brothers" to accept the government offer of land for their community. The former landlords — who did not want to lose their tenants — tried to convince the Indians the government would cheat them.

The Chaco province began in 1971 to try to help its 30,000 Indians break the vicious circle of poverty. In 10 different areas, the Indian community elected a commission to manage the land — a total of 10,000 acres — and credit. Legal cooperatives were formed in only two communities where there was an accountant available to help with the necessary paperwork.

THE FEDERAL government provided $120,000, and each community drew up a list of its needs — seed, tractors, insecticides and food for the winter. One year later, the government "loan" had been fully repaid into a fund that provides further credit. There was an $80,000 profit.

The Indians planted more land, with sunflowers as well as cotton, and this year, blessed with almost perfect spells of sun and rain, the Chaco Indians expect to make $500,000. The government buys the crops, and any profit made from the sales in Buenos Aires goes back into the community fund.

"Indians have checkbooks now," one Indian said. It told a lot. Saturdays the village merchants do a booming business. The Indians spend their money on mattresses, stoves, material to build houses to replace the mud and stick huts and of course bicycles, more economical than the old pony.

"We don't tell the Indians what to do with their money," said Rene J. Sotelo, director of the Chaco Indian program. "The only solution to poverty is to find the source of a good living. That's why we went to the land."

Park district to get $250,000 for development

by JILL BETTNER

The Buffalo Grove Park District will soon have $250,000 to develop parks in the Cambridge and Mill Creek subdivisions.

The money is revenue that will be gained from the sale last week of bonds to the First National Bank of Chicago and its co-bidder, the Bank of Buffalo Grove.

The park district will pay an annual interest rate of 5.25 per cent on $125,000 in bonds due in 1987 and 5.10 per cent on the remaining $125,000 due in 1988.

Park officials have been negotiating for several months to purchase a seven-acre site just east of Buffalo Grove Road and south of Dundee Road for the proposed Cambridge park.

THE DISTRICT has already bought one 3.5-acre parcel or half the site and is presently involved in a condemnation suit to buy the other half.

Park Director Stan Crosland said last week he hopes the condemnation proceedings will be completed sometime this summer. He said construction at the site would begin as soon as the purchase was made.

Crosland said the park district intends to maintain the wooded Cambridge site as a nature center with an existing lagoon. He said some recreational facilities also will be added, including at least two tennis courts and two playground areas.

The Mill Creek park will be constructed adjacent to Washington Irving School which is scheduled to open this fall. Crosland said the park will be designed to accommodate physical education classes as well as park district residents.

Plans for the Irving park include draining and grading a 3½-acre area for a playing field and installing playground equipment in another 200-by-100-foot area. Crosland said a metal backstop will not be constructed on the playing field, but it would be suitable for softball or minor league baseball.

Crosland anticipates that work will begin on the Irving site before the school opens in early September.

He said no budget for the $250,000 has yet been determined. The park board will decide later, he said, how much money will be spent at each park site.

THE 1971 referendum gave the park district the authority to issue $1,250,000 in bonds. However, because the assessed valuation of the district was not high enough at the time to cover the total bond sale, park officials were able to sell only $1 million worth.

Increases in the assessed valuation of park district property this year made it possible for the board to seek bids three weeks ago on the remaining $250,000 in bonds.

According to state law, a park district can only issue bonds for an amount equal to 2½ per cent of the assessed valuation of the property in the district.

DON BENJAMIN, of Benjamin and Lang, the park district's financial consultants on the bond sale, said the interest rates obtained by the district are good. The buyers submitted the lowest of five bids on the bonds.

"These rates are highly satisfactory considering that the bond market is so unsettled at this time," Benjamin said.

He added that the number of bids was an indication that the bidders have faith in the park district.

"I think the fact that you were able to get five bids on relatively short notice speaks well for the way the park district has been run in the past two years," he said. "It also says you've put the Buffalo Grove Park District on the map financially," he added.

FOR THOSE MIDWESTERNERS who have experienced the long and cold winter and the unpredictable "monsoon season," summer becomes the golden time for fun and relaxation. Many of the suburban working people spent their weekend passively lying in lounge chairs in hopes for some sun and long desired moments of peace.

Serve as warnings

Village police ticketing bike riders

Buffalo Grove police have started issuing traffic tickets to bike riders committing traffic violations in the village.

Sgt. Ronald L. Gozdecki said the crackdown is a means of emphasizing that cyclists are subject to the same laws as motorists. He said police have issued more than 100 tickets to bike riders since June 1, when the policy went into effect.

"We're doing this primarily for their (bike riders) safety," Gozdecki said. "We aren't doing it to harass them." So far this year there has been only one accident in the village involving a bike and auto, he added.

Gozdecki said some of the violations cyclists have been cited for are failure to stop for a stop sign, having no light on the bike, failure to stop for a traffic light and riding on the wrong side of the road. He emphasized that bike riders are supposed to ride with traffic, not against it as many think.

THE PROCEDURE for ticketing a careless cyclist is the same as for a motorist. He is stopped at the scene and ticketed on the spot. However, if the bike rider is a child, a letter is delivered to his parents telling them of the violation. Gozdecki said the ticket is merely a warning and carries no fine. It is up to the parent to discipline the child, he said.

Gozdecki emphasized that adult bike riders are not exempt and also will be ticketed if they violate traffic laws. Tickets to adults also do not carry fines.

Police have also found that many motorists are not giving cyclists the same consideration they give other drivers. Gozdecki said, for instance, that some motorists fail to give bike riders the right-of-way after a stop at an intersection even though the bicycle stopped first. He said police plan to start issuing warning tickets to drivers who do not conform to traffic laws in regard to bike riders.

Gozdecki said at the time of the bike registration in Buffalo Grove schools, police talked to children about bike safety and traffic laws. He said almost 3,000 bikes have been registered in the village.

Anyone wanting a copy of the book on traffic laws for bike riders can obtain it at the police station in the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Park district to change signup plans

Buffalo Grove park officials will make some changes in their registration procedure, after an estimated crowd of nearly 500 persons showed up last week to sign up for summer programs.

The Herald received several complaints from residents who said they were forced to wait in the sun in 90-degree weather for several hours before getting inside the Emmerich Park building to register for activities.

Comr. Dede Armstrong publicly apologized at last Thursday's park board meeting for what she termed the "complete bedlam" at the first day of registration.

"We just weren't expecting so many people," Mrs. Armstrong said. "We've never had so many people in one day."

Park Director Stan Crosland said Friday the staff at all future registration sessions will be doubled from five to 10 secretaries to process applications and take fees more efficiently.

Crosland added that residents will no longer be able to register for anyone else, unless it is an emergency situation and the park district gives permission in advance.

Some residents told the Herald that individuals were registering last week for as many as 10 families at once.

Registration for all summer programs will continue until the classes are filled from 9 a.m. to noon Monday through Friday at the Emmerich Park office, 150 Raupp Blvd.

Lightning kills boy, 14, at park

An Arlington Heights youth was killed Saturday by lightning as he stood beneath a tree to watch his older brother play baseball in Pioneer Park, near Park Street and Kennicott Avenue, Arlington Heights.

Daniel Druding, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent J. Druding Jr., 2343 S. Cedar Glen Ln., was struck in the back of the head by lightning, according to Arlington Heights Fire Department spokesmen. The boy was reported dead by fire and Arlington Heights police departments when they arrived at the scene at about noon.

The boy was reported to have gone to the park to play baseball with his team, but the threatening weather prevented the team from playing. Daniel then decided to watch his brother play and stood beneath a tree when heavy rains poured.

Daniel was graduated Friday from Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect. He was to attend St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights in the fall. Family members were preparing for his graduation surprise party Saturday morning after he left to play ball. Guests had begun to gather when police informed the family of the boy's death.

A coroner's inquest will be held at 10:30 a.m. today at Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, Arlington Heights.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Fire Department was alerted to several instances of power failures scattered throughout the village, a spokesman said. Power was restored "in a matter of minutes." Approximately 1½ inches of rain fell between 11:30 a.m. and 3:40 p.m. Saturday, according to the fire department's rain gauge.

About three or four houses in Palatine were struck by lightning in Saturday's storms, according to Palatine police department. Damages in one of the houses resulted in a hole in the roof. Lightning also struck a tree and set it on fire. The Hoffman Estates Fire Department was called to quench the fire.

In Schaumburg, two houses were struck by lightning, knocking off some of the siding on one house, and scattering the shingles of the other.

Some power and telephone lines were severed, but were restored the same day.

The Elk Grove Village Police Department reported a number of false alarms were set off when high winds and fallen branches broke through windows in several buildings. The village fire department reported that lightning struck a transformer at 850 Arthur.

The nation

At quiet retreats more than 1,000 miles apart, Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nixon conferred yesterday with top aides on the eve of summit talks covering the breadth of Soviet-American relations from trade to disarmament. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, remained at Camp David. Nixon returned to Washington after spending the weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla.

White House Counsel John W. Dean has told Senate investigators he "assumed" President Nixon was aware of the Watergate cover-up within weeks of the bugging because he reported on it regularly to Nixon's two closest advisers, it was learned yesterday. But, sources close to the Senate probe, said Dean told investigators that he himself did not discuss aspects of the cover-up personally with the President until last March.

President Nixon, after months of virtual seclusion, is planning more public appearances to shore up confidence in his Watergate-shattered administration, White House aides indicated.

Led by sympathetic congressmen, about 8,000 persons rallied at the U.S. Capitol to protest Soviet treatment of Jews, timing their demonstration to coincide with final preparations for the Nixon-Brezhnev summit talks opening today.

The cities of the nation have become an "orphan" under the administration of President Nixon, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, host mayor for the 41st annual U.S. Conference of Mayors, said. He was one of six mayors to appear on "Meet the Press."

The Skylab astronauts received Father's Day greetings from President Nixon and he told them they proved "man still matters" in space. The Skylab crew is to return to earth Friday in their Apollo command ship after staying in orbit a record-shattering 28 days.

Fighting between advancing Communists and government defenders south of Plinom Penh went into its second week with attacks at two towns only 13 miles from the Cambodian capital along Highway 4, a strategic supply route. The U.S. Command in Honolulu confirmed that American warplanes again flew support for the beleaguered government troops, as they have for 104 consecutive days.

Moving of garage site expected

Parking may be the hangup in city Superblock meeting

Superblock — that $11 million, eight-year redevelopment dream — takes its final step tonight.

The thorny question may be parking. Backers of the shopping mall-office building project will be in full force as the city council begins its look at the planned-unit-development request that could modernize part of downtown Des Plaines.

The council's municipal development committee is expected to recommend drafting of an ordinance that will approve revised Superblock plans. Both the city zoning board of appeals and the plan commission have recommended approval of the project — if a proposed multi-level garage, to be built by the city, is moved from Ellinwood Street to Prairie-Pearson streets.

Developer Jerome R. Gottlieb said he can accept the parking site switch. "It's a mistake though," he said last week. Mayor Herbert Behrel also is opposed to the move.

ALD. GEORGE Olen (3rd), after a 90-minute meeting with architect Dennis Stevens last week, may ask the council to ignore the zoning board recommendation and may seek an ordinance approving the original Superblock plan.

Project backers — who did not attend a two-hour municipal development committee review of the project last week — will be prepared to explain the plan in detail tonight and will come armed with estimated costs, tax benefits and traffic analysis.

Local supporters, including Behrel who is a member of Des Plaines Redevelopment Assn. board of directors, have pushed for quick consideration, contending that Gottlieb may pull out because of approval delays.

BUT, GOTTLIEB told the Herald last week that "we're not in the business of issuing ultimatums."

"I haven't at any time considered pulling out," he said. "There always is a point where it becomes uneconomic. But, we haven't reached that yet."

Gottlieb said that the project "has gone beyond the stage where we could have received better financing. The money market has tightened up. Cost will be up, so we must anticipate that income will go up."

"We had hoped to get city approval in better times" because of "all the preparatory work" done by redevelopment officials, he said. "But, it's more common than not — with a project this size — that it would take this long."

"I plan to ask the council to split the issue," Olen said Friday. "I think the council should approve drafting of the ordinance as far as the building is concerned. There's no sense in holding up the developer any longer. He has three months of drawings left."

"I would hope the council would defer the parking plan. There are many questions to be answered — traffic flow etc. etc.," Olen said. "Maybe we can schedule a committee of the whole meeting to hash them out."

THE MUNICIPAL development committee recommendation will follow reports of city officials tonight.

The council meeting, which begins at 8 p.m. in city hall, will offer something for everyone with debate scheduled on proposal affecting young and old; farm animals and major construction and small subdivisions; water supply and blood donations.

The council meeting will begin tonight with a proposal by Health Director Jean Branding and Joel Johnson, of the North Suburban Blood Bank, to step-up donations here.

The city is having trouble meeting the 2,500 pint blood quota required by the blood bank to guarantee free replacement for all city residents.

Johnson has developed a pyramid-like program — called "blood cells" — where small groups of interested citizens contact other persons, ring doorbells and promote blood donations. "It's a lot better than the hit and miss bloodmobiles," Mrs. Branding said. "We're trying to develop something new because we're having trouble meeting our quota."

$12,000 fire damages home

A flash fire Friday caused $12,000 damage to the home of a Des Plaines resident who managed to escape the flaming house unharmed, according to Des Plaines firemen.

The blaze gutted the kitchen and utility room at the home of Robert Carroll, 1024 Welwyn Ave., while causing smoke and water damage to the remainder of the single-story ranch house.

The fire was ignited when fumes from mastic adhesive came in contact with a clothes dryer pilot light.

According to fire department reports the dryer door was opened while Carroll was working with the highly flammable adhesive.

Firefighters said the flames and green smoke were pouring from the rear of the house when they arrived but quickly extinguished the blaze after ventilating the house and shutting off the gas and electricity.

"We've had any number of bad fires from the use of mastic without adequate ventilation," Fire Department Capt. David Wolf said Saturday.

Fumes from mastic, he said can travel as much as 30 feet and can cause serious flash fires if nearby gas and electric sources are not shut off and the room is not adequately ventilated.

Plane hits wires, KO's power to 30,000 in area

Some 30,000 area Commonwealth Edison Co. customers were without electrical power Friday afternoon when a landing cargo plane severed a series of high-tension wires near Touhy Avenue and Mannheim Road north of O'Hare Airport.

The plane was able to land safely, however, and no injuries were reported.

But the downed wires caused extensive power failures in Des Plaines, Park Ridge, Rosemont and areas in northwest Chicago. Some power was restored within 20 minutes while other residents on Des Plaines' south side and Rosemont were without power for almost two hours.

The plane, an Airlift International Inc. Douglas DC-8, was making its final approach to O'Hare and was attempting to pull out of an airpocket when it clipped the wires, according to Des Plaines police.

Airlift spokesmen were unable to say Saturday exactly how the plane struck the wires, but said the incident is being investigated.

J. J. STEPHENS, district supervisor for Commonwealth, said repairmen were on the scene almost immediately after the accident occurred shortly after 3 p.m.

He said downed wires caused failure of two transmission circuits at a power station near Pratt and Railroad avenues.

Stephens also said emergency power lines from Norridge were used for some customers until normal power could be restored.

Frank Mikrut, an attendant at a service station near Mannheim and Morse Avenue, said, "It was raining so hard we couldn't hear the plane. The next thing we knew there was no power."

First United Methodist honors Dr. Hill

A man whose dream built a church

by MIKE ZAREMBA

More than 500 people, young and old, filled the church at Graceland and Prairie avenues yesterday.

They were there for a few reasons. It was Sunday and it was Father's Day, but there was another reason.

Some of the older people of the First United Methodist congregation realized the faces in their church have been changing over the years.

They decided that in the years to come, everyone should at least know a little about the man most responsible for building the church they come to every Sunday.

That is why everyone was honoring Dr. Clifton J. Hill.

HE COULDN'T understand why everyone was making such "a big fuss." But that's his nature.

The fact is, if it wasn't for this one man and his dream, the First United Methodist Church of Des Plaines wouldn't be standing where it is today.

Back in the late '20s, the people of the Methodist church at Park Place and Lee Street, realized their chapel wasn't enough. They wanted to build a new church, a bigger one, but the lot was too small.

The years passed and it wasn't until the mid-'40s, after the war, when Dr. Hill and his wife were walking by the Whitcomb property at Graceland and Prairie. He turned to his wife and said, "this is the place where we should have our new church."

DR. HILL went back to the congregation and told them about his idea. "Are you willing to sacrifice and pay for it?" he asked. He emphasized the pledge drives, the "crusades," would be a continuing process and they wouldn't stop collecting until the church was paid off.

The groundbreaking ceremonies started in 1949 and the church was completed in 1951. Then an educational wing was added, which included a small chapel. Dr. Hill felt the congregation needed a small place to go to, at any hour of the

At quiet retreats more than 1,000 miles apart, Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nixon conferred yesterday with top aides on the eve of summit talks covering the breadth of Soviet-American relations from trade to disarmament. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, remained at Camp David. Nixon returned to Washington after spending the weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla.

White House Counsel John W. Dean has told Senate investigators he "assumed" President Nixon was aware of the Watergate cover-up within weeks of the bugging because he reported on it regularly to Nixon's two closest advisers, it was learned yesterday. But, sources close to the Senate probe, said Dean told investigators that he himself did not discuss aspects of the cover-up personally with the President until last March.

President Nixon, after months of virtual seclusion, is planning more public appearances to shore up confidence in his Watergate-shattered administration, White House aides indicated.

Led by sympathetic congressmen, about 8,000 persons rallied at the U.S. Capitol to protest Soviet treatment of Jews, timing their demonstration to coincide with final preparations for the Nixon-Brezhnev summit talks opening today.

The cities of the nation have become an "orphan" under the administration of President Nixon, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, host mayor for the 41st annual U.S. Conference of Mayors, said. He was one of six mayors to appear on "Meet the Press."

The Skylab astronauts received Father's Day greetings from President Nixon and he told them they proved "man still matters" in space. The Skylab crew is to return to earth Friday in their Apollo command ship after staying in orbit a record-shattering 28 days.

Superblock: yes or no?

Action on huge project to get under way tonight with key vote on redevelopment plan

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

A News Analyst

Super-step or super-bounce.

Nothing bigger, nothing more complicated than plans for downtown redevelopment have come before the Des Plaines City Council.

Superblock — yes or no — will not be decided tonight. But, the roll call on Ald. Ewald Swanson's motion to draft an ordinance approving the plan should indicate redevelopment future.

If the council authorizes City Atty. Robert Dileonardi to draw-up an ordinance approving the plan, the alderman will have two more shots at proposal review. The first could come in two weeks when the ordinance would be placed on first reading.

Recently-elected, first-time aldermen have complained about lack of information. One has said he cannot cast an intelligent vote because of sketchy project details and unanswered questions.

With a full display of force, partners, planners and directors of the eight-year downtown remodeling will be "ready to answer any and all questions," developer Jerome R. Gottlieb said last week.

The final council vote could come in a month and would allow project developers to begin final planning. Only other review of the shopping mall-office building would come less than 180 days later when the plan commission checks final drawings for similarity to the original proposal.

Delays could occur anywhere along the council meeting line if one alderman asks for deferral and another seconds the request. Deferral is non-debatable and is automatic, without a full council vote.

For the record, Gottlieb and Des Plaines architects Erickson & Stevens are asking to build a two-story shopping mall topped by 10 stories of offices near Prairie and Lee streets. Plans filed by Bruce McPhee of Des Plaines Tomorrow Corp., Gottlieb, who is president of Des Plaines Mall Corp. and Walter W. Spiegler of Spiegler Brothers Real Estate, show more 224,180 square feet of space.

THE PETITION would require the city to:

- Relocate and enlarge sanitary and storm sewers and water mains;
- Limit the north 135 feet of Center Street to pedestrian traffic;
- Vacate south Center Street in exchange for a Prairie street right-of-way to allow widening to four lanes;
- Vacate an alley parallel to Prairie;
- Acquire property east of Center and north of Prairie to construct not less than 750 parking spaces;
- Grant perpetual easement over Ellinwood Street to allow pedestrian ramp construction;
- Realign Prairie between Graceland Avenue and River Road.

THE PLANS CALL for a series of complicated set-back variations and a height variation for a now-reduced 200-foot building. The original height request was 250 feet.

The new aldermen ask two basic questions — what will the requirements cost the city and what are the balancing benefits of the project?

Superblock planners or city officials backing the plan have not presented a detailed, written analysis of financial and environmental effects of the project. Taxpayer cost has not been studied completely, new alderman argued last week.

But, scattered reports accumulated since 1970 indicate that city participation — not necessarily taxpayer expense — will total more than $3 million by 1976.

The 1973 city budget shows $250,000 for Prairie widening and another $350,000 for phase-two widening expenses from motor fuel tax funds. Aldermen backing the project claim that the widening and sewer work was needed years ago but was delayed because of superblock. Ald. Gerald Meyer (7th) counters that, without redevelopment, the $600,000 could be used for other city projects.

MOST RECENT estimated cost for parking — to be financed by the city — is $2.275 million. The money will come from parking revenue bonds totaling more than $3 million.

A cost estimate in December 1971 by H. W. Lochner, Inc. engineers, shows construction of 375 downtown garage spaces at $1.6 million. Increased construction costs and a boost to 750 spaces led architect Dennis Stevens to the $2.275 million March 12.

Included in the estimate is $325,000 for Pearson-Prairie land acquisition. Newest switch — requiring construction of multi-level parking near Pearson — instead of along the railroad tracks — could push the land total higher because the city will need three privately owned lots on Pearson. Included is the garage-office of the park district, which cannot sell the property without referendum. Park district officials have mentioned a $250,000 to $400,000 replacement cost if forced to move.

Added to the list of city participation costs is a deficit, not expense, that has drawn heavy criticism from Meyer. The redevelopment group has asked the city to waive $435,200 in required fees for insufficient parking construction.

"This means, of course, that this money is not available to the city to use. Will the city be asked to waive this ordinance requirement for all developers?" Meyer asks.

STEVENS TOLD 15 council members Monday that "the original intent of the ordinance was not to finance parking 100 per cent." Left unsaid is why superblock backers, who seek 10 to 12 per cent minimum profit, should be allowed to bypass a requirement faced by other commercial builders here.

The entire parking plan — which developers claim "is imperative" — is a question beyond the 750 spaces the city will be required to build.

The redevelopment plan calls for the city to lease 406 parking spaces to the mall corporation for office renters' use. Ald. Carmen Sarle (7th) complained Monday that no cost agreement is proposed for leasing of the space.

Stevens told the council predicted monthly rent per space will be $18 to $20. That price would create the best parking deal in town. Cost of putting a dime an hour in city meters, nine hours a day, 20 work days a month, would be $18. And, that doesn't include cost of parking tickets.

No one has told the council why users of covered parking space in reserved stalls should pay the same rate as a street parking hunter.

STEVENS SAID the monthly rental will be determined by cost of the three or four level garage and will be used to retire the parking revenue bonds. "The figures don't add up," Ald. George Olen (3rd) said Monday.

Based on $20 a month rental for 406 spaces, the mall corporation tenants will contribute $1,948,800 to parking in 20 years, less than the $2.25 million estimated garage price tag and far less than garage plus bond interest.

The difference will be paid by downtown shoppers who feed meters and may pay for using the garage nights and on weekends when offices are closed. Stevens said the key to efficient parking is "turnover — using a stall more than once." But, no one has explained why the renters' cost should be less than entire building price, plus maintenance expenses.

Experts hired by the city and redevelopment group estimate that 750 to 800 spaces will fill the needs of the 44-store mall. Estimated work force in the office alone will be 800 employees. By subtracting the 120 spaces already available to shoppers in the Ellinwood lot, and the 406 rental spaces, a total of less than 275 additional spaces will be available to shoppers during weekdays.

"Where will the traffic go?" Meyer has asked.

THE PARKING consultants contend that the downtown traffic problem, created by an additional 400 rush-hour cars, is no worry. At some future date, plans call for an overpass so backed-up drivers can avoid railroad gates during the commuter crunch. Future plans also mention construction of the controversial River Road bridge and widening of Prairie to River.

The detriments of the entire plan aren't difficult to find. More cars downtown. Need for increased police and fire protection. Additions to city staffs for increased city expense.

"What am I getting for my investment?" Olen asked Monday.

The project "should take the burden off the taxpayer," Stevens said. The project will not add children to local school systems and could bring $125,000 in additional taxes to the schools.

A 1971 central business district analysis states "One of the strongest arguments in favor of the vigorous pursuit of downtown redevelopment . . . is the addition of some $150,000 of tax revenue per year."

THE REPORT SHOWS $42,000 in sales tax and $600,000 in real estate tax in 1970 from the downtown area. Totals for 1980, with superblock, are projected at $350,000 in sales taxes and $875,000 in real estate taxes. By 1990, the prediction is $1.75 million in sales tax and $1.25 million in real estate tax.

In the long run, the increased taxes can be used to finance other city projects — perhaps further downtown redevelopment planned in a second, vague phase.

"Tax benefit may not be the only important benefit," City Planner Michael Richardson has said. "In the end, total redevelopment might be worth three or four times the increased taxes."

Superblock planners contend that the shopping mall and office building will spur either renovation or demolition of other downtown buildings. "It's automatic," Gottlieb, a 24-year veteran of the construction business, said last week. "When you build a major, bright, new structure, everybody's property becomes more valuable. All merchants will find property values increased. They'll need to modernize their stores to keep up."

A look down Des Plaines main downtown streets tells that something must be done. Some city officials recognized that eight years ago when the first redevelopment committee was formed.

THE NAGGING question though remains — is this the right plan for Des Plaines.

The superblock proposal leaves little room for compromise. The private redevelopment backers, not city officials or the public, have sifted project proposals.

Lightning kills boy, 14, at park

An Arlington Heights youth was killed Saturday by lightning as he stood beneath a tree to watch his older brother play baseball in Pioneer Park, near Park Street and Kennicott Avenue, Arlington Heights.

Daniel Druding, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent J. Druding Jr., 2343 S. Cedar Glen Ln., was struck in the back of the head by lightning, according to Arlington Heights Fire Department spokesmen. The boy was reported dead by fire and Arlington Heights police department when they arrived at the scene at about noon.

The boy was reported to have gone to

WILL SUPERBLOCK really happen? The guarantors put their money behind the eight-plus-year dream; a developer committed himself. Now the city council has the ball, and tonight's meeting will be an indication of the future of downtown redevelopment.

Superblock origins not that mysterious

by DOROTHY OLIVER

A cloud of mystery, suspicion and confusion has hung over the people involved in downtown redevelopment.

Who's who, how are they involved and how will they profit are the common questions. Why all the secrecy, that's happening that we don't know, underlies much of the suspicion.

"It's not all that mysterious," said Don Terry, vice-president of Rothary Storage and Van Lines and a board member of the Des Plaines Tomorrow Corp. "We've tried to be open — people are confused or ignorant."

Terry has been involved in downtown redevelopment years before the proposed project made newspaper headlines.

"At least 12 years ago we started talking about redevelopment in the Chamber of Commerce. It laid an egg — a big fat egg. Nobody actually wanted to get down and do something about it."

THE IDEA, obviously, didn't die. On April 20, 1968, the Des Plaines Redevelopment Association was formed.

"It was open to everybody. We knew we needed local support to get any redevelopment off the ground. A couple of hundred people turned out for that first meeting at the Elks Club. Some of them were really ready to work — the rest were just nosy," Terry said.

Those ready to work set up fact finding committees at their own expense. They compiled traffic surveys, acceptability studies, visited other redevelopment projects in other towns and met frequently to compare information.

They decided to build a Superblock.

"It was a matter of trying to save a town — the commercial aspect was disappearing," Terry said. "The area that is now called Phase I (south of the alley between Ellinwood and Prairie, running from Lee to Pearson) was the logical place to start. It was nothing better than a slum with fire, health and safety hazards."

THE REDEVELOPMENT Association couldn't raise the kind of money necessary to buy the land and start superblock rolling so Tomorrow Corp. was formed," he continued.

Des Plaines Tomorrow Corp. — an offshoot of Redevelopment Assn. made up of 40-plus people who signed their names on the dotted line and guaranteed a minimum of $5,000 backing for Superblock.

"T-Corporation was also open to anybody who wanted to pledge $5,000 or more. A lot of people hid under the table when they were asked to put their money where their mouth was — a few came forward," he said.

Tomorrow Corp. was set up as a not-for-profit corporation. The guarantors, according to Terry will not make a penny on their years of research, time and energy when superblock becomes a reality. If the project succeeds their guarantee notes will be torn up; if it fails they lose $5,000, whatever they pledged.

"The list of guarantors has never been a secret," said James Paroubek, president of Redevelopment Assn. and board member of the Tomorrow Corp. "The guarantors sought to raise enough to purchase property for the initial phase."

The guarantors, led by their 10-member board of directors acquired 19 parcels of land worth $1.3 million.

"TOMORROW CORP. has, through the guarantors, a clear title to this property," said Terry. "It is in a position to sell it for net cost to whomever will develop it."

After the property was slowly, painstakingly acquired (one parcel took several years of haggling before it was purchased) the Tomorrow board interviewed numerous developers. Some dropped out; others were thrown out. Then along came J. R. Gottlieb and Co., a developer willing to financially commit himself to redevelopment.

Des Plaines Mall Corp. was formed, consisting of Gottlieb, Erickson and Stevens' architectural firm and William L. Kunkel and Co. Realtor.

"Tomorrow Corp. has nothing to do with the Des Plaines Mall Corp. We have given them an option on purchasing our land to build the superblock. They can pull out. They don't own it," Terry said.

KUNKEL DROPPED of the Mall Corp. leaving two partners instead of three. Gottlieb has restated his commitment to superblock and has said he will stick with the project despite the "regrettable loss" of Kunkel.

And the guarantors are sitting back waiting to see what happens. If the Mall Corp. pulls out they will search for a new developer. If it buys superblock land the notes will be torn up and the guarantors will be happy.

"If this thing goes bust the banks will turn to the guarantors and ask for the $5,000," Terry said. "We're all out on the line. We have put up the collateral. At any minute now my next phone call could say, 'Alright pay up.'"

"TOMORROW CORP. was set up so no one could make a nickel on this thing," he continued. "The people on the board are involved because they've got their money backing the project. My money's there — I've got to be interested."

"It's been an awful long pull. Some of those guys have really run their pants off to get redevelopment going. I can't tell you the number of hours we've put in without pay because we believe in Des Plaines."

"Redevelopment Assn. and Tomorrow have to say we will take it upon ourselves to put this thing together. We've tried for three years to find a developer to get us off the hook. Now we have one and it could all blow up if we get a bad reaction from the public, the press or the city council."

'Show of confidence' pay hike set: board members

School district head Erviti will seek position elsewhere

by FRED GACA
A News Analyst

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Supt. James Erviti is on his way out, according to informed sources in the district.

Two school board members have said Erviti's contract, expected to be reviewed at tonight's meeting, is a "hunting license" that allows Erviti to remain in the district now, but he is expected to look for a new job.

The two members say a deal has been arranged between Erviti and the board to give him an 8 per cent pay increase for the remaining two years of his contract. The raise would be by unanimous approval of the board, which would be a "show of confidence" to aid Erviti in finding a new job. The raise would boost Erviti's salary to $33,970. He has been with the district since 1970.

THE DEAL is necessary because of an embarrassing split vote in April that granted Erviti a 10 per cent raise. The board voted 4-3 on April 13 to grant the raise, but the vote came the day before the school board elections.

The board was criticized for voting then, because two of the board members were "lame ducks" who were not seeking reelection.

Erviti will not comment on the situation. Of the other five board members, one denied knowledge of any deal, and the others had no comment. One member was unavailable.

The board vote on April 13 also has been challenged as illegal because notice of the special meeting reportedly did not meet all legal requirements. According to board member Judy Zanca and district resident Nita Stamm, notice of the meeting was not posted on the district office door, and a different notice was sent to the news media than was given to the board members. District employees said two different notices were sent out.

SINCE THE April meeting, the board has been awaiting a legal opinion from the state's attorney's office on the legality of the meeting. None has been given yet. If the board votes on the new salary proposal tonight, any question of legality of the business conducted at the April 13 meeting would be academic.

Sources say Erviti is willing to accept the 8 per cent raise in exchange for a unanimous vote, and he is willing to look for a new job because of the split in the board. However, he needs the unanimous vote to have a good reference for any job he might seek, the sources say.

Persons associated with the district say Erviti's problems with the board can be traced to his strong, dominating, abrasive personality.

The school board in 1970 reportedly hired Erviti knowing of his strong personality because it felt that type of administrator was needed. Two members of that board — Allen Sparks and Al Domanico — still are on the board, Sparks as president.

A YEAR before Erviti was hired, the board members had requested the resignation of then Supt. Donald Thomas because they felt he no longer had control of the district.

This was in spite of Thomas' work that led to national fame in the 1960s for educational innovation in the district. At the same time, he led the district into financial shambles. In the 1968-69 budget, $250,000 was omitted through a "human error," according to Thomas at the time.

Erviti then was hired to bring control back to the district. Even his strongest opponents admit he has done a good job in terms of administration. Under Erviti, the district has developed what is considered one of the most sophisticated budget preparation methods for any school district, because revenue and expense allocations are extremely detailed.

Erviti also is considered a knowledgeable educator, especially for primary grades.

THROUGH SEVERAL long executive sessions that were closed to the public and the press, the board decided on its future in regards to Erviti. Several deals have been rumored, but the 8 per cent raise is the one the board appears to have decided on in an effort to avoid more controversy.

It has been obvious through Erviti's tenure that he has had vocal opposition, most often from supporters of Thomas who were angry about his dismissal. Many say Erviti has alienated residents and school personnel.

If a clean break is in the offing, Dist. 59 will again have to try to decide what kind of superintendent it really wants.

SPLASHING IN THE pool is a good way to beat the heat, as this young boy has found out. The Elk Grove Park District is now selling pool passes at the park district office, 499 Biesterfeld Rd.

Devon-53 project will be built 'even without OK'

The Devon-53 housing project will be built even if the Elk Grove Village plan commission and board of trustees refuse to annex the property, according to the developer's attorney.

Robert DiLeonardi, who represents the developers, said zoning for the project would be obtained from Cook County if the village did not annex the property. He said "it is my understanding" that the developers will proceed on the project.

DiLeonardi made his comment at the conclusion of Thursday's public hearing on the controversial development.

DONALD MEYER, spokesman for a citizens' group opposed to the project, said Friday the group plans to fight any attempt to build the project under either village or county approval.

Meyer said the proposed site for the project, near the intersection of Devon Avenue and Rte. 53, is not completely zoned by the county. He said DiLeonardi's remark about obtaining county zoning, "was strictly one of conjecture."

At Thursday's meeting, Meyer presented a petition, signed by more than 1,300 persons, demanding the proposed development be approved by a referendum, not board action.

Meyer said the citizens feel they should be the ones to grant the final approval or rejection for the development. He said he did not know how serious the plan commission and village board considered the citizens' request for a referendum, but "if they think they can put it (the petition) in a drawer and ignore it, they have another thought coming."

CHARLES ZETTER, village president, said the board of trustees has never considered having a referendum on the project. He would not predict if the board would favor a referendum, "because we never really talked about it."

The Devon-53 development consists of three large sections, totaling 267 acres, that are to be built by several developers using a common plan. When completed, the development would have 6,402 living

Lightning kills boy, 14, at park

An Arlington Heights youth was killed Saturday by lightning as he stood beneath a tree to watch his older brother play baseball in Pioneer Park, near Park Street and Kennicott Avenue, Arlington Heights.

Daniel Druding, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent J. Druding Jr., 2343 S. Cedar Glen Ln., was struck in the back of the head by lightning, according to Arlington Heights Fire Department spokesmen. The boy was reported dead by fire and Arlington Heights police departments when they arrived at the scene at about noon.

The boy was reported to have gone to the park to play baseball with his team, but the threatening weather prevented the team from playing. Daniel then decided to watch his brother play and stood beneath a tree when heavy rains poured.

Daniel was graduated Friday from Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect. He was to attend St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights in the fall. Family members were preparing for his graduation surprise party Saturday morning after he left to play ball. Guests had begun to gather when police informed the family of the boy's death.

A coroner's inquest will be held at 10:30 a.m. today at Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, Arlington Heights.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Fire Department was alerted to several instances of power failures scattered throughout the village, a spokesman said. Power was restored "in a matter of minutes." Approximately 1½ inches of rain fell between 11:20 a.m. and 3:40 p.m. Saturday, according to the fire department's rain gauge.

About three or four houses in Palatine were struck by lightning in Saturday's storms, according to Palatine police department. Damages in one of the houses resulted in a hole in the roof. Lightning also struck a tree and set it on fire. The Hoffman Estates Fire Department was called to quench the fire.

In Schaumburg, two houses were struck by lightning, knocking off some of the siding on one house, and scattering the shingles of the other.

Some power and telephone lines were severed, but were restored the same day.

The Elk Grove Village Police Department reported a number of false alarms were set off when high winds and fallen branches broke through windows in several buildings. The village fire department reported that lightning struck a transformer at 850 Arthur.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

At quiet retreats more than 1,000 miles apart, Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nixon conferred yesterday with top aides on the eve of summit talks covering the breadth of Soviet-American relations from trade to disarmament. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, remained at Camp David. Nixon returned to Washington after spending the weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla.

White House Counsel John W. Dean has told Senate investigators he "assumed" President Nixon was aware of the Watergate cover-up within weeks of the bugging because he reported on it regularly to Nixon's two closest advisers. It was learned yesterday. But, sources close to the Senate probe, said Dean told investigators that he himself did not discuss aspects of the cover-up personally with the President until last March.

President Nixon, after months of virtual seclusion, is planning more public appearances to shore up confidence in his Watergate-shattered administration, White House aides indicated.

Led by sympathetic congressmen, about 8,000 persons rallied at the U.S. Capitol to protest Soviet treatment of Jews, timing their demonstration to coincide with final preparations for the Nixon-Brezhnev summit talks opening today.

The cities of the nation have become an "orphan" under the administration of President Nixon, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, host mayor for the 41st annual U.S. Conference of Mayors, said. He was one of six mayors to appear on "Meet the Press."

The Skylab astronauts received Father's Day greetings from President Nixon and he told them they proved "man still matters" in space. The Skylab crew is to return to earth Friday in their Apollo command ship after staying in orbit a record-shattering 28 days.

The world

Fighting between advancing Communists and government defenders south of Phnom Penh went into its second week with attacks at two towns only 13 miles from the Cambodian capital along Highway 4, a strategic supply route. The U.S. Command in Honolulu confirmed that American warplanes again flew support for the beleaguered government troops, as they have for 104 consecutive days.

Telephone service rep— the customer's advocate

by TONI GINNETTI

"I'm your service representative," the smiling, long-haired brunette says on your television screen. "If you have any problems with your phone or phone service, call me."

The congenial attitude is a common one portrayed for a TV commercial, but its message is genuine in the real-life operations of Illinois Bell Telephone Co.'s service representatives working at 105 W. Eastman in Arlington Heights.

Each day 38 service representatives at the office each handle 40 to 50 calls per day dealing with problems from repair service to billing complaints.

"Any question under the sun that a person might have about the phone company, that's what we get," says service representative Kathy Liga. "That's the good thing about the job, you never know what's on the other end of the phone until you pick it up."

"The function that we have is the interface between the customer and the company," according to Paul Arnold, commercial manager at the Arlington Heights Bell office. "We have 51,000 resdential accounts to handle, and each girl has about 3,200 accounts."

ARNOLDE AND his assistant, Jan McNitt, oversee the operation of the service representative staff, which assists customers with phone problems throughout Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Mount Prospect, and Elk Grove.

"There's no doubt that it takes a special kind of person for the job of service representative," Arnold says. "Age is not really a criterion. We've got a pretty good balance between age groups."

"The girls have to have a certain type of makeup. Diplomacy and tact, the two words that go hand in hand with customer handling, are essential," says Arnold. Above all, he adds, the representatives must have "maturity and common sense."

Training for the job is limited because, as Mrs. McNitt puts it, "on-the-job experience is when everything gets." There is an initial nine-week training period involving three weeks of classroom work, three weeks of desk work handling actual calls, and another three weeks of classroom work, Arnold says.

After 120 days of service, the reps go through continuation training in which they may get several days of specialized training in how to handle certain types of problem calls, he says.

CONTRARY TO what might be considered a "complaint department," Arnold says, the service representatives are geared toward assisting customers with phone service, billing errors, repair calls, and installation of phones. "The girls wear many hats," Arnold says.

Sometimes, too, the reps "put on the bill collector's hat," he adds. Computerized operations within the phone company have eased this task a great deal, however, Mrs. McNitt says.

The job of service rep varies little throughout the nationwide Bell system, according to Mrs. Liga, who worked in the New Jersey Bell system for three years. "The basic work doesn't vary but office practices may. But you never forget how to talk on the phone."

"The majority of calls are for orders," she says. Of some 40 to 50 calls received per day by each rep, only about five are complaints, she said.

"But what may start out as a complaint often ends up as something else, like an explanation of a toll charge or units used," she adds.

DOES IT BECOME boring for reps to deal with the same kinds of calls day after day? Definitely not, according to Mrs. Liga, who says, rather, that the job is a continuing challenge.

"The day goes by very fast because you're so busy," she says. "Mondays are the busiest days and days after a three-day holiday. There are days when you get nothing but problems and there is not enough time in the day to handle them all. But when you do solve a problem for someone, it's so satisfying."

There are, of course, days when the frustrations of the job take their toll, she adds. "I think everybody cries at least once. It's not really the customer. It's mostly the frustration of not being able to help. It builds up, and I think it happens about once every three or four years. After all, nobody likes to be yelled at."

Both Arnold and Mrs. McNitt point out that the role of the service rep is becoming increasingly important to the telephone company. "I think customers are becoming well aware that the operators are there to assist in placing calls and that is the extent of their job," Mrs. McNitt says.

"The service representatives are very important and they play a vital role," Arnold adds. "This is where it all starts. She is the one who initiates the action to get the phone installed. It all starts with her. She's the sparkplug. She's the customer's advocate."

JUST ANOTHER FEMALE tying up the telephone lines, you say? Not in this case, Kathy Liga spends most of her day on the phone, but it's part of her job. She's one of 38 service representatives at Illinois Bell Telephone's offices in Arlington Heights. Each day she and her co-workers handle hundreds of calls from customers with complaints or questions on service, billing or telephone repair.

Schools may hold multi-million fall referendum

A $10 to $20 million fall referendum is being contemplated by Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 to cover the cost of improvements to eight of its older schools and new building needs over the next four years.

Dist. 54 administrators are meeting with members of the building and sites committee, school representatives and community residents who are reviewing a preliminary $2.3 million remodeling program for the older schools.

Schools involved include Blackhawk, 370 Illinois Blvd.; Fairview, 146 Arizona Blvd.; Hoffman, 101 Grand Canyon St.; Lakeview, 280 Lakeview Ln.; and Twinbrook, 400 Ash Rd., all in Hoffman Estates. Schools in Schaumburg would include Campanelli, 310 S. Springguth Rd., and Schaumburg Elementary School on East Schaumburg Road.

Cost of the proposed improvements are: Blackhawk, $267,950; Campanelli, $361,500; Fairview, $378,600; Hillcrest, $16,200; Hoffman, $329,950; Lakeview, $210,000; Schaumburg, $368,050 and Twinbrook, $353,000.

"A REFERENDUM date has not been set," said Marvin Lapicola, assistant superintendent of finance. He said the remodeling proposals must be reviewed in several meetings before coming to the board and the district is now in the process of creating a timing schedule, and determining its classroom needs.

The first part of the referendum concerns the remodeling, said Lapicola. "If the board decides to call a fall referendum, we could be asking for bids between January and March and be ready to start work on the older schools during summer vacation next year," he added.

Architect S. Guy Fishman who prepared the remodeling proposal at the board's direction said remodeling could take as long as six to seven months.

Most of the schools were built in the mid-50s.

All of the schools share common problems such as low lighting levels, inadequate washroom, office, storage and classroom space, no learning centers, library, and a few do not have gymnasiums.

FISHMAN SAID most of the major work could be done in the summer months but some work would have to be done during the school term.

This could call for some doubling in classrooms and moving around within schools but would not involve extra busing to another school, said Lapicola.

He said "some of the older buildings were constructed at a time when the district was able to afford only classrooms and could not include such things as gyms and learning centers. Some of the facilities were donated by builders, and we were grateful for whatever we could get," he added. "Now we'd like to upgrade these older buildings," he said.

THE DISTRICT residents approved an Oct. 27, 1970 referendum of $7.35 million by a 2-1 majority, said Lapicola. The funds paid for most of the last four year's construction with approximately $2 million left for work now in progress.

Lapicola said the last referendum did not raise taxes because of increasing assessed valuation of Schaumburg Township.

The tax rate for Dist. 54 residents is 2.77 for each $100 of assessed valuation. Continued increased assessed valuation in the township makes me believe another referendum could be approved with no fear of a tax increase also, said Lapicola.

almost uniformly opposed to the project as presented by the developers. Their unfavorable comments were given in testimony under the questioning of Frederic Foberg, an attorney retained by the plan commission for the hearing.

DiLeonardi cross-examined the consultants in an effort to refute their unfavorable comments on the development.

Thursday's session was the second and last public hearing on the development held by the plan commission. About 75 persons attended.

In addition to the testimony presented by the consultants and developers, the commission also heard comments from about 20 members of the audience. All audience members who spoke were opposed to the project.

The commission will study the information presented at the hearings and will make a recommendation to the village board on the annexation. The board must make the final determination on the annexation of the project.

THE COMMISSION members said any questions raised by citizens in the hearings would be answered in the commission's final report.

Numerous points in the development were discussed at the hearing.

• Flood control — Elk Grove Park District Pres. Lew Smith pointed out that the land intended for public park sites is also designated as flood control area. Rainwater would be stored on these sites until it had time to drain away.

Contract awarded for pool work

Elk Grove Park District has awarded a $4,400 contract to the Potter Construction Co. for remodeling of the entrance to Disney Pool. No date has been set for work to begin, but the remodeling is expected to be finished within a few weeks.

The contract was awarded at the park board meeting Thursday. The board also awarded a $2,095 contract for tiling of the Lions Park Community Center, 180 Kennedy Blvd.

The board will conduct a public hearing on its appropriations ordinance (budget) at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the park district office, 499 Blesterfield Rd.

said the dual use of the land for flood control and parks was a desirable part of the plan. He said the sites would seldom be under water.

Zettek said Friday the dual use proposal would be "the ultimate use of the land." If the flood waters were not stored for too long a time.

Zettek said it would be acceptable if the flood waters were stored for only one or two days. He said it would be unacceptable if the water remained on the land for a longer period of time.

• Traffic — Neil Kenig, traffic consultant retained by the plan commission, said the development would generate 42,000-43,000 cars traveling in and out of the sites daily.

Keig said the amount of traffic would

The Harper College board of trustees has agreed to move as quickly as possible to replace the physical education facilities destroyed in a fire last week.

The board Thursday agreed to begin planning for an interim 6,000-square-foot building that would be used beginning this fall. The interim facility would "hold only 50 per cent of existing classes," according to College Pres. Robert Lahti, but he said it could be used to salvage many services disrupted by the fire.

The board also agreed to seek emergency legislation to provide about $1.6 million for construction of a new field house which could be completed in about two years.

Lahti said he had conferred with state Rep. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and other local legislators about the emergency appropriation. Lahti was also scheduled to meet Friday with the Illinois Junior College Board to discuss the emergency legislation.

A WEEK AGO Saturday night, a fire of undetermined origin gutted a horse barn which had served the college for five years for physical education classes and for storage. No one was injured in the blaze.

The interim facility, supported by Lahti and other college officials, would supply some classroom space, office facilities, and storage space for maintenance equipment.

John Gelch the college's athletic director, said the new facility would supply locker space to permit outdoor sports for nine weeks during the fall and nine weeks during the spring. For indoor sports, he said, "We'll have to do a lot of innovating. I'd guess you'd say."

The facility will be paid for by insurance money paid to the college as a result of the fire. College officials said that insurance adjusters are already beginning totaling the loss caused by the fire.

The new permanent field house to be called Building M, would cost about $2.2 million, according to college officials.

Lahti emphasized that the idea of speeding up the construction timetable would be for a facility which has already been planned but not yet funded.

WHEN ASKED when the facility would be completed, Lahti said, "The earliest would be two years if somebody said, 'yes' two weeks from now."

Unless the emergency funding legislation can be passed by the legislature, the facility could be financed completely by local tax funds. (Normally, construction of a college building is paid for by a mixture of state and local funds.)

If the emergency legislation is passed, the college would have to spend $550,000 in local tax money.

Building M could be built when state funds become available through normal procedures. But college officials don't expect that procedure would insure completion within two years.

Mental Health center seeks more state funds

Jordan Rosen, executive director of the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center, will personally contact state representatives to plead the center's case for additional state funding.

Rosen said the board of directors authorized him to travel to Springfield if necessary to see local representatives. He said an appeal to the representatives was the last alternative open to the center.

Last August, the center received an initial grant from the Illinois Department of Mental Health for $52,000. The grant permitted the center to begin providing mental health care to residents of the two townships.

Previously the two townships were part of the four-township area served by the Northwest Mental Health Association.

Palatine and Wheeling townships remain in the NMHA service area.

FOR THE COMING fiscal year, the center had requested a grant of $92,000. The state mental health department recommended the grant be renewed for the original amount of $52,000.

The department refused to even consider an appeal from the center on the smaller grant.

Rosen said failure to receive the full amount requested could jeopardize the center's ability to provide counseling and other services to residents.

He said since the grant was initially awarded last August, the center's case load has tripled. As of May 31, a total of 430 cases were being treated and another 40 cases were placed on a waiting list.

THE TREMENDOUS growth in cases has required maximum use of the center's personnel and facilities. Rosen said the center is considering a possible addition to the present building at 700 Blesterfield Rd. for more office space.

At the center's board meeting Thursday, new officers were named. Appointed were: Paul Rottberg, chairman; Connie Schoeld, vice chairman, and Donald Lange, treasurer.

The Elk Grove Village Community Service board also met Thursday. The Rev. George Rassas was appointed temporary chairman of the board. No other officers were named.

be worse than that in "Woodfield parking lot on the Saturday before Christmas."

He said extensive work and expansion, more than can be done with existing right-of-ways, would be required for the main roads serving the project.

DiLeonardi disputed the traffic figures and contended the road improvements included in the project would be adequate to handle traffic.

• Soil conditions — Kracower contended that much of the soil was either marshland or unstable and could not be built on.

DiLeonardi said engineering work could be done that would make the soil being worked out to permit students to do some work on the property. He said he feels the agreement is a fair one and that the school district will accept it.

The development would be a "housing mix" with single-family homes, quadrominiums, five and 12-story apartment buildings and commercial buildings. The project is expected to take at last 10 years.

The developers are seeking a village zoning change to allow a higher density of units per acre than the current ordinance. If the change is provided, the developers want to annex to the village.

THURSDAY'S MEETING was a long, detailed session. Special consultants, hired by the village plan commission, presented their evaluation of the project. The consultants, in their reports, were

Architects get go-ahead to plan new high school

by KATHERINE ROYCE

Architects soon will begin designs for a new high school in Palatine, the sixth school in Dist. 211.

The Dist. 211 board of education authorized the architects, Unteet and Associates, to plan the school for 2,500 students and make it expandable to an enrollment of 4,000. Architects estimate the total cost of the sixth school at $9.4 million.

The board also approved the sale of $1.65 million in bonds last week to produce additional revenue for the school. The site, which already has been purchased by the district, is located in the Winston Park subdivision of Palatine. The building is scheduled for completion in 1976.

A $17 MILLION bond referendum was passed in the district in 1970 for construction of the district's fifth and sixth schools and an addition to the administration center. The $8.65 million bond sale represents the remainder of the funds approved in 1970. The district's fifth school, Hoffman Estates High School, is now under construction and will be open for the fall semester.

The fate of Palatine High School, the district's oldest school, was discussed briefly by the board Thursday night. The school is in need of major remodeling and repairs and the board is considering whether to abandon the school, rebuild or repair it.

Board Pres. Robert Creek said Palatine has been appraised at about $500,000 by Willard Brown, of Arthur Rubloff Co., a former member of the Dist. 211 board. According to school officials, most of the value of Palatine comes from the 12 acre site.

MARVIN PLATE, director of research and information at Dist. 211, told the board population projections show Fremd High School and the sixth high school, both in Palatine Township, could handle about 2,500 students each in 1976, when the sixth school is completed.

According to alternatives for outlined at the May 24 board meeting, the district could move Palatine students into the sixth school in 1976 while Palatine is being rebuilt or it could move out of Palatine permanently. No final action has been taken by the board.

IN OTHER action Thursday night, the board appointed a coordinator for special education in the district, a position that was created by the board last winter. Douglas Verdonck, chairman of the special education department at Fremd High School, was named to position at an annual salary of $15,300. He begins his duties July 1.

Continuance granted in murder case

A preliminary hearing into the case against Israel Pequeno, the 18-year-old Palatine youth charged with the March 26 murder of his girlfriend, has been continued to July 27.

The continuance was issued Friday by Criminal Court Judge Benjamin Mackoff after Pequeno was arraigned. A lengthy series of pretrial hearings could be held before a trial date is set by the judge, according to a spokesman for the court. The spokesman said because of the pretrial hearings, the case could take up to a year to be decided.

Pequeno, 503 Westwood, Palatine, is being held in the murder of Sharon Soyka, 17, of 3717 Oriole Ln., Rolling Meadows. Rolling Meadows police found Miss Soyka shot to death in the kitchen of her home on March 26. Pequeno and Miss Soyka were both students at Rolling Meadows High School and had been dating, police said.

Pequeno has been held without bond in Cook County Jail since his arrest.

Pequeno has already been ordered to serve one to three years in the state penitentiary for delivery of marijuana in connection with a narcotics arrest at his home Feb. 8. Pequeno will not begin serving that term until the murder charge is decided.

The case against Pequeno is being prosecuted by Donald Novelli of the Cook County state's attorney's office. Pequeno is being represented by attorney Patrick A. Smith.

Lots of legal work ahead for pro rink

by JULIA BAUER

Palatine village officials are trying to iron out legal snags in their efforts to buy land and build a major sports facility on Northwest Highway to house the Chicago Cougars professional hockey team.

The biggest problem is legally justifying the purchase of the facility. Village Pres. Wendell Jones said there will have to be some "public purpose" to the stadium, besides the simple profit motive, before the village can legally support it.

"We're going very, very slowly with it. I've talked to a lot of people, and so far, everyone I've talked to has been for it," Jones said.

The possibility of a major sports stadium has been in the works for more than a year. Some 40 acres of land are already owned by Jordan and Walter Kaiser, brothers who are part-owners of the Cougars hockey team. That property, at the northeast corner of Northwest Highway and Rte. 53, is across from the Arlington Park Race Track.

EARLIER THIS month, village officials began huddling with the Kaisers to discuss a public-owned stadium facility, instead of one run privately. Village trustees will meet tonight in a closed-door session to talk over the legal hand-ups with Jordan Kaiser and his attorney.

The first report from the village attorney came in a private session last Thursday.

"His initial advice was not too encouraging," Jones said, and Kaiser will have several questions and conditions to meet before the village can legally join the venture.

One reason the Kaisers may be seeking public backing is the municipal government's power of condemnation. The village or other governing bodies could condemn more land and purchase it for the stadium but village attorneys must determine if this is legitimate when the facility built on the land would be turned back to a private enterprise through a leasing arrangement.

IN OTHER PUBLICLY-owned stadiums, the local government generally gets a percentage of the ticket sales, in an amount that should theoretically exceed the dollars in tax revenue that the government would otherwise receive from it. Public purchase of the property would remove it from the tax rolls.

The Cook County Grand Jury indicted 17-year-old David Byer Friday on charges of arson and burglary, stemming from the March 3 break-in and fire at One Hour Martinizing dry cleaners at 313 S. Rohlwing Rd., Palatine.

Dyer, who was living with a Palatine family when the break-in occurred, was charged with setting the fire that resulted in $50,000 damage to the dry cleaners.

No trial date has been set, but his case will probably be heard in four or five weeks, according to Palatine Det. Richard Sikorski.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

At quiet retreats more than 1,000 miles apart, Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nixon conferred yesterday with top aides on the eve of summit talks covering the breadth of Soviet-American relations from trade to disarmament. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, remained at Camp David. Nixon returned to Washington after spending the weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla.

White House Counsel John W. Dean has told Senate investigators he "assumed" President Nixon was aware of the Watergate cover-up within weeks of the bugging because he reported on it regularly to Nixon's two closest advisers, it was learned yesterday. But, sources close to the Senate probe, said Dean told investigators that he himself did not discuss aspects of the cover-up personally with the President until last March.

President Nixon, after months of virtual seclusion, is planning more public appearances to shore up confidence in his Watergate-shattered administration, White House aides indicated.

Led by sympathetic congressmen, about 8,000 persons rallied at the U.S. Capitol to protest Soviet treatment of Jews, timing their demonstration to coincide with final preparations for the Nixon-Brezhnev summit talks opening today.

The titles of the nation have become an "orphan" under the administration of President Nixon, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, host mayor for the 41st annual U.S. Conference of Mayors, said. He was one of six mayors to appear on "Meet the Press."

The Skylab astronauts received Father's Day greetings from President Nixon and he told them they proved "man still matters" in space. The Skylab crew is to return to earth Friday in their Apollo command ship after staying in orbit a record-shattering 28 days.

Fighting between advancing Communists and government defenders south of Phnom Penh went into its second week with attacks at two towns only 13 miles from the Cambodian capital along Highway 4, a strategic supply route. The U.S. Command in Honolulu confirmed that American warplanes again flew support for the beleaguered government troops, as they have for 104 consecutive days.

A new Protestant terrorist organization, the Ulster Freedom Fighters, said it killed a Roman Catholic seaman, the third murder claimed by the group in two days as Northern Ireland's violence continues. The death toll now stands at 827 in almost four years of fighting.

A strong earthquake in the Pacific sent residents of Hokaido, Japan's northernmost main island, scurrying from low-lying inland areas to escape a feared tidal wave that never came.

Plenty of legal work ahead on pro ice rink

Increased business activity near the stadium brought by the sports fans coming to the area. The site is within walking distance of the new Arlington track station for the Chicago and North Western R.R., and is at an exit from the Rte. 53 expressway.

Less risk for the sports franchise is the biggest advantage for club owners who go to public bodies for financing a stadium. Instead of building it themselves. Other publicly-owned stadiums have been constructed through the sale and revenue bonds, which does not require a public referendum.

Bonds are sold to revenue bond companies for the sports facility, on the premise that the stadium will pay for itself through gate and rent income. General obligation bonds require voter approval before they can be sold.

A RECENT MICHIGAN Supreme Court ruling denied an attempt by Wayne County government to build a $126 million Detroit stadium through the sale of such revenue bonds, because the project was not clearly intended to serve the public. If the stadium does not bring in enough profit to pay off the revenue bonds, the taxpayer potentially has to make up the debt.

The Palatine stadium would primarily center on a hockey rink for the Cougars and tennis courts, possibly for a professional tennis team. Jordan Kalser is executive vice president of World Team Tennis, a new organization set up to start a pro tennis league through 12 franchises around the country.

Initial plans for the main stadium call for $20 million facility, to seat 18,000 people. Another smaller arena to seat 7,000 to 11,000 people may be built next to the stadium for a practice rink and multipurpose building.

The Kaisers already own the Arlington Indoor Tennis Club, Orbit Roller Rink and Arlington Ice Spectrum at 1350 E. Northwest Hwy.

A SPECTACULAR FIRE at the Coach House Stables and McGuinn Farms in Northbrook Friday morning caused havoc for local police departments, who spent the day rounding up horses turned loose during the blaze. Wheeling firemen assisted 11 other area departments in fighting the fire, which caused an estimated $500,000 damage. One person was killed by the fire, and one injured by horses stampeding by the blaze. One horse also was killed in the fire, and two more were killed in an auto accident as they fled from the flames.

Village waives fee for City of Hope

The City of Hope, a fund raiser for research of catastrophic diseases, will not be required to pay a $15-a-day license for its July carnival in Palatine.

The waiver was approved by the village board.

Most other charitable organizations do not pay for the license.

The carnival, July 25-29, will be held at the Palatine Plaza on Northwest Highway.

Two new members were accepted into the Plum Grove 4-H Club at the last monthly meeting.

The new members are Curt Freund and Diane Honeyr.

Signup still open for Buehler camp

There's still time to register for the first round of summer camping at the Buehler (formerly Countryside) YMCA. Day camp starts June 25 at Buffalo Hill in Volo.

Four-day camp sessions are open throughout the summer. The first continues through July 8. Others run from July 9-20, July 30-August 10, and August 20-24.

Overnight camp, when youths in the second through the eighth grades go to a Union, Mich., camp for eight days, will run from July 21-28 and August 11-14.

Preschoolers camp will have four sessions during the summer at the Deer Grove Forest Preserve in northern Palatine Township.

Day camp for older children will include two counselors for each 8-10 youths and will encourage campers to work at their own individual projects at the campsites.

"We're not out to develop great skills or to just provide babysitting," said new recreation director Dennis Paulsen.

Instead, Paulsen said he and the counselors are going to try to help each youth find things he's good at, and not so good, at doing. Crafts, boating, and fishing are part of the camp activities at the Y summer camp.

"We want to offer kids all the things they can do at that site that they couldn't do at home," Paulsen said. The one-week training for counselors will emphasize encouraging individual campers' activities and safety.

More information on the summer camps is available at the Buehler YMCA Leadership Center, 115 W. Johnson St., Palatine, or by calling 359-2400.

Fire lane planned

A fire lane will soon be established at the Village Oasis, 315 to 345 W. Baldwin Rd. in Palatine, according to an ordinance approved by the village board last week.

The ordinance was proposed to provide ready access for fire-fighting vehicles and equipment to the scene of any fire.

Eighth graders win Legion award

Two area eighth graders were awarded the American Legion Award in the eighth-grade graduation ceremonies at Immanuel Lutheran School, N. Plum Grove and Lincoln roads in Palatine.

Among the 33 graduates, Lee Langhorst and Daryl Delber received the award for course, honor, patriotism, scholarship and service.

Immanuel Lutheran School offers pre-kindergarten through eighth-grade instruction.

Northbrook stable employee believed to be victim

Fire-charred body still unidentified

The identity of a badly burned body found in the debris from a stable fire in Northbrook Friday still has not been determined, Cook County Coroner's office officials said yesterday.

Cook County Sheriff's Police, however, said the victim may be Ron Henderson, 31, an employee at the Coach House Stables and McGuinn Farms on Sanders and Palatine Roads. Police said Henderson lived at the stables and was last seen Thursday night.

Maj. Richard Lowthorp said police have obtained Henderson's dental and X-ray records to aid in the identification process. He said Henderson was last seen when friends dropped him off at the stables following a softball game.

A SCHAUMBURG man also was injured by horses fleeing the blaze. Wheeling police said the car driven by Michael O'Halloran, 1326 E. Algonquin Road, struck and killed two horses who darted out of the woods at Willow Road and Milwaukee Avenue.

O'Halloran was taken to Holy Family Hospital, in Des Plaines where he was treated for glass cuts and released. Police said the car was totally destroyed.

Wheeling Police Lt. Ronald Nelson said his department was kept busy Friday rounding up horses turned loose during the early morning blaze. He said his department began their roundup at 4:15 a.m., when the first request for help came over the police radio.

ABOUT 90 horses were turned loose to flee to safety during the blaze, which began shortly before 4 a.m. Cook County Sheriff's Police said loose horses were reported as far west as River Road and as far north as Dundee Road.

Nelson said all Wheeling police squads assisted in rounding up the stray horses. "We rounded up several of them in the forest preserve," he said. "And we had (horses) trailers coming in from other stables."

According to Nelson, Wheeling police made no effort to catch the horses. "We merely located them and kept them in sight until the vans came," he said.

Nelson said motorists in the area were warned to drive carefully and keep a close watch for the horses. He said the animals were spooky from the fire, and two or three had darted out of the woods without warning.

SEVERAL COOK County Sheriff's Police squad cars were damaged at the scene of the fire when horses released from the burning building stampeded the cars.

Wheeling firemen assisted 11 other departments in fighting the blaze, which caused an estimated $500,000 damage to the one story building.

Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen said the fire fighting operations were hampered by lack of water. "We had no water out there," he said. "We had to shuttle it in from a mile and a half. They had some water out there, but nothing compared to the size of the fire. They didn't have a beggerman's chance."

Firemen remained at the scene of the fire until late Friday afternoon, putting out hot spots and cooling the remains. No cause for the fire has yet been determined. Fire officials however, believe it may have been started by improper use of smoking materials.

Cook County Sheriff's Police said most of the stray horses had been rounded up by late Friday afternoon.

The bane of Knightsbridge

by MARILYN HEISER

Bill Bibb's new home in Schaumburg's Knightsbridge subdivision sits regally on a lake front lot. But it's surrounded by construction rubble, mounds of dirt, unlandscaped areas, and swamp.

There were also three cracks in his foundation, he said, which caused flooding in the basement. The cracks are just one example of shoddy work, he adds.

The residents of Knightsbridge, experiencing problems like Bibb, have been complaining. Some of them for a year or even two. Their homes carry price tags upwards of $50,000, many closer to $80,000 or $100,000. They feel they have not gotten what they paid for.

The white pillar resting on the front stoop of Bill and Joan Taylor's large white-frame house of Prince Charles Lane moves. The concrete stoop sank and with it came the sliding pillar.

A LARGE CHUNK of siding on John and Carol Mullins' house across the street has been missing for months. Knightsbridge builder Nick Herman has promised both couples he will fix these problems. But the long delay is indicative, residents feel, of an increasingly intolerable situation.

Herman has answers to the complaints beleaguering him. "For one year we've had rain. We can't do the final earth moving work. Last week was the first week we could come in and do landscaping — you must wait until the earth dries."

Bill and Madeline Russell, who have lived in their home on Prince Charles Court since December, 1971, find the weather a time-worn excuse. Monday and Tuesday of last week the bulldozers and tractors finally began grading their lot, after months of promises and pleas. The irregular mounds of dirt surrounding their home were moved, and the land leveled so sod could be laid.

Bill Russell says the grading is still incorrect, and like much of the grading previously done in the subdivision, will contribute to the flooding problem. As he explained it, the house next door is too high and his house is too low. In any case, water will run down the slope and also rush off behind his home down a steep bank into the Hoffman Estates homes on Heather Lane.

THOSE RESIDENTS have threatened lawsuits, he says, and have called officials to do something about the flood problem.

"The whole topography of the land has been engineered and approved by the village engineer and will be done according to plan," Herman said. The village engineer did not want to discuss Herman's subdivision for the record.

The hills and valleys of Knightsbridge, Herman says, are not his fault. "This property was this way when I bought it. Hoffman-Rosner built the homes on Heather Lane, and he created the steep bank — now we're doing grading the best we know how. Additional storm sewers have been provided."

John Coste, Schaumburg administrator, confirmed that storm sewers were installed to alleviate the flooding into the Heather Lane homes.

Once residents finish their tales of flooding woe, they all point to an empty lot on Prince Charles Court. A foundation peeks out from the dry clay like ancient Roman ruins. Rusty steel bars jut up from the concrete structure, ready to jab a child playing. Neighbors say the foundation was laid, contrary to village objections. It later opened up, they say, and was left empty. After a child fell in, Herman filled in the foundation.

COSTE SAYS HE has tried to persuade Herman to fill in the area better, to cover it with black dirt, seed it and make it a play area. As he remembers it, the village did issue a permit for the foundation and at the time demanded soil borings.

When the foundation cracked, construction was stopped. Coste said before a building permit would be issued to build again on that lot, the purchaser must submit a written statement that he has reviewed all the soil test information and is aware of the possible problem. The consulting soil expert also recommended the type of basement-less house that the soil could support, Coste said.

Herman has a slightly different version. He says the foundation was laid, and when it was empty, very heavy earthmoving equipment was at work. Since the foundation was not supported by the floor or anything else, it cracked.

The village became upset, and Herman said he hired a soil expert to do borings. The expert felt the soil was all right, but the village wouldn't take the chance, Herman said. "So I decided to abandon the foundation, and will eventually build on a slab without a basement according to the expert's design."

HERMAN WAS EAGER last week to promise solutions to residents' complaints. He said a large gray construction trailer perched on a steep hill just behind the Mullins house will be moved further away.

Coste also said he would attempt to get the trailer moved. But he said it was a perfectly legitimate trailer being used for construction, and it was not a safety hazard.

The hill behind all the homes on the south side of Prince Charles Lane is another major resident complaint. Herman said he cannot level it out, and residents now realize the hill is there to stay.

"We didn't want this lot because of the hill. But Nick (Herman) promised us he'd take it down," said Mrs. Mullins. "He can't now because the electrical wires are near the surface. And every time it rains, mud rushes down the hill into our basement."

THE WATERLINE in the Mullins basement is about two feet high. The furnace and hot water heater have had to be replaced more than once. The back yard is hard dirt, broken up by narrow ridges which channel the water, and most of the neighbors' back yards are also not landscaped.

Mrs. Mullins says grass was planted but washed off the hill because of the steep grade.

"SOME PEOPLE prefer to leave their back yard alone and let the water rush down," Herman said. He pointed to a neighbor who has at his own expense landscaped. The Mullins said they have now hired a landscaper to improve their back yard's appearance, which they say should have been prepared properly by the builder.

EVERY BUILDER is plagued with these problems, Herman says. Asked about the unsightly condition of the retention ponds and park, he said "the village engineer in Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates directed the whole thing. It's being done according to their direction."

The dead fish on the banks of the lake are comparable to the alewives prevalent on the beaches of Lake Michigan, and due to the workings of nature, he said. "Things happen that way — some things are beyond the controls of mortals."

Herman philosophizes on the rapid growth of Schaumburg, and feels it has contributed some of the problems. "In any subdivision, there are a percentage of people unhappy with certain things. Either the builder is permitted to finish a project unharassed or he picks up and leaves."

Asked if this was a possibility he was considering, Herman said "anything is possible." Coste said even if Herman left the project, the village has money in escrow to finish the streets and other public improvements.

KNIGHTSBRIDGE residents don't really want Herman to walk off the project, leaving it in its unfinished state. And Herman wants to finish his project, he says, and get on with building phases three and four.

"As the builder, I have a larger investment here than any single homeowner."

Residents contend that financial problems rival the weather as the chief difficulty Herman faces in making good his promises. One subcontractor, a local garage door company, confirmed the residents' story of unpaid bills. He has refused to work further until the bills are paid.

Herman said "my financing is my business. I don't want to discuss it."

However, he said his refinancing would be finished this week. At the time it is complete, his current partner, Don Rausch, would be out of the project, he said.

Tax reforms offered by Chicago panel

by JEANNETTE DE WYZE

Spiraling property taxes have drawn the wrath of homeowners and, increasingly, the attention of reformers.

Some of their ideas, which range from imposing a one per cent limit on property taxes to levying a local income tax on top of the state income tax, were offered last week at a day-long tax forum presented by the Greater Chicago Committee, at the Sheraton-Blackstone Hotel in Chicago.

Philip E. Watson, assessor of Los Angeles County in California, urged both a statutory limitation on property taxes and a reassessment of the way property taxes are now used.

WATSON, WHO IS credited with the massive reorganization and modernization of assessment procedures in Los Angeles County, advocated limiting property taxes to one per cent of market value. He said he rejects the argument that governments must always need more money than a fixed tax could yield.

A limit on property taxes would peg the taxes to the level of wealth of the community, he said.

He also suggested that states "ear-mark" tax sources.

"Why not limit the use of sales tax revenue to the support of schools since that is the purpose for which the sales tax was designed?" he said.

Watson suggested that income tax revenue should pay for other general community services, since the income tax is a broadly based general tax.

"The taxpayers are growing restless," he concluded. "We can no longer assume that there is a never ending supply of tax money for this year and the next year and the year after."

ROBERT N. SCHOEPLIN, a University of Illinois economics professor, told the forum that he felt the only feasible and adequate alternative to the real estate property tax would be a local personal income tax "piggybacked" to the present state personal income tax.

Schoepelin's proposal would require enabling legislation by the Illinois General Assembly. He recommended statewide uniform city-county personal income tax that would divide and coordinate tax receipts between residence and place of work (where applicable) on a 50-50 basis.

A wrapup of June 4-8 congressional votes by U.S. Representatives Philip Crane, R-12th, and Samuel Young, R-10th, will appear in tomorrow's Herald.

He estimated that a one per cent tax of this nature would yield an additional $130 million a year to the City of Chicago, using current figures.

Schoepelin rejected the ideas of reducing the quality and delivery of local government service, having the state and federal governments assume greater fiscal responsibility for some government services (such as schools) or using revenue sharing as alternate means for reducing the property tax.

He said the three approaches have "one or more pragmatic restrictions that would preclude local government reliance on such finances for any long-term property tax relief."

"All taxes are painful, but close examination shows that there are no present 'painless expedients' to the property tax," he said.

THOMAS M. TULLY, former chief deputy assessor of Cook County, also spoke before the forum. He proposed a five-point plan that he said can begin to relieve homeowners of high property taxes without shifting any further burden to industrial and commercial properties.

Tully's plan included:

- Having the state assume the primary burden of financing education. The state now pays only 35 per cent of the total cost of education in Cook County while local taxes account for about half the cost of education, Tully said.

- Enacting new legislation which would allow the county to hold slum landlords personally liable for unpaid property taxes.

- Resisting proposals to change federal income tax laws that allow a taxpayer to deduct losses from a real estate venture arising from accelerated depreciation against income from other investments or from the individual's earned income. Tully warned that changes in the present law would have a devastating effect on real estate development and investment, which in turn could mean higher property taxes for homeowners.

- Reconsidering the leasehold tax defeated by the legislature last week. The defeated bill would have allowed the taxing of property listed as exempt but leased to non-exempt users of the property.

- Continuing improvement of assessment procedures in the county.

The Greater Chicago Committee was formed two years ago to gather information about the extent of the property tax problem and to identify available alternative revenue sources.

Religion Today

by Rev. Lester Kinsolving

While four-star Gen. Ralph E. Haines was commanding the four continental armies of the United States two years ago, he was suddenly seized by the Spirit (in Buffalo, N.Y.) — so that he began speaking in tongues (glossolalia).

Interspersed among the general's holy (if incomprehensible) babblings was a number of notable statements, such as his viewing his command as "a rather large parish." Moreover, he announced that "My commander in chief is Jesus," and "I would rather be a private in the army of Jesus Christ than a general in the U.S. Army."

Commented a droll editorial in the Washington Star-News: "Careful consideration should be given to granting this wish."

Such has been the case. Private Haines is now a regular on the Tongues circuit — although he is invariably identified in this round of meetings, dinners and services by his higher rank. He often appears with his fellow Episcopalian, Rev. Dennis Bennett of Seattle.

THE TWO MEN were star performers at a recent Dallas meeting of some 300 Episcopal clergy (including the new Bishop of Colorado) who also regards such ecstatic outbursts and holy hysteria as evidence of a Great Spiritual Revival.

At Notre Dame each summer the campus is crowded with thousands of generally sincere, eager and pious Catholic adherents of this gibberish gimmick. Glossolalia will vehemently defend this weird and so easily counterfeited spouting of pseudo-sanctified nonsense by noting that it is sanctioned by the New Testament (to some extent.)

Precisely what extent may be determined by St. Paul's first letter to the Corinthians (Chapter 14, Verse 10): "Yet in the church, I would rather speak five words with my understanding, that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue."

WHEN CONFRONTED with this significant 2,000-to-1 devaluation, the babblers will generally shift to Jesus. And while there is not one word of Holy Scripture which reports that Jesus himself ever babbled, they will eagerly cite a New Testament passage whose authenticity has been frequently questioned by scholars, but in which the following statement is attributed to Jesus:

"And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them."

There is, fortunately, no reported poisonous snake-handling or poison-drinking movement within the Catholic or Episcopal churches — or the high echelons of the United States Army.

But in the Holiness Church of God in Jesus Name, located in Carson Springs, two snake-handling fanatics recently informed the congregation:

"We're doing just as the Lord bid us to do."

They then proceeded to drink strychnine. They subsequently twitched in convulsions all night and were dead by morning — no doubt having remained as firm in their unusual Biblical faith as are Father Bennett and Haines in theirs.

Harper to launch special program for deaf students

by WANDALYN RICE

Harper College will have a special program for about 20 deaf and hard-of-hearing students next year and college officials hope the program will expand to 100 students by 1976.

The Harper board last week approved a $20,000 appropriation to hire a teacher, sign language interpreters and note-takers to assist the deaf students in regular Harper classes.

This year several deaf students have been attending class at Harper, but have been hiring their own interpreters and note-takers.

Hershey High School has been designated an area center for deaf high school education and expects to have about 40 students next year, according to college officials.

Harper Vice Pres. Guerin Fischer said the program has been developed by Harper officials in cooperation with officials in the deaf program at Hershey, parents of deaf children and persons who work with the problems of the deaf statewide.

GEORGE PROPP, deaf education specialist from Northwestern University, and Samuel Block, project director for assessing the needs of the deaf for the adult education study being conducted by the state, commended the board Thursday after it approved program.

Propp and Block, both of whom are deaf, told the board using words and sign language they were pleased that the college would provide services for deaf students. Block said, "This kind of program at Harper is just what the deaf population of Illinois is aiming for. We are delighted to see Harper jump the gun."

Propp added that he hopes the college officials will be concerned with social opportunities for the deaf students as well as for their classroom experience. "If you have not participated in a bull session you have not been in college," he said, adding, "Every boy or whether he's deaf or not should have some choice in what to do. The benefits of a community college should be open to all students."

HARPER BOARD members reacted enthusiastically to the proposed program. Board member William Kelly said he hoped the school could serve more than 20 students if the first year and could expand the program as quickly as possible. Kelly said the $20,000 budget is altogether too modest.

College Pres. Robert Lahti said the college officials want to study the program as it starts and said, "The minute we can expand this program and ensure quality, we will."

In other action, the board agreed to set up a faculty-administration committee beginning in September to study the college's policy of awarding tenure to faculty members. The report would be given to the board by December.

According to Lahti, the committee will be asked to study the possibility of increasing the amount of time a teacher must serve before being granted tenure. The committee also will study what percentage of the Harper faculty should be on tenure at any time, Lahti said.

Lightning kills 14-year-old boy standing in park

An Arlington Heights youth was killed Saturday by lightning as he stood beneath a tree to watch his older brother play baseball in Pioneer Park, near Park Street and Kennicott Avenue, Arlington Heights.

Daniel Druding, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent J. Druding Jr., 2343 S. Cedar Glen Ln., was struck in the back of the head by lightning, according to Arlington Heights Fire Department spokesmen. The boy was reported dead by fire and Arlington Heights police departments when they arrived at the scene at about noon.

The boy was reported to have gone to the park to play baseball with his team, but the threatening weather prevented the team from playing. Daniel then decided to watch his brother play and stood beneath a tree when heavy rains poured.

Daniel was graduated Friday from Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect. He was to attend St. Victor High School in Arlington Heights in the fall. Family members were preparing for his graduation surprise party Saturday morning after he left to play ball. Guests had begun to gather when police informed the family of the boy's death.

A coroner's inquest will be held at 10:30 a.m. today at Lauterburg and Oehl-er Funeral Home, Arlington Heights.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Fire Department was alerted to several instances of power failures scattered throughout the village, a spokesman said. Power was restored "in a matter of minutes." Approximately 1½ inches of rain fell between 11:20 a.m. and 3:40 p.m. Saturday, according to the fire department's rain gauge.

About three or four houses in Palatine were struck by lightning on Saturday's storms, according to Palatine police department. Damages in one of the houses resulted in a hole in the roof. Lightning also struck a tree and set it on fire. The Hoffman Estates Fire Department was called to quench the fire.

In Schaumburg, two houses were struck by lightning, knocking off some of the siding on one house, and scattering the shingles of the other.

Some power and telephone lines were severed, but were restored the same day.

The Elk Grove Village Police Department reported a number of false alarms were set off when high winds and fallen branches broke through windows in several buildings. The village fire department reported that lightning struck a transformer at 850 Arthur.

A GRASSY KNOLL on a sunny day is a great place for the gang to play. And with school closed in the 20 schools of Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15, more than 12,000 youngsters will have lots of time to spend hiking through the grasslands and parks of the Northwest suburbs.

Continuance granted in murder case

A preliminary hearing into the case against Israel Pequeno, the 18-year-old Palatine youth charged with the March 26 murder of his girlfriend, has been continued to July 27.

The continuance was issued Friday by Criminal Court Judge Benjamin Mackoff after Pequeno was arraigned. A lengthy series of pretrial hearings could be held before a trial date is set by the judge, according to a spokesman for the court. The spokesman said because of the pre-trial hearings, the case could take up to a year to be decided.

Pequeno, 603 Westwood, Palatine, is being held in the murder of Sharon Soyka, 17, of 3717 Oriole Ln., Rolling Meadows. Rolling Meadows police found Miss Soyka shot to death in the kitchen of her home on March 26. Pequeno and Miss Soyka were both students at Rolling Meadows High School and had been dating, police said.

Pequeno has been held without bond in Cook County Jail since his arrest.

Pequeno has already been ordered to serve one to three years in the state penitentiary for delivery of marijuana in connection with a narcotics arrest at his home Feb. 8. Pequeno will not begin serving that term until the murder charge is decided.

Plenty of legal work ahead for pro rink

by JULIA BAUER

Palatine village officials are trying to iron out legal snags in their efforts to buy land and build a major sports facility on Northwest Highway to house the Chicago Cougars professional hockey team.

The biggest problem is legally justifying the purchase of the facility. Village Pres. Wendell Jones said there will have to be some "public purpose" to the stadium, besides the simple profit motive, before the village can legally support it.

"We're going very, very slowly with it. I've talked to a lot of people, and so far, everyone I've talked to has been for it," Jones said.

The possibility of a major sports stadium has been in the works for more than a year. Some 40 acres of land are already owned by Jordan and Walter Kaiser, brothers who are part-owners of the Cougars hockey team. That property, at the northeast corner of Northwest Highway and Rte. 53, is across from the Arlington Park Race Track.

EARLIER THIS month, village officials began huddling with the Kaisers to discuss a public-owned stadium facility, instead of one run privately. Village trustees will meet tonight in a closed-door session to talk over the legal hand-ups with Jordan Kaiser and his attorney.

The first report from the village attorney came in a private session last Thursday.

"His initial advice was not too encouraging," Jones said, and Kaiser will have several questions and conditions to meet before the village can legally join the venture.

One reason the Kaisers may be seeking public backing is the municipal government's power of condemnation. The village or other governing bodies could condemn more land and purchase it for the stadium but village attorneys must determine if this is legitimate when the facility built on the land would be turned back to a private enterprise through a leasing arrangement.

IN OTHER PUBLICLY-owned stadiums, the local government generally gets a percentage of the ticket sales, in an amount that should theoretically exceed the dollars in tax revenue that the government would otherwise receive from it. Public purchase of the property would remove it from the tax rolls.

Other fringe benefits could be increased business activity near the stadium brought by the sports fans coming to the area. The site is within walking distance of the new Arlington track station for the Chicago and North Western Ry., and is at an exit from the Rte. 53 expressway.

Less risk for the sports franchise is the biggest advantage for club owners who go to public bodies for financing a stadium, instead of building it themselves. Other publicly-owned stadiums have been constructed through the sale and revenue bonds, which does not require a public referendum.

Bonds are sold to revenue bond companies for the sports facility, on the premise that the stadium will pay for itself through gate and rent income. General obligation bonds require voter approval before they can be sold.

A RECENT MICHIGAN Supreme

Court ruling denied an attempt by Wayne County government to build a $126 million Detroit stadium through the sale of such revenue bonds, because the project was not clearly intended to serve the public. If the stadium does not bring in enough profit to pay off the revenue bonds, the taxpayer potentially has to make up the debt.

The Palatine stadium would primarily center on a hockey rink for the Cougars and tennis courts, possibly for a professional tennis team. Jordan Kaiser is executive vice president of World Team Tennis, a new organization set up to start a pro tennis league through 12 franchises around the country.

Initial plans for the main stadium call for $20 million facility, to seat 18,000 people. Another smaller arena to seat 7,000 to 11,000 people may be built next to the stadium for a practice rink and multipurpose building.

The Kaisers already own the Arlington Indoor Tennis Club, Orbit Roller Rink and Arlington Ice Spectrum at 1350 E. Northwest Hwy.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

At quiet retreats more than 1,000 miles apart, Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nixon conferred yesterday with top aides on the eve of summit talks covering the breadth of Soviet-American relations from trade to disarmament. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, remained at Camp David. Nixon returned to Washington after spending the weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla.

White House Counsel John W. Dean has told Senate investigators he "assumed" President Nixon was aware of the Watergate cover-up within weeks of the bugging because he reported on it regularly to Nixon's two closest advisers, it was learned yesterday. But, sources close to the Senate probe, said Dean told investigators that he himself did not discuss aspects of the cover-up personally with the President until last March.

President Nixon, after months of virtual seclusion, is planning more public appearances to shore up confidence in his Watergate-shattered administration, White House aides indicated.

Led by sympathetic congressmen, about 8,000 persons rallied at the U.S. Capitol to protest Soviet treatment of Jews, timing their demonstration to coincide with final preparations for the Nixon-Brezhnev summit talks opening today.

The cities of the nation have become an "orphan" under the administration of President Nixon, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, host mayor for the 41st annual U.S. Conference of Mayors, said. He was one of six mayors to appear on "Meet the Press."

The Skylab astronauts received Father's Day greetings from President Nixon and he told them they proved "man still matters" in space. The Skylab crew is to return to earth Friday in their Apollo command ship after staying in orbit a record-shattering 28 days.

The world

Fighting between advancing Communists and government defenders south of Phnom Penh went into its second week with attacks at two towns only 13 miles from the Cambodian capital along Highway 4, a strategic supply route. The U.S. Command in Honolulu confirmed that American warplanes again flew support for the beleaguered government troops, as they have for 104 consecutive days.

Architects get go-ahead to plan new high school

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Architects soon will begin designs for a new high school in Palatine, the sixth school in Dist. 211.

The Dist. 211 board of education authorized the architects, Unteed and Associates, to plan the school for 2,500 students and make it expandable to an enrollment of 4,000. Architects estimate the total cost of the sixth school at $9.4 million.

The board also approved the sale of $8.65 million in bonds last week to produce additional revenue for the school. The site, which already has been purchased by the district, is located in the Winston Park subdivision of Palatine. The building is scheduled for completion in 1976.

A $17 MILLION bond referendum was passed in the district in 1970 for construction of the district's fifth and sixth schools and an addition to the administration center. The $8.65 million bond sale represents the remainder of the funds approved in 1970. The district's fifth school, Hoffman Estates High School, is now under construction and will be open for the fall semester.

The fate of Palatine High School, the district's oldest school, was discussed briefly by the board Thursday night. The school is in need of major remodeling and repairs and the board is considering whether to abandon the school, rebuild or repair it.

Board Pres. Robert Creek said Palatine has been appraised at about $500,000 by Willard Brown, of Arthur Rubloff Co., a former member of the Dist. 211 board. According to school officials, most of the value of Palatine comes from the 12 acre site.

MARVIN PLATE, director of research and information at Dist. 211, told the board population projections show Fremd High School and the sixth high school, both in Palatine Township, could handle about 2,500 students each in 1976, when the sixth school is completed.

According to alternatives for outlined at the May 24 board meeting, the district could move Palatine students into the sixth school in 1976 while Palatine is being rebuilt or it could move out of Palatine permanently. No final action has been taken by the board.

IN OTHER action Thursday night, the board appointed a coordinator for special education in the district, a position that was created by the board last winter. Douglas Verdonek, chairman of the special education department at Fremd High School, was named to position at an annual salary of $15,300. He begins his duties July 1.

Verdonek will work with special education programs in Northwest Education Cooperative of which Dist. 211 is a member. He will also coordinate the district's own special education programs which include classes for the educable mentally handicapped, the emotionally disturbed, children with partial sight, partial hearing and learning disabilities.

The board also approved raises for school nurses and mechanics. Total cost of raises for the five nurses is $3,000 and $3,600 for the five mechanics.

A SPECTACULAR FIRE at the Coach House Stables and McGuinn Farms in Northbrook Friday morning caused havoc for local police departments, who spent the day rounding up horses

turned loose during the blaze. Wheeling firemen assisted 11 other area departments in fighting the fire, which caused an estimated $500,000 damage. One person was killed by the fire, and one injured by horses stampeding by the blaze. One horse also was killed in the fire, and two more were killed in an auto accident as they fled from the flames.

Northbrook stable employee believed to be victim

Fire-charred body still unidentified

The identity of a badly burned body found in the debris from a stable fire in Northbrook Friday still has not been determined, Cook County Coroner's office officials said yesterday.

Cook County Sheriff's Police, however, said the victim may be Ron Henderson, 21, an employee at the Coach House Stables and McGuinn Farms on Sanders and Palatine Roads. Police said Henderson lived at the stables and was last seen Thursday night.

Maj. Richard Lowthorp said police have obtained Henderson's dental and X-ray records to aid in the identification process. He said Henderson was last seen when friends dropped him off at the stables following a softball game.

A SCHAUMBURG man also was injured by horses fleeing the blaze. Wheeling police said the car driven by Michael O'Halloran, 1326 E. Algonquin Road, struck and killed two horses who darted out of the woods at Willow Road and Milwaukee Avenue.

O'Halloran was taken to Holy Family Hospital, in Des Plaines where he was treated for glass cuts and released. Police said the car was totally destroyed.

Wheeling Police Lt. Ronald Nelson said his department was kept busy Friday rounding up horses turned loose during the early morning blaze. He said his department began their roundup at 4:15 a.m., when the first request for help came over the police radio.

ABOUT 90 horses were turned loose to flee to safety during the blaze, which began shortly before 4 a.m. Cook County Sheriff's Police said loose horses were reported as far west as River Road and as far north as Dundee Road.

Nelson said all Wheeling police squads assisted in rounding up the stray horses. "We rounded up several of them in the forest preserve," he said. "And we had (horses) trailers coming in from other stables."

According to Nelson, Wheeling police made no effort to catch the horses. "We merely located them and kept them in sight until the vans came," he said.

Nelson said motorists in the area were warned to drive carefully and keep a close watch for the horses. He said the animals were spooky from the fire, and two or three had darted out of the woods without warning.

SEVERAL COOK County Sheriff's Police squad cars were damaged at the scene of the fire when horses released from the burning building stampeded the cars.

Wheeling firemen assisted 11 other departments in fighting the blaze, which caused an estimated $500,000 damage to the one story building.

Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen said the fire fighting operations were hampered by lack of water. "We had no water out there," he said. "We had to shuttle it in from a mile and a half. They had some water out there, but nothing compared to the size of the fire. They didn't have a beggerman's chance."

Firemen remained at the scene of the fire until late Friday afternoon, putting out hot spots and cooling the remains. No cause for the fire has yet been determined. Fire officials however, believe it may have been started by improper use of smoking materials.

Cook County Sheriff's Police said most of the stray horses had been rounded up by late Friday afternoon.

Signup still open for Buehler camp

There's still time to register for the first round of summer camping at the Buehler (formerly Countryside) YMCA. Day camp starts June 23 at Buffalo Hill in Valo.

Four-day camp sessions are open throughout the summer. The first continues through July 6. Others run from July 9-20, July 30-August 10, and August 20-24.

Overnight camp, when youths in the second through the eighth grades go to a Union, Mich., camp for eight days, will run from July 21-28 and August 11-18.

Preschoolers camp will have four sessions during the summer at the Deer Grove Forest Preserve in northern Palatine Township.

Day camp for older children will include two counselors for each 8-10 youths and will encourage campers to work at their own individual projects at the campsite.

"We're not out to develop great skills or to just provide babysitting," said new recreation director Dennis Paulsen.

Instead, Paulsen said he and the counselors are going to try to help each youth find things he's good at, and not so good, at doing. Crafts, boating, and fishing are part of the camp activities at the Y summer camp.

"We want to offer kids all the things they can do at that site that they couldn't do at home," Paulsen said. The one-week training for counselors will emphasize encouraging individual campers' activities and safety.

More information on the summer camps is available at the Buehler YMCA Leadership Center, 115 W. Johnson St., Palatine, or by calling 359-2400.

The bane of Knightsbridge

by MARILYN HEISER

Bill Blbo's new home in Schaumburg's Knightsbridge subdivision sits regally on a lake front lot. But it's surrounded by construction rubble, mounds of dirt, unlandscaped areas, and swamp.

There were also three cracks in his foundation, he said, which caused flooding in the basement. The cracks are just one example of shoddy work, he adds.

The residents of Knightsbridge, experiencing problems like Blbo, have been complaining. Some of them for a year or even two. Their homes carry price tags upwards of $50,000, many closer to $80,000 or $100,000. They feel they have not gotten what they paid for.

The white pillar resting on the front stoop of Bill and Joan Taylor's large white-frame house of Prince Charles Lane moves. The concrete stoop sank and with it came the sliding pillar.

A LARGE CHUNK of siding on John and Carol Mullins' house across the street has been missing for months. Knightsbridge builder Nick Herman has promised both couples he will fix these problems. But the long delay is indicative, residents feel, of an increasingly intolerable situation.

Herman has answers to the complaints beleaguering him. "For one year we've had rain. We can't do the final earth moving work. Last week was the first week we could come in and do landscaping — you must wait until the earth dries."

Bill and Madeline Russell, who have lived in their home on Prince Charles Court since December, 1971, find the weather a time-worn excuse. Monday and Tuesday of last week the bulldozers and tractors finally began grading their lot, after months of promises and pleas. The irregular mounds of dirt surrounding their home were moved, and the land leveled so sod could be laid.

Bill Russell says the grading is still incorrect, and like much of the grading previously done in the subdivision, will contribute to the flooding problem. As he explained it, the house next door is too high and his house is too low. In any case, water will run down the slope and also rush off behind his home down a steep bank into the Hoffman Estates homes on Heather Lane.

THOSE RESIDENTS have threatened lawsuits, he says, and have called officials to do something about the flood problem.

"The whole topography of the land has been engineered and approved by the village engineer and will be done according to plan," Herman said. The village engineer did not want to discuss Herman's subdivision for the record.

The hills and valleys of Knightsbridge, Herman says, are not his fault. "This property was this way when I bought it. Hoffman-Rosner built the homes on Heather Lane, and he created the steep bank — now we're doing grading the best we know how. Additional storm sewers have been provided."

John Coste, Schaumburg administrator, confirmed that storm sewers were installed to alleviate the flooding into the Heather Lane homes.

Once residents finish their tales of flooding woe, they all point to an empty lot on Prince Charles Court. A foundation peeks out from the dry clay like ancient Roman ruins. Rusty steel bars jut up from the concrete structure, ready to jab a child playing. Neighbors say the foundation was laid, contrary to village objections. It later opened up, they say, and was left empty. After a child fell in, Herman filled in the foundation.

COSTE SAYS HE has tried to persuade Herman to fill in the area better, to cover it with black dirt, seed it and make it a play area. As he remembers it, the village did issue a permit for the foundation and at the time demanded soil borings.

When the foundation cracked, construction was stopped. Coste said before a building permit would be issued to build again on that lot, the purchaser must submit a written statement that he has reviewed all the soil test information and is aware of the possible problem. The consulting soil expert also recommended the type of basement-less house that the soil could support, Coste said.

Herman has a slightly different version. He says the foundation was laid, and when it was empty, very heavy earthmoving equipment was at work. Since the foundation was not supported by the floor or anything else, it cracked.

The village became upset, and Herman said he hired a soil expert to do borings. The expert felt the soil was all right, but the village wouldn't take the chance, Herman said. "So I decided to abandon the foundation, and will eventually build on a slab without a basement according to the expert's design."

HERMAN WAS EAGER last week to promise solutions to residents' complaints. He said a large gray construction trailer perched on a steep hill just behind the Mullins house will be moved further away.

Coste also said he would attempt to get the trailer moved. But he said it was a perfectly legitimate trailer being used for construction, and it was not a safety hazard.

The hill behind all the homes on the south side of Prince Charles Lane is another major resident complaint. Herman said he cannot level it out, and residents now realize the hill is there to stay.

"We didn't want this lot because of the hill. But Nick (Herman) promised us he'd take it down," said Mrs. Mullins. "He can't now because the electrical wires are near the surface. And every time it rains, mud rushes down the hill into our basement."

THE WATERLINE in the Mullins basement is about two feet high. The furnace and hot water heater have had to be replaced more than once. The back yard is hard dirt, broken up by narrow ridges which channel the water, and most of the neighbors' back yards are also not landscaped.

Mrs. Mullins says grass was planted but washed off the hill because of the steep grade.

SOME PEOPLE prefer to leave their back yard alone and let the water rush down," Herman said. He pointed to a neighbor who has at his own expense landscaped. The Mullins said they have now hired a landscaper to improve their back yard's appearance, which they say should have been prepared properly by the builder.

EVERY BUILDER is plagued with these problems, Herman says. Asked about the unsightly condition of the retention ponds and park, he said "the village engineer in Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates directed the whole thing. It's being done according to their direction."

The dead fish on the banks of the lake are comparable to the ailments prevalent on the beaches of Lake Michigan, and due to the workings of nature, he said. "Things happen that way — some things are beyond the controls of mortals."

Herman philosophizes on the rapid growth of Schaumburg, and feels it has contributed some of the problems. "In any subdivision, there are a percentage of people unhappy with certain things. Either the builder is permitted to finish a project unharmed or he picks up and leaves."

Asked if this was a possibility he was considering, Herman said "anything is possible." Coste said even if Herman left the project, the village has money in escrow to finish the streets and other public improvements.

KNIGHTSBRIDGE residents don't really want Herman to walk off the project, leaving it in its unfinished state. And Herman wants to finish his project, he says, and get on with building phases three and four.

"As the builder, I have a larger investment here than any single homeowner."

Residents contend that financial problems rival the weather as the chief difficulty Herman faces in making good his promises. One subcontractor, a local garage door company, confirmed the residents' story of unpaid bills. He has refused to work further until the bills are paid.

Herman said "my financing is my business. I don't want to discuss it."

However, he said his refinancing would be finished this week. At the time it is complete, his current partner, Don Rausch, would be out of the project, he said.

Schools may hold multi-million fall referendum

A $10 to $20 million fall referendum is being contemplated by Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 to cover the cost of improvements to eight of its older schools and new building needs over the next four years.

Dist. 54 administrators are meeting with members of the building and sites committee, school representatives and community residents who are reviewing a preliminary $2.3 million remodeling program for the older schools.

Schools involved include Blackhawk, 370 Illinois Blvd.; Fairview, 146 Arizona Blvd.; Hoffman, 101 Grand Canyon St.; Lakeview, 280 Lakewood Ln., and Twinbrook, 400 Ash Rd., all in Hoffman Estates. Schools in Schaumburg would include Campanelli, 310 S. Springinguth Rd., and Schaumburg Elementary School on East Schaumburg Road.

Cost of the proposed improvements are: Blackhawk, $267,950; Campanelli $361,500; Fairview, $378,600; Hillcrest, $46,200; Hoffman, $329,950; Lakeview, $240,800; Schaumburg, $368,050 and Twinbrook, $353,000.

"A REFERENDUM date has not been set," said Marvin Lapicola, assistant superintendent of finance. He said the remodeling proposals must be reviewed in several meetings before coming to the board and the district is now in the process of creating a timing schedule, and determining its classroom needs.

The first part of the referendum concerns the remodeling, said Lapicola. "If the board decides to call a fall referendum, we could be asking for bids between January and March and be ready to start work on the older schools during summer vacation next year," he added.

Architect S. Guy Fishman who prepared the remodeling proposal at the board's direction said remodeling could take as long as six to seven months.

Most of the schools were built in the mid-50s.

All of the schools share common problems such as low lighting levels, inadequate washroom, office, storage and classroom space, no learning centers, library, and a few do not have gymnasiums.

FISHMAN SAID most of the major work could be done in the summer months but some work would have to be done during the school term.

This could call for some doubling in classrooms and moving around within schools but would not involve extra building to another school, said Lapicola.

He said "some of the older buildings were constructed at a time when the district was able to afford only classrooms and could not include such things as gyms and learning centers. Some of the facilities were donated by builders, and we were grateful for whatever we could get," he added. "Now we'd like to upgrade these older buildings" he said.

THE DISTRICT residents approved an Oct. 27, 1970 referendum of $7.35 million by a 2-1 majority, said Lapicola. The funds paid for most of the last four year's construction with approximately $2 million left for work now in progress.

Lapicola said the last referendum did not raise taxes because of increasing assessed valuation of Schaumburg Township.

The tax rate for Dist. 54 residents is 2.77 for each $100 of assessed valuation. Continued increased assessed valuation in the township makes me believe another referendum could be approved with no fear of a tax increase also, said Lapicola.

Shoddy housing

by MARILYN HEISER

Bill Blho's new home in Schaumburg's Knightsbridge subdivision sits regally on a lake front lot. But it's surrounded by construction rubble, mounds of dirt, unlandscaped areas, and swamp.

There were also three cracks in his foundation, he said, which caused flooding in the basement. The cracks are just one example of shoddy work, he adds.

The residents of Knightsbridge, experiencing problems like Blho, have been complaining. Some of them for a year or even two. Their homes carry price tags upwards of $50,000, many closer to $80,000 or $100,000. They feel they have not gotten what they paid for.

The white pillar resting on the front stoop of Bill and Joan Taylor's large white-frame house of Prince Charles Lane moves. The concrete stoop sank and with it came the sliding pillar.

A LARGE CHUNK of sliding on John and Carol Mullins' house across the street has been missing for months. Knightsbridge builder Nick Herman has promised both couples he will fix these problems. But the long delay is indicative, residents feel, of an increasingly intolerable situation.

Herman has answers to the complaints beleaguering him. "For one year we've had rain. We can't do the final earth moving work. Last week was the first week we could come in and do landscaping — you must wait until the earth dries."

Bill and Madeline Russell, who have lived in their home on Prince Charles Court since December, 1971, find the weather a time-worn excuse. Monday and Tuesday of last week the bulldozers and tractors finally began grading their lot, after months of promises and pleas. The irregular mounds of dirt surrounding their home were moved, and the land leveled so sod could be laid.

Bill Russell says the grading is still incorrect, and like much of the grading previously done in the subdivision, will contribute to the flooding problem. As he explained it, the house next door is too high and his house is too low. In any case, water will run down the slope and also rush off behind his home down a steep bank into the Hoffman Estates homes on Heather Lane.

THOSE RESIDENTS have threatened lawsuits, he says, and have called officials to do something about the flood problem.

"The whole topography of the land has been engineered and approved by the village engineer and will be done according to plan," Herman said. The village engineer did not want to discuss Herman's subdivision for the record.

The hills and valleys of Knightsbridge, Herman says, are not his fault. "This property was this way when I bought it. Hoffman-Rosner built the homes on Heather Lane, and he created the steep bank — now we're doing grading the best we know how. Additional storm sewers have been provided."

John Coste, Schaumburg administrator, confirmed that storm sewers were installed to alleviate the flooding into the Heather Lane homes.

Once residents finish their tales of flooding woe, they all point to an empty lot on Prince Charles Court. A foundation peeks out from the dry clay like ancient Roman ruins. Rusty steel bars jut up from the concrete structure, ready to jab a child playing. Neighbors say the foundation was laid, contrary to village objections. It later opened up, they say, and was left empty.

After a child fell in, Herman filled in the foundation.

COSTE SAYS HE has tried to persuade Herman to fill in the area better, to cover it with black dirt, seed it and make it a play area. As he remembers it, the village did issue a permit for the foundation and at the time demanded soil borings.

When the foundation cracked, construction was stopped. Coste said before a building permit would be issued to build again on that lot, the purchaser must submit a written statement that he has reviewed all the soil test information and is aware of the possible problem. The consulting soil expert also recommended the type of basement-less house that the soil could support, Coste said.

Herman has a slightly different version. He says the foundation was laid, and when it was empty, very heavy earthmoving equipment was at work. Since the foundation was not supported by the floor or anything else, it cracked.

The village became upset, and Herman said he hired a soil expert to do borings. The expert felt the soil was all right, but the village wouldn't take the chance, Herman said. "So I decided to abandon the foundation, and will eventually build on a slab without a basement according to the expert's design."

HERMAN WAS EAGER last week to promise solutions to residents' complaints. He said a large gray construction trailer perched on a steep hill just behind the Mullins house will be moved further away.

Coste also said he would attempt to get the trailer moved. But he said it was a perfectly legitimate trailer being used for construction, and it was not a safety hazard.

The hill behind all the homes on the south side of Prince Charles Lane is another major resident complaint. Herman said he cannot level it out, and residents now realize the hill is there to stay.

"We didn't want this lot because of the hill. But Nick (Herman) promised us he'd take it down," said Mrs. Mullins. "He can't now because the electrical wires are near the surface. And every time it rains, mud rushes down the hill into our basement."

THE WATERLINE in the Mullins basement is about two feet high. The furnace and hot water heater have had to be replaced more than once. The back yard is hard dirt, broken up by narrow ridges which channel the water, and most of the neighbors' back yards are also not landscaped.

Mrs. Mullins says grass was planted but washed off the hill because of the steep grade.

"SOME PEOPLE prefer to leave their back yard alone and let the water rush down," Herman said. He pointed to a neighbor who has at his own expense landscaped. The Mullins said they have now hired a landscaper to improve their back yard's appearance, which they say should have been prepared properly by the builder.

EVERY BUILDER is plagued with these problems, Herman says. Asked about the unsightly condition of the retention ponds and park, he said "the village engineer in Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates directed the whole thing. It's being done according to their direction."

The dead fish on the banks of the lake are comparable to the alewives prevalent on the beaches of Lake Michigan, and due to the workings of nature, he said. "Things happen that way — (continued on page 5, section 2)

DEAD CARP add their stench to the construction debris lining one of the retention lakes in Schaumburg's Knightsbridge subdivision. Home-owners with lakefront lots paid extra to back onto what they thought would be a beautiful park and lake recreation area.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

At quiet retreats more than 1,000 miles apart, Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nixon conferred yesterday with top aides on the eve of summit talks covering the breadth of Soviet-American relations from trade to disarmament. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, remained at Camp David. Nixon returned to Washington after spending the weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla.

close to the Senate probe, said Dean told investigators that he himself did not discuss aspects of the cover-up personally with the President until last March.

President Nixon, after months of virtual seclusion, is planning more public appearances to shore up confidence in his Watergate-shattered administration, White House aides indicated.

Led by sympathetic congressmen, about 8,000 persons rallied at the U.S. Capitol to protest Soviet treatment of Jews, timing their demonstration to coincide with final preparations for the Nixon-Brezhnev summit talks opening today.

The cities of the nation have become an "orphan" under the administration of President Nixon, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, host mayor for the 41st annual U.S. Conference of Mayors, said. He was one of six mayors to appear on "Meet the Press."

The Skylab astronauts received Father's Day greetings from President Nixon and he told them they proved "man still matters" in space. The Skylab crew is to return to earth Friday in their Apollo command ship after staying in orbit a record-shattering 28 days.

The world

Fighting between advancing Communists and government defenders south of Phnom Penh went into its second week with attacks at two towns only 13 miles from the Cambodian capital along Highway 4, a strategic supply route. The U.S. Command in Honolulu confirmed that American warplanes again flew support for the beleaguered government troops, as they have for 104 consecutive days.

A new Protestant terrorist organization, the Ulster Freedom Fighters, said it killed a Roman Catholic seaman, the third murder claimed by the group in two days as Northern Ireland's violence continues. The death toll now stands at 827 in almost four years of fighting.

A strong earthquake in the Pacific sent residents of Hokaido, Japan's northernmost main island, scurrying from low-lying inland areas to escape a feared tidal wave that never came.

A cop goes by the book

by STEVE NOVICK

I can't help but sympathize with a group of youngsters arrested recently in Hoffman Estates for being out during curfew.

The boys, riding their bikes down Bode Road about 4:30 a.m. and carrying their fishing equipment, were on their way to see what they could catch.

Instead, they were hooked by a Hoffman Estates policeman.

If I were an officer of the law and saw the boys, I think I would have looked the other way. But, that's why I'm not in law enforcement.

The police officer who nabbed the young lawbreakers was doing his job... by the book... and you can't argue too much against his action.

It's just that it seems and the kids had to encounter the man in blue on what was to have been an innocent little fishing expedition.

AT ANOTHER time, in another place, a cop might not have given a second thought to the kids. But our local police are the ones who know more than anyone the frustration caused by the large volume of vandalism that goes on locally.

It's the type of destruction that costs

the school district $15,000 this past school year; the type that can bring a working man to tears when he sees his lawn destroyed or his car painted over by kids out for kicks.

Seeing this happen time after time a policeman can get to a point where he loses the gut feeling that lets him know who's out to catch carp and who's out to make crap of the facilities our community values so highly.

So the cop goes by the book, and you can't argue with that, and that's the saddest thing of all.

Architects get go-ahead to plan new high school

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Architects soon will begin designs for a new high school in Palatine, the sixth school in Dist. 211.

The Dist. 211 board of education authorized the architects, Unted and Associates, to plan the school for 2,500 students and make it expandable to an enrollment of 4,000. Architects estimate the total cost of the sixth school at $9.4 million.

The board also approved the sale of $9.65 million in bonds last week to produce additional revenue for the school. The site, which already has been purchased by the district, is located in the Winston Park subdivision of Palatine. The building is scheduled for completion in 1976.

A $17 MILLION bond referendum was passed in the district in 1970 for construction of the district's fifth and sixth schools and an addition to the administration center. The $8.65 million bond sale represents the remainder of the funds approved in 1970. The district's fifth school, Hoffman Estates High School, is now under construction and will be open for the fall semester.

The fate of Palatine High School, the district's oldest school, was discussed briefly by the board Thursday night. The school is in need of major remodeling and repairs and the board is considering whether to abandon the school, rebuild or repair it.

Board Pres. Robert Creek said Palatine has been appraised at about $500,000 by Willard Brown, of Arthur Rubloff Co., a former member of the Dist. 211 board. According to school officials, most of the value of Palatine comes from the 12 acre site.

MARVIN PLATE, director of research and information at Dist. 211, told the board population projections show Fremd High School and the sixth high school, both in Palatine Township, could handle about 2,500 students each in 1970,

According to alternatives for outlined at the May 24 board meeting, the district could move Palatine students into the sixth school in 1976 while Palatine is being rebuilt or it could move out of Palatine permanently. No final action has been taken by the board.

IN OTHER action Thursday night, the board appointed a coordinator for special education in the district, a position that was created by the board last winter. Douglas Verdonck, chairman of the special education department at Fremd High School, was named to position at an annual salary of $15,300. He begins his duties July 1.

Students make playground 'their' area

When older youngsters at Hale Elementary School complained that there was no room for them in the school's playground, a group of teachers found a solution.

Armed with paint brushes and cans of paint, teachers Martin Cook, Cynthia Athans, Marsha Becker and Steve Isackson changed an asphalt area beside the school to the older kids' special play area.

The teachers painted games like "four corners," and "hopscotch," on the pavement and the youngsters use them, reserving the playground equipment for the younger children.

The painting is unfinished, teachers ran out of paint and time, but the project will be completed when the fall term starts," said Principal Roger Dubois.

Continuance granted in murder case

A preliminary hearing into the case against Israel Pequeno, the 18-year-old Palatine youth charged with the March 26 murder of his girlfriend, has been continued to July 27.

The continuance was issued Friday by Criminal Court Judge Benjamin Mackoff after Pequeno was arraigned. A lengthy series of pretrial hearings could be held before a trial date is set by the judge, according to a spokesman for the court. The spokesman said because of the pre-trial hearings, the case could take up to a year to be decided.

Pequeno, 503 Westwood, Palatine, is being held in the murder of Sharon Soyka, 17, of 3717 Oriole Ln., Rolling Meadows. Rolling Meadows police found Miss Soyka shot to death in the kitchen of her home on March 26. Pequeno and Miss Soyka were both students at Rolling Meadows High School and had been dating, police said.

Pequeno has been held without bond in Cook County Jail since his arrest.

Pequeno has already been ordered to serve one to three years in the state penitentiary for delivery of marijuana in connection with a narcotics arrest at his home Feb. 8. Pequeno will not begin serving that term until the murder charge is decided.

Fall teacher contracts still being negotiated

Teachers in Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 left school Friday for summer vacations with no new salary contract for the fall teaching term.

Contract negotiations still are under way and will continue throughout the summer or until an agreement is reached, said both negotiating teams.

Chicago attorney Marvin Glink acts as the school district's chief negotiator with board member Gordon Thoren heading the district's negotiations team.

Jay Hanson, president of the Schaumburg Education Association, representing the district's approximately 700 teachers said "we hope progress will be made or we would not be meeting during the summer."

Lightning kills boy, 14, at park

An Arlington Heights youth was killed Saturday by lightning as he stood beneath a tree to watch his older brother play baseball in Pioneer Park, near Park Street and Kennicott Avenue, Arlington Heights.

Daniel Druding, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent J. Druding Jr., 2343 S. Cedar Glen Ln., was struck in the back of the head by lightning, according to Arlington Heights Fire Department spokesmen. The boy was reported dead by fire and Arlington Heights police departments when they arrived at the scene at about noon.

The boy was reported to have gone to the park to play baseball with his team, but the threatening weather prevented the team from playing. Daniel then decided to watch his brother play and stood beneath a tree when heavy rains poured.

Daniel was graduated Friday from Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect. He was to attend St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights in the fall. Family members were preparing for his graduation surprise party Saturday morning after he left to play ball. Guests had begun to gather when police informed the family of the boy's death.

A coroner's inquest will be held at 10:30 a.m. today at Lauterburg and Gehler Funeral Home, Arlington Heights.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Fire Department was alerted to several instances of power failures scattered throughout the village, a spokesman said. Power was restored "in a matter of minutes." Approximately 1½ inches of rain fell between 11:20 a.m. and 3:40 p.m. Saturday, according to the fire department's rain gauge.

About three or four houses in Palatine were struck by lightning in Saturday's storms, according to Palatine police department. Damages in one of the houses resulted in a hole in the roof. Lightning also struck a tree and set it on fire. The Hoffman Estates Fire Department was called to quench the fire.

In Schaumburg, two houses were struck by lightning, knocking off some of the siding on one house, and scattering the shingles of the other.

Some power and telephone lines were severed, but were restored the same day.

The Elk Grove Village Police Department reported a number of false alarms were set off when high winds and fallen branches broke through windows in several buildings. The village fire department reported that lightning struck a transformer at 850 Arthur.

Broken promises, broken dreams

The bane of Knightsbridge —just plain shoddy homes

some things are beyond the controls of mortals."

Herman philosophizes on the rapid growth of Schaumburg, and feels it has contributed some of the problems. "In any subdivision, there are a percentage of people unhappy with certain things. Either the builder is permitted to finish a project unharassed or he picks up and leaves."

Asked if this was a possibility he was considering, Herman said "anything is possible." Coste said even if Herman left the project, the village has money in escrow to finish the streets and other public improvements.

KNIGHTSBRIDGE residents don't really want Herman to walk off the project, leaving it in its unfinished state. And Herman wants to finish his project, he says, and get on with building phases three and four.

"As the builder, I have a larger investment here than any single homeowner."

Residents contend that financial problems rival the weather as the chief difficulty Herman faces in making good his promises. One subcontractor, a local garage door company, confirmed the residents' story of unpaid bills. He has refused to work further until the bills are paid.

Herman said "my financing is my business. I don't want to discuss it."

However, he said his refinancing would be finished this week. At the time it is complete, his current partner, Don Rausch, would be out of the project, he said.

IN A COUPLE of months, Herman said he would be putting in new roads and sewers to service units three and four. "I haven't been able to do anything because of the horrible weather. I have a home sold now and can't build it."

Coste said Herman won't be allowed to build any roads, sewers, or houses until units one and two are finished.

Herman said the final paving coat on Prince Charles Lane would be laid as soon as construction equipment is through using the road. The village confirms it has asked him not to put on the final coat until construction ends.

In short, Herman feels the problems in Knightsbridge have been blown out of proportion. "If it weren't for this grading problem, the whole thing wouldn't be discussed. In two weeks, when everybody is out watering their lawn and the seeds are coming up, this will all be memories."

And Herman adds, building a home is like childbirth. "If people remembered the pain of childbirth they would only have one child. But people forget."

EXCAVATORS WERE finally at work last week grading the lots in Schaumburg's Knightsbridge subdivision. After final grading, grass seed will be planted, as promised by the builder. Some of the residents have lived with rough, ungraded

Whodunit baffles cops, park officials

by STEVE BROWN

Police and park district officials in Schaumburg are on the lookout for a tall thief and a set of missing speakers.

The search developed after three outdoor speakers were stolen from the Atcher Pool complex on Springinsguth Road last week.

"It had to be someone really tall or a good climber," said Paul Derda, park director, adding the speakers were on poles 15 feet high.

While park officials did not find the $300 replacement costs very humorous, they did bat about several less than serious suggestions to prevent a recurrence of the incident.

"We could always grease the poles," one park commissioner suggested.

"Or electrify them," another official countered.

Derda jokingly recommended hiring a Doberman pinscher equipped with suction cups on his feet.

"If the dog did not scare the thief away, the suction cups would allow it to chase the speaker snatcher up the pole until police arrived," he explained.

All of the suggestions were rejected, however, the board voted in favor of a proposal to attach the speakers more securely and raise the height of the poles.

GESTURING WITH AGGRAVATION at continued residents' complaints, Nick Herman, builder of the Knightsbridge subdivision, says that horrible rainy weather has held up completion of the area. Excavating was in progress as he talked, and he promised that grading and landscaping would be finished if the weather held.

Only 1 official's and he's backing you-know-who . . .

Village Administrator John Coste, the only official contacted in Schaumburg who would discuss Knightsbridge, said "the village has taken action and will continue to take action."

Progress has been made, he said, since the village stopped developer Nick Herman and the Knightsbridge Corp. from building any more houses. The village has a building inspector assigned on a full-time basis to that area, and Coste said he is kept informed of the situation.

By the end of the building season, Coste said he expected some progress would be visible. Asked if he was aware of any financial problems that might prevent Herman from finishing the project satisfactorily, Coste said, "All I know is the village has in escrow funds to guarantee the completion of the public improvements."

The village could withdraw Herman's right to finish the project only if he were seriously and over an extended period of time in default of the ordinance setting up the subdivision, Coste said.

HOWEVER, "KNIGHTSBRIDGE Corp. has certain constitutional rights" and the company has not violated or been in default of the ordinance, Coste added.

There are some building code violations in the homes, but Coste said there is a difference between code violations and deficiencies due to shoddy work or incomplete work.

"Deficiencies are a civil matter as a violation of the contract between the buyer and the seller. But the village, although it is not legally obligated to do so, will continue to use whatever means available to rectify, within reason, all situations the homeowners are unhappy with," he said.

Joan Taylor seems typical of the dissatisfied residents. "It's not one major complaint but a series of little things. We spend most of our time apologizing for the looks of our area," she said.

Carol Mullins across the street mentioned the kids wearing boots in the summer-time because of the mud and the ungraded and unseeded backyards. And the trench running along her house on Knightsbridge Lane, was Florence Owens' complaint.

"WE FLOODED four times with eight feet of water each time last summer. We had to replace the furnace and put in a new motor, and everything in the basement was ruined — I don't use it now. Nick (Herman) has since put grates in the driveway and dug this ditch to help the flooding," Mrs. Owens said.

It hasn't flooded since, she added, but the ditch is unsodded and unsightly. She said their house appeared to be too low for the street and was "in violation of village codes."

"Nick is just a dreamer. He's basically a good builder. But he can't stick to a budget and he borrows from one guy to pay off another," she said.

The residents agree Nick Herman builds a basically good house, and personally they like him. "But he's a poor businessman," several said.

"FOR A LOT OF us these are our first homes. We went into it with the idea he was a terrific builder," Mrs. Mullins said.

As Joe Wolfe of Prince Charles Court says, the number of building code violations he found in his house seemed excessive. Wolfe also finds fault with the length of time it took to close the deal on his house. The nine-month wait was indicative of something wrong, he says.

Bill Russell, also of Prince Charles Court, says there are structural defects in his roof. Herman says the Russell's roof is designed the way they requested — and that since the complaint, an architect has redesigned it.

POTENTIALLY DANGEROUS rusty rods jut up from a partially filled-in unused foundation. Next door, Bill Bibb's home sits on ungraded and unlandscaped land, without a driveway, and with wood planks for a walk. Bibb moved in only last January, but his problems are shared by older residents of Knightsbridge.

'Some deficiencies not deficiencies': Coste

The Village of Schaumburg last April approved the next two phases of Knightsbridge with the condition that no building permits would be issued until residents' complaints have been resolved and public improvements made.

Proper grading, parkway fill, street lights, trees, and a deep enough retention lake are some of the public improvements Schaumburg has requested, Village Adm. John Coste says. While he agrees there are some building code violations in the homes, there are "a number of deficiencies reported by the homeowners which are not in fact deficiencies," he said.

Mostly, Coste says, the problem in Knightsbridge involves uncompleted work. And progress has been made, especially in view of the horrible weather conditions, he says.

The residents of Knightsbridge want more rapid progress and more responsiveness to their complaints.

THE SIX-ACRE park and lake site Knightsbridge residents found so attractive in the drawings is still desolate, dry clay, sparsely grassed, populated with a few mallards and dead carp, adding their aroma to the overall esthetics.

There are two lakes now after the first one proved inadequate in controlling the flooding on Jones Road. One lake sports the dead carp—and the other is filled with silty, muddy pools of water.

Coste says the village is partly responsible for the swampy appearance of the second retention pond. The village, he says, has been pumping a new well into the lake to clear it. And after being advised of the dead smelly fish, he said he asked the health department to take care of the matter. But he asks, "Did you ever see a retention pond that didn't look like a swamp?"

The park district agrees with the residents that the park-lake site is below standards. Paul Derda, director of the district, said about a year ago the Knightsbridge Corp. asked if the district would take over the park. "We told them the things that must be done before we would accept it — better grading, seeding, a pathway for maintenance."

DERDA SAID he hasn't heard from the developer again. "We have no responsibility for the way it looks now. Of course with the rains they've had tremendous problems over there."

The rains seem to be everyone's answer to what's wrong with Knightsbridge. The residents living there for over a year and in some cases two years have been hearing continually about poor weather, and they find it an unsatisfactory answer.

The initial impression Knightsbridge gives perhaps sums up their aggravation. Some of the homes along Prince Charles Lane look as if they were just completed. It seems unlikely that very many are occupied as they sit unlandscaped on naked rough clay, apart from the land.

The trucks and trailers surrounding a couple of homes, the poorly surfaced street, and the general dirt add to the "construction site" appearance.

One resident of two years referred to Prince Charles Lane as "that bombed-out area." She lives on Knightsbridge Lane, and despite her complaints, said it could be worse.

Help from the community is needed to provide programs for children with hearing problems during a special summer school session starting June 25.

The summer school class depends on help from persons willing to come and tell about a skill, craft, travel or life experience, said Jennie Swanson, of special services in Elementary School Dist. 54.

The emphasis of the program is to improve the children's communication skills and their ability to socialize.

"Language and communication skills can be improved through group language discussions," she said.

"However, in order to provide these experiences for the children we are asking for help from the community," she added. "If you have a butterfly collection, a collection of coins, etc., or a sewing or cooking specialty, antique car, or folk costumes that you would be willing to share with the children, please contact the special services department," she said.

'Show of confidence' pay hike set: board members

School district head Erviti will seek position elsewhere

by FRED GACA
A News Analysis
Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Supt. James Erviti is on his way out, according to informed sources in the district.

James Erviti

Two school board members have said Erviti's contract, expected to be reviewed at tonight's meeting, is a "hunting license" that allows Erviti to remain in the district now, but he is expected to look for a new job.

The two members say a deal has been arranged between Erviti and the board to give him an 8 per cent pay increase for the remaining two years of his contract. The raise would be by unanimous approval of the board, which would be a "show of confidence" to aid Erviti in finding a new job. The raise would boost Erviti's salary to $33,070. He has been with the district since 1970.

THE DEAL is necessary because of an embarrassing split vote in April that granted Erviti a 10 per cent raise. The board voted 4-3 on April 13 to grant the raise, but the vote came the day before the school board elections.

The board was criticized for voting then, because two of the board members were "lame ducks" who were not seeking reelection.

Erviti will not comment on the situation. Of the other five board members, one denied knowledge of any deal, and the others had no comment. One member was unavailable.

The board vote on April 13 also has been challenged as illegal because notice of the special meeting reportedly did not meet all legal requirements. According to board member Judy Zanca and district resident Nita Stamm, notice of the meeting was not posted on the district office door, and a different notice was sent to the news media than was given to the board members. District employees said two different notices were sent out.

SINCE THE April meeting, the board has been awaiting a legal opinion from the state's attorney's office on the legality of the meeting. None has been given yet. If the board votes on the new salary proposal tonight, any question of legality of the business conducted at the April 13 meeting would be academic.

Sources say Erviti is willing to accept the 8 per cent raise in exchange for a unanimous vote, and he is willing to look for a new job because of the split in the board. However, he needs the unanimous vote to have a good reference for any job he might seek, the sources say.

Persons associated with the district say Erviti's problems with the board can be traced to his strong, dominating, abrasive personality.

The school board in 1970 reportedly hired Erviti knowing of his strong personality because it felt that type of administrator was needed. Two members of that board — Allen Sparks and Al Domanico — still are on the board, Sparks as president.

A YEAR before Erviti was hired, the board members had requested the resignation of then Supt. Donald Thomas because they felt he no longer had control of the district.

This was in spite of Thomas' work that led to national fame in the 1960s for educational innovation in the district. At the same time, he led the district into financial shambles. In the 1968-69 budget, $250,000 was omitted through a "human error," according to Thomas at the time.

Erviti then was hired to bring control back to the district. Even his strongest opponents admit he has done a good job in terms of administration. Under Erviti, the district has developed what is considered one of the most sophisticated budget preparation methods for any school district, because revenue and expense allocations are extremely detailed.

Erviti also is considered a knowledgeable educator, especially for primary grades.

THROUGH SEVERAL long executive sessions that were closed to the public and the press, the board decided on its future in regards to Erviti. Several deals have been rumored, but the 8 per cent raise is the one the board appears to have decided on in an effort to avoid more controversy.

It has been obvious through Erviti's tenure that he has had vocal opposition, most often from supporters of Thomas who were angry about his dismissal. Many say Erviti has alienated residents and school personnel.

If a clean break is in the offing, Dist. 59 will again have to try to decide what kind of superintendent it really wants.

DETERMINATION marks the performance of Lisa Menas Jaycees Junior Sports Jamboree Saturday. Local winners will advance to state and regional contests.

Bills for incorporation will go to Walker soon

The fate of two bills permitting the incorporation of Prospect Heights as a municipality will soon rest with Gov. Daniel Walker.

House Bill 138, now in its third reading in the Senate, is expected to pass next week, according to its sponsor, State Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge.

A similar bill, Senate Bill 183, sponsored by State Sen. Bradley Glass, R-Northfield, was unanimously approved Tuesday by the House Committee on Cities and Villages and was to be placed on the House consent calendar today.

This means the bill can be approved by the House without a debate and sent to the governor unless a House member objects on the floor. The bill is still subject to amendments.

JUCKETT SAID both bills are at about the same stage of approval and will probably be sent to the governor together. He said he expects the governor to approve Glass' bill.

"I assume the (Illinois) Municipal League will request that the governor sign the Senate Bill," he said. "Mine gives municipalities no say at all in incorporation plans."

Both bills, introduced into the Illinois General Assembly in March, would permit unincorporated areas of 7,500 or more residents to incorporate without the approval of nearby municipalities.

CURRENT LAW states that an area of fewer than 7,500 residents must seek approval from municipalities within 1 1/2 miles for incorporation. Another section says that neighboring municipalities

High rises are the issue at hand—not politics

by TOM VON MALDER

What can a resident of Mount Prospect do if he or she doesn't want high-rise development in the village?

Norma Murauskis' first thought she could speak to the village board. When that failed, she thought a petition would be the answer. She little suspected she would touch off a chain of events that has resulted in a heated battle between Mayor Robert D. Teichert and a newly-formed citizens' group.

Mrs. Murauskis, 1828 Pheasant Trl., who vehemently maintains she is devoid of any political ambition, now feels the real issue — that of high-rise developments — has been lost in the barrage of political charges and countercharges. She wants to get back to the main anti-high-rise issue, and is asking those who support her to attend tomorrow's village board meeting.

As elvite committee chairman for the Mount Shire Homeowners Association, Mrs. Murauskis began attending public hearings on the Colony project — a development of 704 apartments, a 256-room hotel, an office-finance center, a retail center and gas station to be built at the northwest corner of Oakton Street and Elmhurst Road.

SHE ATTENDED a hearing where the plan commission decided the Colony project would have to be scaled down before it could be approved or annexed to the village. Then she attended a village board meeting at which the board overruled the plan commission and approved the project with only minor changes.

"I was so shocked, I was speechless," Mrs. Murauskis said afterwards, explaining why she did not address the board at that time to oppose the project.

At the next village board meeting on May 1, Mrs. Murauskis finally got the nerve to speak. She attempted to address the village board prior to its ratification of the Colony annexation votes. She was cut off by Teichert, who said ratification was an internal board matter and not subject to discussion.

Shortly after, Teichert permitted Mrs.

Murauskis to speak. She accused the board of a "violation of the people's rights" in its annexation of the Colony.

SHE TOLD Teichert that if she had been able to speak earlier, she would have asked the board to delay ratification so she could circulate petitions opposing the Colony.

Two weeks later, at the May 15 village board meeting, Mrs. Murauskis again appeared before the village board and presented petitions against the Colony

This Morning In Brief

The nation

At quiet retreats more than 1,000 miles apart, Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nixon conferred yesterday with top aides on the eve of summit talks covering the breadth of Soviet-American relations from trade to disarmament. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, remained at Camp David. Nixon returned to Washington after spending the weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla.

White House Counsel John W. Dean has told Senate investigators he "assumed" President Nixon was aware of the Watergate cover-up within weeks of the bungling because he reported on it regularly to Nixon's two closest advisers, it was learned yesterday. But, sources close to the Senate probe, said Dean told investigators that he himself did not discuss aspects of the cover-up personally with the President until last March.

President Nixon, after months of virtual seclusion, is planning more public appearances to shore up confidence in his Watergate-shattered administration, White House aides indicated.

Led by sympathetic congressmen, about 6,000 persons rallied at the U.S. Capitol to protest Soviet treatment of Jews, timing their demonstration to coincide with final preparations for the Nixon-Brezhnev summit talks opening today.

The cities of the nation have become an "orphan" under the administration of President Nixon, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, host mayor for the 41st annual U.S. Conference of Mayors, said. He was one of six mayors to appear on "Meet the Press."

The Skylab astronauts received Father's Day greetings from President Nixon and he told them they proved "man still matters" in space. The Skylab crew is to return to earth Friday in their Apollo command ship after staying in orbit a record-shattering 28 days.

The world

Fighting between advancing Communists and government defenders south of Phnom Penh went into its second week with attacks at two towns only 13 miles from the Cambodian capital along Highway 4, a strategic supply route. The U.S. Command in Honolulu confirmed that American warplanes again flew support for the beleaguered government troops, as they have for 104 consecutive days.

Progress may be near in Rob Roy land deal

It appears that after more than two years of waiting, the River Trails Park District is moving closer to acquiring the southern 19 acres of the Rob Roy Driving Range in Mount Prospect for open space.

Last week, the park district directed its attorney, Roger Bjorvik, to ask the Circuit Court of Cook County for a trial date for condemnation proceedings against Kenroy, Inc., owners of the land.

Bjorvik has been negotiating with attorneys for Kenroy ever since September, when Kenroy withdrew its agreement to sell the southern 19 acres after the Village of Mount Prospect turned down a request by Kenroy for annexation and development of the entire 38-acre parcel of land.

Earlier, it had been agreed that Kenroy would sell the southern 19 acres to the park district for $680,000. It was also agreed that Kenroy would be allowed to build a retention lake on the southern half to handle storm water from the development that had been slated on the north half.

LAST YEAR, the Department of Housing and Urban Development approved a grant for the site that will pay 50 per cent of the purchase price of the land. The remainder of the money was to come from $750,000 approved by voters in a bond referendum.

Bjorvik said he would continue to try to negotiate with Kenroy for the land before the trial date comes up. Despite all the time spent in waiting by the park district, Bjorvik said he still has "high hopes for actually settling before we go to trial."

According to Bjorvik, before a trial date is set, he must prepare a motion for condemnation and inform Kenroy of the action. After that, both parties appear in court and a trial date is set. Once a date is set, the case should be called in a few months, Bjorvik said.

The park district has made some tentative long range plans for the land once they acquire it. Some of these include tennis courts and picnic groves.

A "very long-range plan," according to Park Director Marvin Weiss, is to have a lake stocked with fish located on the land.

Bills for incorporation will go to Walker soon

within one mile must consent to incorporation, regardless of the population of the area.

Glass' bill differs from Juckett's in that it permits a neighboring municipality to object to court if the proposed incorporation adversely affects the governmental services provided by the existing municipality. The court could rule that the boundaries of the proposed new municipality be adjusted to overcome the objections.

Juckett said he didn't think passage of the Glass bill would affect Prospect Heights' chances for incorporation.

"As far as incorporation of Prospect Heights is concerned, I don't think any municipality can prove a disruption of services as the lines and boundaries are now drawn," he said.

Glass' bill would become effective immediately when signed by the governor. Juckett's bill would not go into effect until October.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, the House sponsor of Glass' bill, said Arlington Heights has requested the right to object to incorporation of Prospect Heights if incorporation adversely affects the performance of Arlington Heights municipal services.

bearing 931 signatures.

The matter might have ended there, except for the fact that Mrs. Muraskis had asked defeated mayoral candidate and attorney Michael Minton to help her draw up the petition. When Minton drew up the petition he added a preamble that included a paragraph Telchert was to find inflammatory.

The paragraph read: "Whereas, the public hearings and village board meetings held in connection with the Colony Project were not conducive to free and open discussions since opponents of said Colony Project were embarrassed, intimidated, harassed, and harassed by the mayor and certain members of the village board."

At the June 5 village board meeting, Telchert called the preamble a pack of lies and particularly zeroed in on that paragraph. He said he had contacted several (later specified as four) signers of the petition who said they had not seen the preamble when they signed.

USING THE excuse that most persons probably had not seen the preamble, Telchert threw out the Colony petitions. He said the petitions would be reinstated Tuesday with only the names of those who contacted the village clerk to ask that their names be left on.

Meanwhile, a citizens group was formed with no leaders and no name. Mrs. Muraskis became a member of the group that Telchert later criticized as hostile to the administration, but she said the group has nothing to do with her petition. She emphasizes that her petition against high-rises came first.

Mrs. Muraskis denies there was any deceit in procuring signatures for the petitions. She said each of the 20 persons who circulated the petitions had the preamble with them plus a reproduction of a newspaper article that told of her appearance before the village board.

She said a lot of people did not read the whole preamble, but it was there for them to read.

By Friday morning, only 20 persons had asked that their names be reinstated on the petitions. Mrs. Muraskis said the reason is confusion. "The majority of people I talked to said they were confused as to what Telchert was talking about in his letter." She said they are also afraid of village officials' reactions.

Site weighed for Maryville students

A 10-acre parcel of land owned by the Archdiocese of Chicago appears to be the prime site under consideration by River Trails School Dist. 28 for the location of a new school facility for students at Maryville Academy, Des Plaines.

The Illinois Capital Development Board (ICDB) Wednesday released $120,000 in state funds for architectural planning and preliminary construction of the facility. The ICDB is responsible for all state school construction.

According to acting Supt. James Retzlaff, the decision on a site for the new facility "still hasn't been finalized" by the Dist. 28 board. However, when asked if the Archdiocesan property, directly north of Maryville at the corner of Gregory Street and River Road, was the prime site consideration, Retzlaff replied, "That's basically ours" (area of consideration).

The other two sites that had been mentioned as possible locations for the new facility were a four-acre site near the River Trails Park District building on Burning Bush Lane and a parcel of land owned by the Northern Illinois Gas Co. in the Dist. 28 area. However, former Supt. Tom Warden mentioned the latter site as a remote possibility several months ago because it would require negotiations and condemnation of the land.

ACCORDING TO Retzlaff, the board would like to have about 10 acres for the new facility. "But actually we probably could operate on less than that — maybe five to seven acres," he said. The 10-acre site owned by the Archdiocese would be ideal for the facility.

At one time, Warden mentioned that the district might possibly lease land from the Archdiocese for the new school. However, according to Retzlaff, if the board and the ICDB did finally decide on the 10-acre Archdiocesan site, the ICDB would buy the land from the Archdiocese.

The ICDB has the final word on the selection of the architect and the site for the new facility. The Dist. 28 board has already recommended the Oak Brook firm of Fields, Goldman and Magee as architect for the project. The firm has experience with construction of another special education facility in Naperville.

According to Ray Morris, project coordinator for the ICDB, approval of site and architect for the new facility should be coming sometime next week. "By next week, I hope we'll have all these things worked out," Morris said.

Dist. 28, which operates the River Road School where approximately 110 of the Maryville children attend classes, requested the release of state funds under a law passed by the legislature last year. The law allows a school district to request funds for a school building when a nonpublic school closes, resulting in an increased enrollment of five per cent or more to a public school district.

SUCH AN emergency occurred in Dist. 26 in 1968 when Catholic Charities announced it could no longer afford to educate the Maryville children, who are wards of the state. Dist. 26 is reimbursed by the state for "tuition" for the Maryville students.

One problem the district has had with the reimbursement, however, has been that it comes from six to 15 months after the district has paid out the money. Wednesday, Retzlaff went to Springfield to request legislation to speed up the process of reimbursement.

An amendment was added to House Bill 1790, sponsored by State Rep. Arthur Berman, D-Chicago, to provide for speedier reimbursement.

The bill has been approved by the Senate Education Committee. State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, co-sponsor of the bill, said he thought it would probably be considered on the floor of the Senate sometime next week. "I expect by Thursday or Friday of next week it will go to the governor," Schlickman said.

A turbulent weekend

Lightning kills boy, 14, at park

An Arlington Heights youth was killed Saturday by lightning as he stood beneath a tree to watch his older brother play baseball in Pioneer Park, near Park Street and Kennicott Avenue, Arlington Heights.

Daniel Druding, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent J. Druding Jr., 2343 S. Cedar Glen Ln., was struck in the back of the head by lightning, according to Arlington Heights Fire Department spokesmen. The boy was reported dead by fire and Arlington Heights police departments when they arrived at the scene at about noon.

The boy was reported to have gone to the park to play baseball with his team, but the threatening weather prevented the team from playing. Daniel then decided to watch his brother play and stood beneath a tree when heavy rains poured.

Daniel was graduated Friday from Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect. He was to attend St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights in the fall. Family members were preparing for his graduation surprise party Saturday morning after he left to play ball. Guests had begun to gather when police informed the family of the boy's death.

A coroner's inquest will be held at 10:30 a.m. today at Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, Arlington Heights.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Fire Department was alerted to several instances of power failures scattered throughout the village, a spokesman said. Power was restored "in a matter of minutes." Approximately 1 1/2 inches of rain fell between 11:20 a.m. and 3:40 p.m. Saturday, according to the fire department's rain gauge.

About three or four houses in Palatine were struck by lightning in Saturday's storms, according to Palatine police department. Damages in one of the houses resulted in a hole in the roof. Lightning also struck a tree and set it on fire. The Hoffman Estates Fire Department was called to quench the fire.

In Schaumburg, two houses were struck by lightning, knocking off some of the siding on one house, and scattering the shingles of the other.

Some power and telephone lines were severed, but were restored the same day.

The Elk Grove Village Police Department reported a number of false alarms were set off when high winds and fallen branches broke through windows in several buildings. The village fire department reported that lightning struck a transformer at 850 Arthur.

Lightning kills 14-year-old boy standing in park

An Arlington Heights youth was killed Saturday by lightning as he stood beneath a tree to watch his older brother play baseball in Pioneer Park, near Park Street and Kennicott Avenue, Arlington Heights.

Daniel Drudling, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent J. Drudling Jr., 2343 S. Cedar Glen Ln., was struck in the back of the head by lightning, according to Arlington Heights Fire Department spokesmen. The boy was reported dead by fire and Arlington Heights police departments when they arrived at the scene at about noon.

The boy was reported to have gone to the park to play baseball with his team, but the threatening weather prevented the team from playing. Daniel then decided to watch his brother play and stood beneath a tree when heavy rains poured.

Daniel was graduated Friday from Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect. He was to attend St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights in the fall. Family members were preparing for his graduation surprise party Saturday morning after he left to play ball. Guests had begun to gather when police informed the family of the boy's death.

A coroner's inquest will be held at 10:30 a.m. today at Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, Arlington Heights.

THE ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Fire Department was alerted to several instances of power failures scattered throughout the village, a spokesman said. Power was restored "in a matter of minutes." Approximately 1 1/2 inches of rain fell between 11:20 a.m. and 3:40 p.m. Saturday, according to the fire department's rain gauge.

About three or four houses in Palatine were struck by lightning in Saturday's storms, according to Palatine police department. Damages in one of the houses resulted in a hole in the roof. Lightning also struck a tree and set it on fire. The Hoffman Estates Fire Department was called to quench the fire.

In Schaumburg, two houses were struck by lightning, knocking off some of the siding on one house, and scattering the shingles of the other.

Some power and telephone lines were severed, but were restored the same day.

The Elk Grove Village Police Department reported a number of false alarms were set off when high winds and fallen branches broke through windows in several buildings. The village fire department reported that lightning struck a transformer at 850 Arthur.

Disposal service operator Laseke dies at 71

Henry W. Laseke, 71, long-time Arlington Heights resident and operator of the disposal service serving the village, died yesterday at Northwest Community Hospital following an extended illness.

Visitation will be conducted from 3:30 to 10 p.m. this evening at the Hairo Funeral Home, 207 N. Vail Ave., Arlington Heights. Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at Faith Lutheran Church in Arlington Heights.

Mr. Laseke had operated the disposal company since 1945. It was founded in 1927 by his father-in-law, A. M. Bunn.

Survivors include his widow, Cella (nee Bunn); one son, Henry E. Laseke, and daughter-in-law, Mary Jane; two daughters, Shirley (Mrs. Robert Service), and Judith (Mrs. Theodore Gastfield); three grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

A $25,000 BLAZE at the Pioneer Park Field House Friday is believed to have been started when a short-circuited electric fan fell into a container of waste paper. The fire broke out in a first-floor room of the building and was extinguished by the Arlington Heights Fire Department. There was no damage to the swimming pool and park district officials say Pioneer Park programs will continue. (Photo by Jay Needleman)

$25,000 blaze started in wastebasket

Short circuit blamed in fire at park

A short circuit in an electric fan is believed to be the cause of a fire that struck the Pioneer Park field house Friday afternoon.

Fire officials theorize the fire started when the fan toppled into a waste basket, igniting some waste paper.

The fire started and was centered in offices of Project Headstart's preschool program. The offices have been occupied by Headstart for over a year.

Ann Anderson, Headstart director, said she and another employee returned to the office after a ten-minute absence to discover the flaming waste basket.

She then alerted Mike Mikels, park director, who evacuated the building. More than 30 persons were inside at the time of the fire, including about eight elderly women in the basement arts and crafts room. There were no injuries.

ANGELO CAPULLI, parks superintendent, estimated the damage to the 16-year-old building at $30,000. He said repairs would take at least a month to complete.

According to Miss Anderson, the fan was in use Friday because the office air conditioner had not been operating properly. The air conditioner was not in use at the time of the fire, she said.

Other persons in the building said the Headstart offices were filled with papers, files and clothing stored in cardboard boxes.

"There were boxes all over the place. They were stacked on top of files and on the floor. They had more files than they had room for," said Mikels.

TWO PARK REGISTRARS, working in the next office, reported hearing a "pop and sizzle" minutes before the fire was discovered.

Although the fire was centered in the Headstart offices, the entire building received extensive smoke and water damage. The roof was chopped open by firemen in an effort to get at flames and hot spots in the wooden roof.

Firemen had to break windows throughout the building to hose down the other areas to keep the fire from spreading.

Capulli said park district records were rescued undamaged from the building.

Capulli said the swimming pool was not affected by the blaze and would operate with regular hours.

He said programs for the park would not be canceled but would require reorganization.

Township decides on uses for revenue-sharing funds

The Wheeling Township Board has decided to give its $96,000 revenue sharing funds to groups dealing with mental health. Two youth services, senior citizens and the environment, according to Ethel Kolerus, supervisor.

Board members tomorrow night will review the earmarking of potential projects in these three areas with the category of mental health receiving 62 per cent of the funds, senior citizens, 17 per cent and environment, 21 per cent.

After the review, the board will file a Planned Use report with the government on Wednesday. The report will indicate to government officials in what directions Wheeling Township is spending revenue sharing.

A quarter of this year's allocation, or $24,000 was received in early April by the township. Another $24,000 share will be given after the township has filed the report.

"We'll move ahead to start programs now," said Mrs. Kolerus.

COMMITTEES MADE up of Wheeling Township residents will be formed to investigate the various groups who are qualified to receive revenue sharing.

"They will suggest to the board what agencies we should consider," said Mrs. Kolerus. She said that agencies that will receive money will be determined by Aug. 15 or sooner. "By September, we must file another report, to show the actual spending of the funds," she said.

Mrs. Kolerus added that the board is going about choosing the programs "carefully" since the government could impose a 110 per cent penalty for improper use of or reporting of funds. Programs will be chosen under guidelines imposed by the government and will receive money for five years, the length of the federal revenue sharing program.

The board also plans to submit a supplementary report of last year's $96,000 revenue sharing to be used this year, although reports are not mandatory.

The federal revenue sharing program, proposed by President Nixon in early 1971, provides a small percentage of federal income tax receipts to state and local governments. It is a shift from the practice of rigidly allocated federal grants to states and municipalities for welfare, housing, hospitals and other programs. Localized governing bodies theoretically better understand its own needs.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

At quiet retreats more than 1,000 miles apart, Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nixon conferred yesterday with top aides on the eve of summit talks covering the breadth of Soviet-American relations from trade to disarmament. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, remained at Camp David. Nixon returned to Washington after spending the weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla.

White House Counsel John W. Dean has told Senate investigators he "assumed" President Nixon was aware of the Watergate cover-up within weeks of the bugging because he reported on it regularly to Nixon's two closest advisers, it was learned yesterday. But, sources close to the Senate probe, said Dean told investigators that he himself did not discuss aspects of the cover-up personally with the President until last March.

President Nixon, after months of virtual seclusion, is planning more public appearances to shore up confidence in his Watergate-shattered administration, White House aides indicated.

Led by sympathetic congressmen, about 8,000 persons rallied at the U.S. Capitol to protest Soviet treatment of Jews, urging their demonstration to coincide with final preparations for the Nixon-Brezhnev summit talks opening today.

The cities of the nation have become an "orphan" under the administration of President Nixon, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, host mayor for the 41st annual U.S. Conference of Mayors, said. He was one of six mayors to appear on "Meet the Press."

The Skylab astronauts received Father's Day greetings from President Nixon and he told them they proved "man still matters" in space. The Skylab crew is to return to earth Friday in their Apollo command ship after staying in orbit a record-shattering 28 days.

The world

Fighting between advancing Communists and government defenders south of Phnom Penh went into its second week with attacks at two towns only 13 miles from the Cambodian capital along Highway 4, a strategic supply route. The U.S. Command in Honolulu confirmed that American warplanes again flew support for the beleaguered government troops, as they have for 104 consecutive days.

A new Protestant terrorist organization, the Ulster Freedom Fighters, said it killed a Roman Catholic seaman, the third murder claimed by the group in two days as Northern Ireland's violence continues. The death toll now stands at 827 in almost four years of fighting.

A strong earthquake in the Pacific sent residents of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, scurrying from low-lying inland areas to escape a feared tidal wave that never came.

Their knowledge goes deeper than standard tests call for

New math confusing? Not for the students learning it

by BETTY LEE

A third-grade boy came to class one day with arithmetic papers in his hand and exclaimed to the teacher, "My dad showed me a short cut last night in division!"

The teacher looked at his papers and found that the boy's father had shown him how to do the problems the way he was taught 20 or 30 years ago.

"My dad said that this was easier," said the boy. "He didn't understand it our way."

Over the years myths about "new or modern" math have been generated, perhaps mostly by the parents whose children have asked them for help in doing homework.

The original new math program, which is now 10 to 12 years old, is radically different from the traditional methods, but schools in Dist. 25 have adopted the transitional new math program. Instead of pure rote or memorized learning, a little more of the "why" of math is taught.

WITH THAT statement, another myth evolves: children are taught more theory and not enough practical application. Not so, according to Ken Swanson, principal at Patton School in Arlington Heights.

"Parents don't see the traditional homework problems that they used to have and assume their kids are not getting enough application," he said. He pointed out that children are capable of learning more math and that they now have other varieties of application, such as arithmetic grids, which makes homework more like games rather than tedious problems.

Children, as early as those in kindergarten classes, begin to learn math, but not with numbers. Instead they learn to see quantities of things, and subsequently realize what numbers are.

For example, in textbooks, the beginning pages are illustrated with quantities of one-of-a-kind objects kids can identify. There are three birds, four cats or six squirrels. Beneath each picture, there is a number which designates the quantity of objects pictured.

"Everything's visual," said Swanson. "It's the easier way to learn than eight is more than one. The pictures show that."

CHILDREN IN Patton School have used Cuisenaire Rods, (different colored rods in increasing increments of 1 unit to 10 units.) "But you're way ahead of them when you start talking about numbers," said Swanson.

"First they feel its lengths for sizes," he said. "Those rods give a visual relationship of numbers because of their sizes."

When students have memorized the color of each length in proper progression, they assign a mathematical unit to them. These math units are simply the symbols for numbers one through ten.

"If you say to the child that one and one equals two, he doesn't know what one (the number) is," said Swanson. "But given a shape, like the proportional shapes in these rods, they see a size and a color they can relate to."

Learning to add can be taught at this point. They learn that two white rods, each denoting one unit, equals a red rod, which is two units long. The three-unit rod is green. They learn that a red rod, two units, and a white rod, one unit, placed side by side will equal the length of the green rod.

CONFUSED?

According to Swanson, the kids aren't. And for any parent who's skeptical about the effectiveness of this new math program, the students had scored the norm in standard achievement tests, he said.

"They can compete nationally in the knowledge of math very well," said Swanson. "But we find that their understanding of math goes even deeper than tests call for."

The textbooks used in the school are written in such a way that there are no cut-and-dry levels of material to be learned in a certain grade. A second-grader who learns faster can proceed on with a third-grade material, or if he is slower, can stick to second or even first-grade material.

"If a child starts at an early age, then this new math is not hard at all," said Swanson. "They see math in picture terms, not in abstract. Why this method wasn't used before, we don't know. I guess we didn't think kids could understand these things. They have a greater capacity than we think. They can handle it."

"But the biggest problem is the names that people give this math. There's nothing really different... you still learn that $2 + 2 = 4$. You just get a deeper understanding of what the rules are. Children are doing word problems better. They had to understand the rules before they can set up a problem."

Even if the child uses math just to balance his checkbook or follow a recipe, he still has to set up his problem, he added.

"The more knowledge he has of math, the better it will be for him," he said.

Corrado's files lawsuit on sewer disconnection

Corrado's Restaurant, 310 W. Rand Rd., has filed suit to stop the Village of Arlington Heights from disconnecting its sanitary sewer.

The restaurant was given until the end of June to either disconnect from the village sewer system or annex to the municipality.

The restaurant was allowed to tie on to Arlington Heights' sewer lines in June, 1971, with the understanding that the property would come into the village.

A series of stumbling blocks, including a late liquor license, prevented the village and Corrado's from reaching an annexation agreement.

As a result, on March 18 the village board told the restaurant's owner, Corrado Bursella, that he would have to disconnect the restaurant from the village sewer lines unless an annexation petition was filed within 90 days.

ONE OF THE major barriers to the restaurant's annexation was the village board's decision not to approve a 4 a.m. liquor license for Corrado's.

Corrado's currently operates with a 4 a.m. Cook County liquor license. Except for special licenses given Arlington Park Race Track, however, the village's latest license is 2 a.m.

Bursella told the village board that his late liquor license is responsible for a substantial part of his business.

The suit, filed in Cook County Circuit Court, asks that the village be stopped from disconnecting the sewer.

Bursella has "no means of disposing of the waste of his business other than utilizing the sewer owned and maintained by the defendant (the Village of Arlington Heights)," it states.

Connection to the Arlington Heights sewer became necessary in 1971 when the septic field behind the restaurant malfunctioned.

THE CASE has been assigned to Circuit Court Judge Nathan M. Cohen. No trial date has yet been established. While the case is pending, the sewer probably cannot be disconnected, according to Louis Prempas, a Chicago attorney for Corrado's.

To cut off the sewer now that the suit has been filed would indicate bad faith on the part of the village and could possibly lead to another lawsuit claiming damages to the restaurant, he said.

Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the sewer would not be disconnected while the lawsuit is pending.

Jamaica trip winners

A first-prize trip to Ocho Rios, Jamaica, was won by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brausch Jr., Arlington Heights, in a drawing recently sponsored by the First Arlington National Bank.

The contest was held to celebrate the grand opening of its "super drive-in." Other winners were William Schwantz, Arlington Heights, who received a second prize of a $300 savings bond and Mrs. Joan Eigel, Buffalo Grove who won a color television.

There were more than 7,000 entrants in the drawing.

Would pay for five counselors

Youth council seeks grant to halt disturbances in parks

The Arlington Heights Youth Council will request $9,100 from the village in an effort to curb youth disturbances in the parks this summer.

The money, should it be granted, would be used to hire five professional youth counselors to work at each of the major parks during peak periods of congregations by youths, according to Tom Martin, council chairman.

This proposed action would be the first united effort by the village, the parks and council to halt increasing youth-related incidents in the parks.

Under the proposal, the village would provide the funding for the council to hire the youth workers. The training would be in cooperation with the police juvenile division and the park safety coordinator, Roger Key.

KEY WOULD BE supervisor of the program, with the juvenile bureau acting in an advisory capacity.

Last summer there were numerous complaints to park district board members about bands of youths harassing children and older residents who tried to make use of the parks.

This year, increasing vandalism necessitated stationing of undercover security personnel in the parks after regular hours. Damage running into thousands of dollars has been reported this spring by the district.

Martin said he was acting on recommendations set forth by Village Pres. Jack Walsh in a joint meeting of the councils in May.

At that meeting, Walsh indicated the village stood by ready to help with specific proposals brought to it by the council.

WALSH SAID of the funding request, "I have no opposition to the concept of the counselors. However, I do have questions as to the propriety of funding what is essentially a park district matter. It is a question of economics."

He would not comment on what recommendation the finance committee might make on the proposal.

The village budget has been finalized since April, Walsh said, and it might prove difficult to free the necessary funds.

Thomas Thornton, park supervisor, said the counselors were "a good idea. This would certainly help us solve the problems."

The identity of a badly burned body found in the debris from a stable fire in Northbrook Friday still has not been determined, Cook County Coroner's office officials said yesterday.

Cook County Sheriff's Police, however, said the victim may be Ron Henderson, 21, an employee at the Coach House Stables and McGuinn Farms on Sanders and Palatine Roads. Police said Henderson lived at the stables and was last seen Thursday night.

Maj. Richard Lowthorp said police have obtained Henderson's dental and X-ray records to aid in the identification process. He said Henderson was last seen when friends dropped him off at the stables following a softball game.

A SCHAUMBURG man also was injured by horses fleeing the blaze. Wheeling police said the car driven by Michael O'Halloran, 1326 E. Algonquin Road, struck and killed two horses who darted out of the woods at Willow Road and Milwaukee Avenue.

O'Halloran was taken to Holy Family Hospital, in Des Plaines where he was treated for glass cuts and released. Police said the car was totally destroyed.

Wheeling Police Lt. Ronald Nelson said his department was kept busy Friday rounding up horses turned loose during the early morning blaze. He said his department began their roundup at 4:15 a.m., when the first request for help came over the police radio.

ABOUT 60 horses were turned loose to flee to safety during the blaze, which began shortly before 4 a.m. Cook County Sheriff's Police said loose horses were reported as far west as River Road and as far north as Dundee Road.

Nelson said all Wheeling police squads participated in fighting the blaze, which assisted in rounding up the stray horses. "We rounded up several of them in the forest preserve," he said. "And we had (horses) trailers coming in from other stables."

According to Nelson, Wheeling police made no effort to catch the horses. "We merely located them and kept them in sight until the vans came," he said.

Nelson said motorists in the area were warned to drive carefully and keep a close watch for the horses. He said the animals were spooky from the fire, and two or three had darted out of the woods without warning.

SEVERAL Cook County Sheriff's Police squad cars were damaged at the scene of the fire when horses released from the burning building stampeded the cars.

Firemen remained at the scene of the fire until late Friday afternoon, putting out hot spots and cooling the remains. No cause for the fire has yet been determined. Fire officials however, believe it may have been started by improper use of smoking materials.

Cook County Sheriff's Police said most of the stray horses had been rounded up by late Friday afternoon.
